1985 Statement of Intent: See compiler's comment under 37-4-401 concerning Ch. 449, L. 1985.

1983 Amendment: Inserted (5)(h) referring to copies of other state licenses; and in (6), inserted second sentence referring to jurisprudence examination.

1979 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent adopted with Ch. 337, L. 1979, provided: "A statement of intent is required for HB 233 because the bill amends sections 37-4-301, 37-4-402, and 37-4-406, MCA, to give the Board of Dentists rulemaking authority regarding examination and application procedures for dentists and dental hygienists. The following explains the intent of the Legislature regarding the rulemaking authority granted by this bill.

Sections 37-4-301 and 37-4-402 give the Board of Dentists the right to administer their own exams for dentists and hygienists, respectively. The rulemaking authority delegates power to the Board for making rules for running its own examinations. This is intended to be a continuation of existing authority, and rules now in effect may not have to be substantially revised.

In addition, section 37-4-301 gives the Board power to set the examination and licensure fees for dentists. These are to be "commensurate with cost" and it is intended that the Board publish data on the actual costs of examination in the notice of proposed rulemaking.

Sections 37-4-301 and 37-4-402, MCA, give the Board of Dentists the authority to make rules for application procedures for dentists and hygienists, respectively. It is intended that these rules would cover routine matters not provided for in the statute.

Sections 37-4-307 and 37-4-406, MCA, require licensed dentists and hygienists, respectively, to pay an annual renewal fee that is set by the Board. It is intended that these fees, as established through administrative rules, should not exceed during the next biennium, $20 to $25 for dentists and $10 for hygienists. These fees, as required by statute, are for the purpose of maintaining an emergency fund that is used for administering and enforcing the statutes relating to dentistry and dental hygiene. If, during the next biennium, some unforeseen, complex legal proceeding arises involving the Board, the fees intended for this biennium would be increased to defray such additional costs."

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 172 in middle of (1)(a) after "dentist" deleted "in a public or private institution, under a board of health, or in a public clinic authorized by the board"; inserted (1)(b) allowing dental hygienist to provide preventative services in public health facility under supervision of licensed dentist or under public health supervision; in (2) near middle before "supervision" inserted "direct supervision or general"; in (3) substituted "the following definitions apply" for ""supervision" is defined as follows" and inserted definitions of public health facility and public health supervision; inserted (4) providing criteria for when licensed dental hygienist may provide preventative services under public health supervision; inserted (5) requiring dental hygienist practicing under public health supervision to obtain limited access permit from board, requiring board to adopt rules, and limiting services provided under limited access permit to patients or residents of facilities or programs who are unable to receive regular dental care due to age, infirmity, disability, or financial constraints; inserted (6) allowing board to identify by rule additional public health facilities and programs where limited access permit services may be provided; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1991 Amendment: Near beginning of (1), after "hygienist", inserted "with the permission of the supervising dentist", near middle substituted "under the general supervision" for "but may not practice except under the direct personal supervision", and at end deleted "authorized by the board"; deleted former first sentence of (2) that read: "The board may, in lieu of the direct supervision requirement set forth in subsection (1), permit a licensed dental hygienist to provide clinical dental hygiene services to a public or private institution, a hospital or extended care facility, or a school or public health program after a review of a request for such service and a description of the type of supervision necessary is made by the board"; in (2)(a) substituted definition of direct supervision for former definition that read: "the supervision of those tasks and procedures that do not require the dentist in the room where performed but require his presence on the premises and availability for prompt consultation and treatment"; in (2)(b) substituted definition of general supervision for former definition that read: "those tasks and procedures that do not require the presence of a dentist on the premises but shall remain under the dentist's directive order, control, responsibility, and evaluation"; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this section, a dental hygienist may continue performing tasks and procedures requiring direct supervision if:

(a) the supervising dentist required to be on the premises has been called out of the office briefly for an emergency; and

(b) both the hygienist and the patient consent"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 66, L. 1991, provided: "The intent of the amendments to 37-4-404(2) [now repealed] is to permit the board of dentistry to establish, within the parameters set by statute, the number of practice hours required for licensure of dental hygienists by credentials.

The intent of the amendments to 37-4-405(1) is to ensure that, except for the administration of local anesthesia, it is up to the discretion of the supervising dentist and not the board to determine if a dental hygienist is to perform the duties referred to in Title 37, chapter 4, under general or direct supervision."

1981 Amendment: Added subsection (3) stating circumstances under which dental hygienist may practice without direct supervision those tasks and procedures that normally require supervision.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 467 deleted former (1) through (3) that read: "(1) Each licensed dental hygienist shall pay a renewal fee to the board. The renewal fee must be set by the board commensurate with costs.

(2) Payment of the renewal fee must be made on or before the license expiration date set by department rule, and a license renewal must be issued by the department. A reasonable late fee must be required if the renewal fee is not paid in a timely manner.

(3) Except as provided in 37-1-138, in case of default in payment of the renewal fee by any licensee, the licensee shall forfeit the license.

(a) The board shall give the licensee 30 days' notice of its proposed forfeiture action. The notice must be sent by certified mail to the last-known address of the licensee and must contain a statement of the time and place of the meeting at which the forfeiture will be considered.

(b) The payment of the renewal fee on or before the time set for forfeiture, with a reasonable late fee set by the board, excuses the default.

(c) A license forfeited for nonpayment of the renewal fee may be reinstated within 5 years of forfeiture if:

(i) renewal fees are paid for each period that they were unpaid, plus a late penalty for each period;

(ii) the applicant produces evidence, satisfactory to the board, of good standing with the dental hygiene regulatory agencies of any jurisdiction in which the applicant has engaged in the active practice of dental hygiene since the last payment of a renewal fee under this chapter; and

(iii) the applicant produces evidence, satisfactory to the board, of good character and competence"; in (1) after "within" substituted "10" for "30"; deleted former (5) that read: "(5) The board may, after a hearing, revoke or suspend the license of a dental hygienist for violating this chapter"; and made minor changes in style. 1999 Amendment: Chapter 230 in (3) substituted "licensee shall forfeit" for "board must revoke"; and in first and second sentences in (3)(a), in (3)(b), and in (3)(c) substituted "forfeiture" for "revocation"; in (3)(c) substituted "forfeited" for "revoked"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (1), in first sentence after "shall pay", deleted "each year"; in (2), in first and second sentences before "renewal fee", deleted "annual" and in first sentence, near middle, inserted "license expiration"; in (3)(c)(i), in two places, substituted "period" for "year"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted third sentence in (1) that read: "The renewal must be for either active or inactive status, as defined by rules of the board"; in (2), in first sentence, substituted "made on or before the date set by department rule" for "made prior to March 1 of each year" and at end of second sentence substituted "not timely paid" for "not paid before March 1"; deleted former (3) and (4) that read: "(3) The board may adopt rules governing requirements for demonstrating continued competency for license renewal.

(4) (a) The board may reclassify an active status license to inactive status for a licensee who furnishes satisfactory evidence that the licensee has discontinued the actual practice of dental hygiene because of physical disability or retirement.

(b) An individual who wishes to maintain a Montana license but does not maintain a resident practice must be licensed in the inactive status.

(c) Application to convert an inactive status license to an active status license must be made in accordance with rules of the board. The application to convert to active status must accompany the submission of the renewal fee prescribed for such license. If more than 1 year has passed since the license was inactivated, satisfactory evidence of competence must be submitted to the board before an active status license may be issued"; and made minor changes in style.

Saving Clause: Section 132, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1983 Amendment: Substantially revised and enlarged section (see 1983 Session Law). Text formerly read: "(1) Before March 1 of each year, a licensed dental hygienist shall pay to the department a renewal fee set by the board. In default of payment, the board may, after hearing and on 30 days' notice, revoke the license of the hygienist in default; but the payment of the renewal fee on or before the time of hearing, with an additional sum set by the board excuses the default. The department may collect the fee by suit.

(2) The board may likewise revoke or suspend the license of a dental hygienist for violating this chapter."

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 349, L. 1983, provided in part: "Sections 4 and 8 [amending 37-4-307 and 37-4-406] give the Board the authority to adopt rules imposing a demonstration of continued competency for license renewal. The Board is not required to adopt such rules. It is contemplated that a study will be conducted to review other existing program designs in determining a viable means of demonstrating continued competency."

1981 Amendment: Deleted ", not to exceed $25" after "a renewal fee set by the board" in the first sentence of (1); and deleted ", not to exceed $10," after "an additional sum set by the board" in the second sentence of (1).

Fees Prescribed by Board — 1981 Statement of Intent and Preamble: Chapter 345, L. 1981 (SB 412), which amended this section relating to the Board prescribing fees, contained a statement of intent and a preamble. For the texts see compiler's comments at 37-1-134.

1979 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent adopted with Ch. 337, L. 1979, provided: "A statement of intent is required for HB 233 because the bill amends sections 37-4-301, 37-4-402, and 37-4-406, MCA, to give the Board of Dentists rulemaking authority regarding examination and application procedures for dentists and dental hygienists. The following explains the intent of the Legislature regarding the rulemaking authority granted by this bill.

Sections 37-4-301 and 37-4-402 give the Board of Dentists the right to administer their own exams for dentists and hygienists, respectively. The rulemaking authority delegates power to the Board for making rules for running its own examinations. This is intended to be a continuation of existing authority, and rules now in effect may not have to be substantially revised.

In addition, section 37-4-301 gives the Board power to set the examination and licensure fees for dentists. These are to be "commensurate with cost" and it is intended that the Board publish data on the actual costs of examination in the notice of proposed rulemaking.

Sections 37-4-301 and 37-4-402, MCA, give the Board of Dentists the authority to make rules for application procedures for dentists and hygienists, respectively. It is intended that these rules would cover routine matters not provided for in the statute.

Sections 37-4-307 and 37-4-406, MCA, require licensed dentists and hygienists, respectively, to pay an annual renewal fee that is set by the Board. It is intended that these fees, as established through administrative rules, should not exceed during the next biennium, $20 to $25 for dentists and $10 for hygienists. These fees, as required by statute, are for the purpose of maintaining an emergency fund that is used for administering and enforcing the statutes relating to dentistry and dental hygiene. If, during the next biennium, some unforeseen, complex legal proceeding arises involving the Board, the fees intended for this biennium would be increased to defray such additional costs."

governing hospital staffing (42 CFR 405 subpart J). If the federal regulations do not prohibit a hospital from authorizing an oral surgeon to take patient histories and perform physical examinations, no action by the department is contemplated. Because the federal regulations are ambiguous, the department may make appropriate changes in its rules if necessary to administer this act.

If the applicant fails without cause to appear at the hearing or if the board determines that the applicant is not entitled to a license, the board shall deny, revoke, or refuse to renew the applicant's license"; in (2) substituted "department" for "board"; at beginning of second sentence in (3) inserted "Upon order of the board" and deleted fourth and fifth sentences that read: "If the board has reasonable cause to believe that the alleged conditions exist or that the alleged offenses were committed, the department shall mail to the person at his last-known address a specification of the charges against him, together with a written notice of the time and place of the hearing on such charges, advising him that he may be present in person and by counsel if he so desires to offer evidence and be heard in his defense.

The time fixed for the hearing may not be less than 30 days from the date of mailing the notice"; deleted (4) through (7) that read: "(4) A person, including a member of the board, may file a written complaint with the department against a person having a license to practice podiatry in this state charging him with the commission of any of the offenses set forth in 37-6-310 or with any of the offenses or conditions set forth in subsection (1) or (2) of this section. The complaint shall set forth a specification of the charges. When the complaint is filed, the department shall mail a copy to the person complained against, at his last-known address, together with a written citation of the time and place of the hearing on the complaint.

(5) At the hearing the board shall adopt a resolution finding the person complained against guilty or not guilty of the matters charged. (7) On the expiration of the term of suspension, the licensee shall be reinstated by the board if he furnishes the board with evidence that he is then of good moral character and conduct or restored to good health and that he has not practiced podiatry in this state during the term of suspension. If the evidence fails to establish to the satisfaction of the board that the holder is then of good moral character and conduct or restored to good health or if the evidence shows he has practiced podiatry in this state during the term of suspension, the board shall revoke the license at a hearing held in accordance with the notice and procedure provided in subsection (1). The revocation is final"; and made minor changes in style.

This bill is proposed solely to bring Montana standards on licensing wholesale drug distributors into compliance with rules of the federal food and drug administration (FDA). Unless state law complies with FDA requirements by September 1992, federal law would prohibit the distribution of drugs by manufacturers and wholesalers in Montana. In adopting administrative rules, the department of commerce [now department of labor and industry] shall implement the federal Prescription Drug Marketing Act of 1987 as well as guidelines developed by the FDA."

House Bill 422 defines the offense of criminal possession of precursors to certain dangerous drugs. The bill provides that its provisions do not apply to those persons or businesses which have a legitimate reason for possessing the precursors. It is possible that certain persons, businesses or research facilities may now or at a later date have a legitimate need for these precursors. The purpose for giving rulemaking authority to the Board of Pharmacy is that it can best determine whether a person, business or research facility has a legitimate need for the precursors. It will also alleviate having to amend the statute in future sessions if it appears that someone is entitled to be exempted from the criminal provisions of the statute."

Person Engaged in Acts Constituting Practice of Pharmacy Subject to Board Regulation and Injunctive Order: The defendant argued that he was not subject to regulation by the board of pharmacy with respect to his business, which was engaged in obtaining out-of-state drugs from unlicensed drug companies for individuals in Montana. The Supreme Court denied the defendant's motion for summary judgment and upheld the lower court's summary judgment in favor of the board, stating that engaging in acts that constitute the practice of pharmacy makes one subject to the board's regulatory powers and subject to injunctive orders. Case Notes

Constitutionality: In prosecution of grocer for selling aspirin without a license, this section was held unconstitutional insofar as it limited to pharmacists the right to sell drugs in manufacturers' original packages. Since the law absolved pharmacists from all responsibility as to purity, strength, and quality of such drugs, restriction of sales to pharmacists did not tend to protect or preserve the public health and hence the act was not a valid exercise of police power. St. v. Stephens, 102 M 414, 59 P2d 54 (1936).

Practice of Pharmacy Proper Subject of Regulation: The practice of pharmacy is a proper subject for police regulation. Johnson v. Great Falls, 38 M 369, 99 P 1059 (1909).

The fee for registration by reciprocity shall be prescribed by the board"; and made minor changes in style.

It is intended that the Board will approve those standards which are at least equivalent to the minimum standards required by the American Council on Pharmaceutical Education. The American Council on Pharmaceutical Education operates as an independent organization, but is recognized by the United States Commissioner of Education, the Department of Health and Human Services, and the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation."

SB 412 was approved April 15, 1981. As required by this instruction, "The fee for registration by reciprocity shall be prescribed by the board." was substituted in codification for the sentence "The fee for registration by reciprocity is $200." as amended into 37-7-302(4). (Note that such replacement sentence was taken from the amendment to former subsection (3) of 37-7-302 by sec. 15, Ch. 345, L. 1981 (SB 412).)

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

Case Notes

Denial of License — Interest of Physicians in Pharmacy: Where Board of Pharmacists (now Board of Pharmacy) refused to grant license to operate pharmacy on sole ground that building corporation owned by physicians owned 97% of capital stock of applicant, Board was acting beyond its authority as provided by Title 37, ch. 7, since nowhere in the statutes is there any indication, express or implied, of legislative policy to exclude physicians from ownership of pharmacies. Because there is neither grant of power to Board to deny license on basis of ownership by physicians nor a legislative policy to exclude them from ownership, the Board has no authority to do so; furthermore, 37-7-103 indicates an express legislative policy contrary to Board's action in denying license. Missoula Clinic Pharmacy v. Zimmerman, 153 M 103, 454 P2d 619 (1969).

Sale of Unlabeled Drugs — Suspension for Sale: A pharmacy license may be suspended for a single sale of unlabeled drugs in violation of 37-7-504. W. Drug of Great Falls v. Gosman, 141 M 8, 374 P2d 507 (1962).

Case Notes

Section Unconstitutional: Since a store can sell ordinary household or medicinal drugs under 37-7-103 and 37-7-321, it cannot be deprived of use of word "drug" in advertisement under this section (prior to 1977 amendment) since the law makes no requirement that the registered pharmacist who may use the name "drug" and sell the drugs make any analysis, inspection, or examination of the drug to be passed on by him to the purchasing public. Pike v. Porter, 126 M 482, 253 P2d 1055 (1952).

Unreasonable Classification as Unconstitutional: The provision excluding those who are not registered pharmacists from use of word "drug" (prior to 1977 amendment) in advertising household drugs bears no reasonable relationship to protection of human life, health, or safety but merely discriminates in favor of a certain class and is unconstitutional. Pike v. Porter, 126 M 482, 253 P2d 1055 (1952).

Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

Amendment effective March 28, 1995.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 274, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because the bill gives the board of pharmacy authority to adopt administrative rules for the registration of out-of-state mail service pharmacies.

NURSING

Chapter Administrative Rules

Title 24, chapter 159, ARM Board of Nursing.

Chapter Case Notes

Crime of Sexual Assault as Unprofessional Conduct and Crime Relating to Public Health, Welfare, and Safety — Lack of Rehabilitation: Gilpin was convicted of two counts of sexual assault. After his nursing license was revoked, Gilpin appealed, claiming that there was insufficient connection between the reason for his criminal conviction and the practice of nursing to warrant revocation of the license. The Supreme Court affirmed the hearing examiner's finding that the sexual assaults related to the public health, welfare, and safety and that Gilpin was guilty of unprofessional conduct. Gilpin v. Bd. of Nursing, 254 M 308, 837 P2d 1342, 49 St. Rep. 831 (1992), overruled in Erickson v. St., 282 M 367, 938 P2d 625, 54 St. Rep. 395 (1997).

The legislature intends that the board of nursing adopt rules that would regulate the situations in which a licensed nurse may delegate tasks to an unlicensed person. This rulemaking authority is necessary in order to distinguish between situations in the nursing practice when it is appropriate to delegate tasks, on the one hand, and situations when delegation is inappropriate due to the nature of the task under consideration. It is not intended that the board of nursing regulate the unlicensed individuals themselves."

At a minimum, it is intended that the rules address:

(1) criteria for granting prescriptive authority to an applicant for recognition as a nurse specialist who requests prescriptive authority as a condition of practice;

(2) a procedure for granting prescriptive authority to nurse specialists already recognized by the board on July 1, 1989, upon request of the nurse specialist;

(3) a process to notify the board of pharmacy when prescriptive authority is granted to a nurse specialist;

(4) continuing education requirements for nurse specialists who are granted prescriptive authority, with respect to the use of medical therapeutics in the area of practice; and

(5) appropriateness of the authority to prescribe specific drugs based on the nurse's area of specialty."

1981 Amendment: Completely rewritten. For former text, see sec. 2, Ch. 180, L. 1975.

1981 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 427 (Ch. 248, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the Board of Nursing in sections 7, 8, 10, 14, 16, and 19. Section 7 allows the board of nursing to approve certain programs related to registration and licensure and the section also permits the board to define the educational requirements and other qualifications applicable to specialty areas of nursing. It is the intent of the legislature that the rules adopted by the board pursuant to these delegations of rulemaking power be sufficient to ensure the competency of those practicing nursing in Montana. Program approval rules are intended to be as described in the following paragraph. Rules concerning specialty areas should address the overall nature of the required courses, the approval of such courses through American Nurses' Association certification or by other means, and the prohibition of the use of a title indicating a nursing specialty by a person not approved by the board as such a specialist. . . ."

Case Notes

Amendment to Board of Nursing Rule Not Redefining or Expanding Scope of Practice of Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetists — No MAPA Violation in Adoption of Rule: Plaintiffs asserted that the Board of Nursing improperly revised ARM 8.32.303 regarding the scope of practice of certified registered nurse anesthetists (CRNAs) and violated provisions of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA) regarding an inadequate statement of reasonable necessity and improper notice. The Supreme Court disagreed. The notice for the rule in question stated that amendments would address the independent practice of CRNAs, but the actual amendment merely clarified existing CRNA practice and dealt with prescriptive authority. Nevertheless, even though the Board of Nursing did not fully comply with the requirement for a statement of necessity reflecting the proposed amendment, the Board substantially complied by putting the public on notice of the proposed amendment and permitting observation of and participation in the amendment process. Plaintiffs had notice of the proposed amendment and actively participated in the process by attending the public hearing and voicing their opposition to the amendment. Thus, the District Court did not err in holding that the amendments to ARM 8.32.303 did not redefine or expand the scope of practice of CRNAs or violate MAPA. Mont. Soc'y of Anesthesiologists v. Bd. of Nursing, 2007 MT 290, 339 M 472, 171 P3d 704 (2007).

Attorney General's Opinions

Board of Nursing — No Authority to Require College Degree for Licensure: The Legislature did not intend to require nursing license applicants to hold a specific college degree, as is evidenced by the fact that the Legislature did not set forth this requirement in statute as it did for other license qualifications statutes, and by the fact it permits nursing educational programs to be located in educational institutions which could not confer the minimum proposed degrees. Therefore, the Board of Nursing does not have authority to adopt a rule requiring a specific college degree as a qualification for licensure. 41 A.G. Op. 23 (1985).

Board of Nursing — Authority Over Nursing — Related Subjects: The Board of Nursing lacks authority to require approval of schools and courses which teach nursing-related subjects but which do not prepare students for licensure as registered or licensed practical nurses. 38 A.G. Op. 24 (1979).

37-8-203. Compensation of members — expenses.

Compiler's Comments

1981 Amendment: Substituted "receive compensation" for "be paid mileage"; and substituted "37-1-133" for "2-18-501 through 2-18-503 and, in addition, $25 per day for each day actually engaged in the discharge of duties under this chapter, including the time spent in actual attendance at a meeting of the board and in direct travel to and from meetings and a reasonable number of days for the preparation and administration of examinations".

Board Compensation and Travel Expenses — Preamble: The preamble of SB 463 (Ch. 474, L. 1981), which provided for uniform compensation and travel expenses for Board members, is located in the compiler's comments under 37-1-133.

37-8-204. Executive director.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 467 inserted (2) establishing qualifications for the executive director; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 492 deleted former (2) that read: "(2) The executive director must be:

(a) a citizen of the United States;

(b) a graduate of an approved school of nursing;

(c) a holder of at least a master's degree with postgraduate courses in nursing;

(d) a registered professional nurse with at least 5 years' experience in teaching or administration in an approved school of nursing"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 584 in (1), at beginning, substituted "The department shall hire an executive director" for "Any secretary hired by the department"; at end of (1)(c) deleted "for the board shall be"; inserted introductory clause of (2) concerning executive director; and made minor changes in style.

1981 Amendment: Deleted "shall first be approved by the board and" before "shall be" at the end of the introductory clause.

37-8-301. Nursing education programs — application for approval.

Compiler's Comments

1981 Amendment: Substituted "nursing education program in the state" for "school of professional or practical nursing" in the first sentence; substituted the language in first sentence following "submit evidence that" for former subsections (1) and (2) that required evidence that a nursing school "is prepared to carry out the prescribed basic professional nursing curriculum or the prescribed curriculum for practical nursing, as the case may be; and it is prepared to meet other standards established by this law and by the board".

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 427 (Ch. 248, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the Board of Nursing in sections 7, 8, 10, 14, 16, and 19. . . . Section 8 grants the Board authority to adopt rules relating to the conduct of nursing education programs. It is the intent of the Legislature that the rules adopted relate directly toward the nursing education programs insuring that the qualifications of a professional nurse or a practical nurse are adequate in the areas of services to be provided specified in section 4. . . ."

37-8-302. Nursing education programs — survey and approval.

Compiler's Comments

1981 Amendment: Completely rewritten (see 1981 Session Law). Former section read: "Schools of nursing — survey and approval. (1) A survey of the school and institution or institutions with which the school is to be affiliated shall be made by the department, which shall submit a detailed written report of the survey to the board. If, in the opinion of the board, the requirements for an approved school of nursing (professional or practical) are met, it shall approve the school as an approved school of nursing.

(2) When the board determines that an approved school of nursing is not maintaining the standards required by law and by the board, notice in writing specifying the defect shall be immediately given to the school. A school which fails to correct these conditions to the satisfaction of the board within a reasonable time shall be removed from the list of approved schools of nursing."

Title 24, chapter 159, subchapter 12, ARM Registered nurses.

Case Notes

District Court Reversal of Board of Nursing Decision Upheld: White was refused licensing by endorsement under 37-8-417 (now repealed) by the Board of Nursing (Board) because although he was licensed as a practical nurse by New York State, he had not graduated from a practical nursing school. Instead, as is permitted in New York, he had taken the licensed practical nurse examination after completion of a substantial portion of a registered nursing program. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's ruling that the Board must issue the license. The Board's interpretation of 37-8-415 is hypertechnical. Section 37-8-415 should be interpreted to mean the applicant's education has been approved and authorized by the state in which he has been licensed. Further, the Board's interpretation defeats the intention of the Legislature as expressed in 37-8-101(2). In re White, 220 M 36, 712 P2d 1344, 43 St. Rep. 151 (1986).

Attorney General's Opinions

Board of Nursing — No Authority to Require College Degree for Licensure: The Legislature did not intend to require nursing license applicants to hold a specific college degree, as is evidenced by the fact that the Legislature did not set forth this requirement in statute as it did for other license qualifications statutes, and by the fact it permits nursing educational programs to be located in educational institutions which could not confer the minimum proposed degrees. Therefore, the Board of Nursing does not have authority to adopt a rule requiring a specific college degree as a qualification for licensure. 41 A.G. Op. 23 (1985).

37-8-406. License — professional nursing — examination.

Compiler's Comments

1981 Amendments: Chapter 248 completely rewrote the section (see 1981 Session Law). Former section read: "Professional nursing — examination — fee. An applicant for a license to practice professional nursing is required to pass a written examination in subjects the board, acting under the professional nursing administration, determines. A written examination may be supplemented by an oral or practical examination. On successfully passing the examination, the department shall issue to the applicant a license to practice nursing as a registered professional nurse. The applicant shall pay a fee of $35 at the time the application is submitted, which shall be returned to the applicant if the application is withdrawn not later than 5 days prior to the date of examination or if the examination is not taken, subject to deduction by the department of $1 per subject of the examination which shall be retained by the department."

Chapter 345 substituted "shall pay a fee prescribed by the board" for "shall pay a fee of $35" near the beginning of the fourth sentence of the former section; and substituted "subject to deduction by the department of an amount prescribed by the board" for "subject to deduction by the department of $1" near the end of the last sentence of the former section.

Composite Section: The amendment by Ch. 345, L. 1981, substituting fee-setting authority in the board for statutory application fee amounts was not codified because Ch. 248, L. 1981, amended this section by deleting all reference to application fees.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 427 (Ch. 248, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it delegates rulemaking authority to the Board of Nursing in sections 7, 8, 10, 14, 16, and 19. . . . Sections 10 and 14 grant rulemaking authority to the Board to establish passing scores for the professional and practical nurse examinations and establish requirements for rewriting the examination. It is the intent of the Legislature that the examination scores established be such as to insure the competency of applicants for licensure to protect the public health. 1995 Amendments — Coordination: Section 2, Ch. 422, amended this section, and sec. 3, Ch. 422, was a coordination instruction coordinating the amendment with House Bill No. 518 (Ch. 429, L. 1995). Because the coordination instruction overrides the amendment by sec. 2, the amendments made by sec. 3 are reported: in (1), in first sentence, substituted "this chapter" for "37-8-406 or 37-8-407", after "certificate in" substituted "a field of advanced practice registered nursing" for "nurse midwifery from the American college of nurse midwives", substituted "in the specified field of advanced practice registered nursing" for "midwifery", and at end of first sentence and in middle of second sentence substituted "in a field of advanced practice registered nursing" for "of nurse midwifery" and near middle of second sentence substituted "a board-approved national certifying body appropriate to the specific field of advanced practice registered nursing" for "the American college of nurse midwives"; in (2), after "practice", substituted "in a specific field of advanced practice registered nursing" for "nurse midwifery for up to 4 months" and at end deleted "has taken the American college of nurse midwives"; inserted (2)(a) concerning intent to apply for approval; in (2)(b), at beginning, inserted "has completed the advanced practice registered nursing education required in order for the person to apply to take the first" and at end substituted "available from a board-approved national certifying body appropriate to the specific field of advanced practice registered nursing" for "pending receipt of official notification of the results of the examination"; inserted (3) concerning failure of first examination; inserted (4) concerning adoption of rules for each field of advanced practice; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 13, 1995.

Chapter 429 in (1) substituted "licensed under this chapter" for "licensed under 37-8-406 or 37-8-407"; deleted (2) that read: "(2) The board may give temporary approval to practice nurse-midwifery for up to 4 months to a person who has taken the American college of nurse-midwives national certification examination, pending receipt of official notification of the results of the examination"; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 422, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it grants rulemaking authority to the board of nursing to give temporary approval and to establish requirements for temporary approval to practice in a field of advanced practice registered nursing. The legislature finds that it is in the public interest to give temporary approval to practice to a person who has completed the advanced practice registered nursing education required in order for the person to apply to take a national certification examination. In order to protect the public, the board of nursing is authorized to make rules regarding the procedures for obtaining temporary approval to practice in each field of advanced practice registered nursing and for the supervision of the nurse. Because the practices of nurse practitioners, nurse-midwives, nurse anesthetists, and clinical nurse specialists are unique, the board may adopt separate requirements for each specialty as necessary and shall consult with practitioners in each field in the development of the rules."

Severability: Section 131, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 132, Ch. 429, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

Applicability: Section 133, Ch. 429, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to licenses applied for, complaints submitted, and proceedings begun after [the effective date of this section]." Effective October 1, 1995.

Case Notes

Amendment to Board of Nursing Rule Not Redefining or Expanding Scope of Practice of Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetists — No MAPA Violation in Adoption of Rule: Plaintiffs asserted that the Board of Nursing improperly revised ARM 8.32.303 regarding the scope of practice of certified registered nurse anesthetists (CRNAs) and violated provisions of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA) regarding an inadequate statement of reasonable necessity and improper notice. The Supreme Court disagreed. The notice for the rule in question stated that amendments would address the independent practice of CRNAs, but the actual amendment merely clarified existing CRNA practice and dealt with prescriptive authority. Nevertheless, even though the Board of Nursing did not fully comply with the requirement for a statement of necessity reflecting the proposed amendment, the Board substantially complied by putting the public on notice of the proposed amendment and permitting observation of and participation in the amendment process. Plaintiffs had notice of the proposed amendment and actively participated in the process by attending the public hearing and voicing their opposition to the amendment. Thus, the District Court did not err in holding that the amendments to ARM 8.32.303 did not redefine or expand the scope of practice of CRNAs or violate MAPA. Mont. Soc'y of Anesthesiologists v. Case Notes

Jurisdiction Over Lapsed License: In 1987, Gilpin was convicted on two counts of sexual assault. In 1990, Gilpin's nursing license lapsed for failure to renew. In 1990, the Board of Nursing sought to revoke Gilpin's nursing license. The parties submitted an agreed statement of facts to a hearing examiner who submitted findings, conclusions, and a recommendation to the Board. The Board heard Gilpin's objections orally and in writing, adopted the hearing examiner's recommendations, and revoked the license. Gilpin then appealed to the District Court, which heard the parties' arguments and issued an order affirming the revocation of the license. The Supreme Court held that because the Board has power to reinstate a nursing license 3 years after it lapses, the Board retains jurisdiction over a license 3 years after it lapses. Thus, the Board did not lose jurisdiction over Gilpin's license and had jurisdiction to revoke the license. The Supreme Court also held that the stipulation of facts was a sufficient factual basis to revoke the license and that Gilpin was not entitled to any hearings in addition to those that he was given. 1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 464, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill to clarify the extension of existing authority to make rules on the subject of the provisions of this act.

It is the intent of this legislature that the board of nursing home administrators adopt rules governing the qualifications for licensure as a nursing home administrator, which qualifications are reasonably related to the performance of the functions normally carried out by those serving as nursing home administrators.

Any course of instruction, training, or education prescribed by the board should be related to the performance of the functions normally carried out by those employed as nursing home administrators and the protection of patients cared for in nursing homes.

It is also the intent of the legislature that the board not require a baccalaureate degree unless the federal government mandates such a degree for purposes of the state receiving federal financial participation for medicare.

The intent of the legislature is not to exclude qualified individuals because they do not meet an arbitrary standard that does not bear a strong relationship to expected job performance, but to exclude only those who are truly unqualified in the judgment of the board. The legislature intends that the written examination provided for in subsection (1)(c) of [the act] [37-9-301(1)(c)] provides additional protection to the public in screening out unqualified candidates."

Grandfather Clause — Education Requirements Waived for License Renewals: Section 2, Ch. 464, L. 1989, provided: "A person licensed as a nursing home administrator on [the effective date of this act] does not have to present evidence satisfactory to the board of sufficient education as required by 37-9-301(1)(b)(ii) in order to renew his license as a nursing home administrator." Attorney General's Opinions

Occupational Therapist Not Authorized to Use Iontophoresis: Iontophoresis is a process that uses electricity to administer topical medication. The statutes governing the practice of physical therapy define topical medication and iontophoresis and authorize its use by physical therapists, but the statutes governing the practice of occupational therapy do not contain those definitions or authorize the use of topical medications, including medications administered through iontophoresis, by occupational therapists. If the Legislature had intended to authorize occupational therapists to use iontophoresis, it would have made an authorization corollary to the statutes governing physical therapists, but it did not. Therefore, occupational therapists are not authorized by Montana law to perform iontophoresis. 49 A.G. Op. 1 (2001).

Examination and Diagnosis of Physical Handicaps by Physical Therapists: A physical therapist (prior to 1981 amendment of 37-11-104) may not act as a consultant in evaluating and diagnosing physical handicaps of any person unless acting at the request and direction of a licensed physician. 38 A.G. Op. 9 (1979).

Case Notes

Failure to Provide Notice of Child Abuse Substantiation Hearing Not Affecting Employment as Physical Therapy Assistant — No Prejudice to Substantial Rights: When Dowell applied to work at a day-care center, the Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS) denied the request, without a substantiation hearing, based on Dowell's previous child abuse and neglect proceedings. The District Court affirmed. On appeal, Dowell contended that the DPHHS's failure to provide her with timely notice prejudiced her constitutional right to subsequent employment as a physical therapy assistant. Under 2-4-704, judicial review of an agency decision must be confined to the record that was brought before the agency. Implications on licensure as a physical therapist are determined by the Board of Physical Therapists, not the DPHHS, and Dowell provided no evidence that the substantiation determination by the DPHHS impacted employment as a physical therapist, so Dowell's substantial rights were not affected. The District Court was affirmed. Dowell v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2006 MT 55, 331 M 305, 132 P3d 520 (2006).

Statute Not Unconstitutionally Vague: The definition of practice of chiropractic in this section is not unconstitutionally vague in violation of the Due Process Clause. The term "specific adjustment or manipulation" is a scientific term having a readily ascertainable definition within the chiropractic community and provides a standard with meaningful differentiation between culpable and innocent conduct. Defendant, as a chiropractor licensed in two states, cannot assert lack of notice of the meaning of the terms. St. v. Blinzler, 183 M 300, 599 P2d 349, 36 St. Rep. 1580 (1979).

Chiropractor Barred From Testifying as to Impairment Rating: Public policy suggests that only qualified physicians, but not chiropractors, should be allowed to render opinions on impairment ratings based on the American Medical Association's Guides to Evaluation of Permanent Impairment. Restricting use of the guides in this way ensures reliable, authoritative opinions on which juries can depend in making their determinations. Wacker v. Park Rural Elec. Co-op, Inc., 239 M 500, 783 P2d 360, 46 St. Rep. 1864 (1989).

Title 24, chapter 126, subchapter 5, ARM Licensing and scope of practice.

37-12-301. Unlawful to practice without license.

Case Notes

Failure of Licensing Board to Overcome Presumption That License Renewal Timely Mailed and Received: Dr. Baldwin's chiropractor license renewal was due September 1, and the renewal packet was mailed to the Board of Chiropractors on August 17, but the Board never received it. After seeing two patients on September 2, the doctor called the Board to inquire whether the license had been reissued. The doctor was instructed to stop seeing patients because the license had not been renewed. The doctor was subsequently found to have engaged in unprofessional conduct for practicing without a license and placed on probation for 1 year, and a private letter of reprimand was placed in the doctor's license file. The doctor appealed the decision, but the District Court denied the request to reverse the decision. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The Board did not dispute that the packet was mailed on August 17, but simply asserted that the packet was not received without offering any additional evidence of nonreceipt. Absent additional evidence, the Board failed to overcome the rebuttable presumption in 26-1-602(24) that a letter duly directed and mailed was received in the regular course of the mail. The District Court erred in affirming the Board's decision that the doctor failed to renew the license on time and practiced without a license. Baldwin v. Bd. of Chiropractors, 2003 MT 306, 318 M 188, 79 P3d 810 (2003).

State of Mind Required for Conviction: Although no particular mental state is identified in this section, 45-2-103 clearly requires the practice of chiropractic be done knowingly or purposely to constitute an offense. St. v. Blinzler, 183 M 300, 599 P2d 349, 36 St. Rep. 1580 (1979).

Statute Not Unconstitutionally Vague: The definition of practice of chiropractic in 37-12-101 is not unconstitutionally vague in violation of the Due Process Clause. The term "specific adjustment or manipulation" is a scientific term having a readily ascertainable definition within the chiropractic community and provides a standard with meaningful differentiation between culpable and innocent conduct. Defendant, as a chiropractor licensed in two states, cannot assert lack of notice of the meaning of the terms. St. v. Blinzler, 183 M 300, 599 P2d 349, 36 St. Rep. 1580 (1979).

Sufficiency of Evidence to Prove Practice of Chiropractic: Evidence that defendant had placed his knee on a patient's rib and then pulled her arms back and had placed another patient lying on his stomach and then pushed down on his back, combined with the testimony of two licensed chiropractors who identified those procedures as specific adjustments, provided substantial evidence from which the jury could find the defendant guilty of practicing chiropractic without a license. St. v. Blinzler, 183 M 300, 599 P2d 349, 36 St. Rep. 1580 (1979).

37-12-302. Applications — qualifications — fees.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 467 in (1) in first sentence after "department on" substituted "a department form" for "the form and in the manner prescribed by the board", in second sentence after "graduate of" deleted "or expect to graduate within 90 days prior to the next licensing examination administered by the board from" and after "board" deleted "in which the applicant has attended a course of study of 4 school years of not less than 9 months each", and deleted former fourth sentence that read: "Application must be made in writing, must be sworn to by an officer authorized to administer oaths, and must recite the history of applicant's educational qualifications, how long the applicant has studied chiropractic, of what school or college the applicant is a graduate, and the length of time the applicant has been engaged in practice"; in (2) deleted former second sentence that read: "A fee must also be paid for a subsequent examination and application"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 224 at end of first sentence after "board" deleted "at least 21 days prior to a meeting of the board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Severability: Section 34, Ch. 224, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 224, L. 2003, was a saving clause.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 168 in (1), in third sentence in middle, increased education requirement from 2 years of college or university work at an institution acceptable to the Board of Regents to a bachelor's degree from an accredited college or university; inserted (3) exempting persons licensed before October 1, 1995, from the bachelor's degree requirement; and made minor changes in style.

1989 Amendment: In second sentence of (1) inserted "or expect to graduate within 90 days prior to the next licensing examination administered by the board from".

Severability: Section 6, Ch. 203, L. 1989, was a severability clause.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "a license fee prescribed by the board" for "a license fee of $50" at the end of the first sentence of (2).

Licensure by Reciprocity — Educational Standards: Applicants for licensure by reciprocity need not have the educational requirements established by this section if they have practiced in and have been licensed by a state that has educational admission standards equal to this state's standards. 29 A.G. 37-12-304. Examinations — subjects.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 224 substituted language in (1) requiring license applicants to have passed board-prescribed examination for former (1) that read: "(1) Examinations for a license to practice chiropractic must be made by the department, subject to 37-1-101, according to the method considered by the board to be the most practicable and expeditious to test the applicant's qualifications. The application must be designated by a number instead of the applicant's name so that the identity will not be discovered or disclosed until after the examination papers are graded"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) Examinations must be administered on subjects taught in chiropractic colleges, on the provisions of this chapter, and on other provisions of the Montana Code Annotated pertaining to the practice of chiropractic. A license must be granted to applicants who correctly answer 75% of all questions asked, including x-ray questions. If an applicant fails to answer correctly 60% of the questions on any branch of the examination, the applicant is not entitled to a license"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Severability: Section 34, Ch. 224, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 224, L. 2003, was a saving clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 275 in (2), near beginning, substituted "administered" for "made in writing" and after "colleges" substituted "on the provisions of this chapter, and on other provisions of the Montana Code Annotated pertaining to the practice of chiropractic" for "including the use of x-ray equipment and radiographs. Additional subjects may be prescribed by the board to meet new conditions"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 7, 1993.

1983 Amendment: In (2), in first sentence changed the examination subjects from "anatomy, physiology, symptomatology, diagnosis, chiropractic orthopedy, principles of chiropractic and adjusting, sanitation and hygiene, urinalysis, gynecology, and palpation" to "subjects taught in chiropractic colleges, including the use of x-ray equipment and radiographs" and at end of second sentence inserted "including x-ray questions"; and in (3) changed the examination requirement, which formerly provided that applicant "satisfactorily passes a clinical proficiency examination before the department, subject to 37-1-101".

Compiler's Comments

1987 Amendment: At end of section inserted "including a local government with self-governing powers".

Attorney General's Opinions

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 at beginning of (1) substituted "department" for "board"; in (2), in first sentence after "may", inserted "upon order of the board" and deleted third and fourth sentences that read: "If the board has reasonable cause to believe that this probability exists, the department shall mail to the person at his last address of record with the department, a specification of the charges against him, together with a written notice of the time and place of the hearing on such charges, advising him that he may be present in person and with counsel if he so desires to offer evidence and be heard in his defense. The time fixed for hearing may not be less than 30 days from the date of mailing the notice"; deleted (3) through (7) that read: "(3) Any person, including a member of the board, may file a sworn complaint with the department against a licensed chiropractor charging him with any of the offenses or conditions set forth in 37-12-321 or subsection (1) of this section, which complaint shall set forth a specification of the charges. When the complaint has been filed, the board may make an investigation as provided by this section or may proceed to hearing. The department shall mail a copy of the complaint to the person charged, together with notice of hearing as provided in subsection (2) of this section.

(4) After the hearing, the board shall adopt a resolution finding that the offenses charged have or have not been committed or that the conditions charged do or do not exist. If the finding is in the negative, the board shall dismiss the charges. If the finding is in the affirmative, the board shall:

(a) revoke the license;

(b) suspend the licensee's right to practice for a period not to exceed 1 year;

(c) suspend its judgment of revocation on terms and conditions determined by the board;

(d) place the licensee on probation;

(e) fine the licensee in an amount not to exceed $500 for each incident; or

(f) take any other disciplinary action which the board in its discretion considers proper.

(5) In cases of revocation, suspension, or probation, the department shall record the facts of the case and all actions of the board in relation thereto.

(6) On the expiration of a term of suspension, the licensee shall be reinstated by the board if he furnishes evidence, satisfactory to the board, that he is then of good moral character and conduct or restored to good health and that he has not practiced chiropractic during the term of suspension. If the evidence fails to establish such facts to the satisfaction of the board, the board shall proceed to hearing on revocation with notice as provided in subsection (2) of this section.

(7) Following a final determination resulting in any disciplinary action taken by the board under subsection (4), the board may recover from the disciplined party all reasonable costs of any proceeding, not to exceed $1,000, incurred for the purpose of the disciplinary action. Fines and costs recovered must be deposited in the state special revenue fund for the use of the board, subject to 37-1-101(6)"; and made minor changes in style.

Certified Hearing Aid Audiologist — Licensure Required: By enacting a licensure act for audiologists and defining the term "audiologist" to include similar terms, the Legislature intended that anyone using the term "audiologist" in whatever manner as a professional title or description of services must be licensed by the Board of Speech Pathologists (now Speech-Language Pathologists) and Audiologists. 42 A.G. Op. 1 (1987).

Rule Invalid — Direct Conflict With Definition — Board of Speech Pathologists (Now Speech-Language Pathologists) and Audiologists: An administrative rule adopted by the Board of Speech Pathologists (now Speech-Language Pathologists) and Audiologists that was in direct conflict with the definition of "audiologist" in this section and that purported to authorize "certified hearing aid audiologists" is invalid. 42 A.G. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 367 inserted (2)(b) providing that nothing in this chapter restricts a cooperative from hiring on an annual basis a person to provide speech-language pathology-related services who does not meet this chapter's licensing requirements if the cooperative has tried to hire appropriately trained personnel, has hired the most qualified unlicensed person and the person has completed at least a 4-year program in speech-language pathology or communication disorders and can prove ongoing study to meet licensing requirements within 3 years after being hired, and has contracted with a licensed person to provide the unlicensed hired person consultation and training; inserted (2)(c) stating when an ongoing, good faith effort to recruit and hire appropriately and adequately trained personnel is presumed to be met; inserted (2)(d) providing that a cooperative hiring an unlicensed person shall try to hire a licensed person each year and comply with subsection (2) each year and providing that an unlicensed person may be employed under subsection (2)(b) for no more than 3 years after the hiring date; and made minor changes in style. 1989 Amendment: Throughout section changed "speech" to "speech-language"; inserted (8) regarding nonexemption from provisions relating to hearing aid dispensers; and made minor changes in phraseology.

Attorney General's Opinions

Audiologist as Agent for Hearing Aid Dispenser: There is nothing in the law to prohibit a licensed audiologist from acting as an "agent" for a hearing aid dispenser if he chooses to do so. Since an audiologist who is an employee of a charitable or nonprofit organization primarily supported by voluntary contributions is entitled to fit and dispense hearing aids, either the audiologist or the hearing aid dispenser may complete the final fitting and delivery. 38 A.G. Op. 42 (1979). (See 1985 amendment to 37-16-103.)

Selection of Best Hearing Aid for Client: No person may select a particular hearing aid for any other person and force the hearing aid dispenser from whom the hearing aid is purchased to abide by that decision. When a licensed hearing aid dispenser sells a hearing aid he is entitled, if not obligated, to use his training and judgment to select the best hearing aid for that client. 38 A.G. Op. 42 (1979). (See 1985 amendment to 37-16-103.)

When Hearing Aid Dispenser's License Not Required: A licensed audiologist who is an employee of a charitable or nonprofit organization primarily supported by voluntary contributions may fit a hearing aid, whether permanently or for a trial period, without a dispenser's license. 38 A.G. Attorney General's Opinions

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

1985 Amendment: In (2) after "public agency", deleted "or by a charitable or nonprofit organization which is primarily supported by voluntary contributions, unless they sell hearing aids".

Attorney General's Opinions

Audiologist as Agent for Hearing Aid Dispenser: There is nothing in the law to prohibit a licensed audiologist from acting as an "agent" for a hearing aid dispenser if he chooses to do so. Since an audiologist who is an employee of a charitable or nonprofit organization primarily supported by voluntary contributions is entitled to fit and dispense hearing aids, either the audiologist or the hearing aid dispenser may complete the final fitting and delivery. 38 A.G. Op. 42 (1979). (See 1985 amendment.)

When Hearing Aid Dispenser's License Not Required: A licensed audiologist who is an employee of a charitable or nonprofit organization primarily supported by voluntary contributions may fit a hearing aid, whether permanently or for a trial period, without a dispenser's license. 38 A.G. Op. 42 (1979). (See 1985 amendment.)

When Audiologist May Fit Hearing Aids: A licensed audiologist who is an employee of a charitable or nonprofit organization primarily supported by voluntary contributions may make an impression of the ear (which is expressly part of the practice of fitting and dispensing hearing aids) without being licensed as a hearing aid dispenser. This exemption may be enjoyed only if the hearing aids are not sold. A "sale" includes a sale at a profit, at cost, or even at a loss. 38 A.G. Op. 42 (1979). (See 1985 amendment.)

Selling Hearing Aids — License Required: A charitable or nonprofit organization primarily supported by voluntary contributions or any audiologist or other employee of the organization may dispense free hearing aids without a license, but neither the organization nor its employees may sell hearing aids without a license, regardless of the dispensing program. 37 A.G. Op. 60 (1977). (See 1985 amendment.)

It is the intent of the legislature that rules adopted by the board include rules defining "related devices" and other rules necessary to implement [sections 1 through 10] [37-16-301, 37-16-303, 37-16-304, 37-16-402, 37-16-403, now repealed, 37-16-405, 37-16-407, now repealed, 37-16-408, 37-16-411, and 37-16-414, now repealed].

It is specifically intended that, in adopting rules, the board define "related devices" to mean those parts, attachments, or accessories, as provided in 37-16-102, that are sold for use with a hearing aid by a licensed hearing aid dispenser. "Related devices" should include assistive listening devices and cordless infrared systems if sold by a hearing aid dispenser. However,

Case Notes

Board of Psychologists — Immunity From Suit: Rahrer sought to hold the Board of Psychologists liable for damages arising out of a contested case hearing involving the Board's investigation of a complaint against Rahrer, a licensed psychologist. Applying Butz v. Economou, 438 US 478, 57 L Ed 2d 895, 98 S Ct 2894 (1978), and Koppen v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 233 M 214, 759 P2d 173, 45 St. Rep. 1433 (1988), the Supreme Court held that the Board of Psychologists was entitled to quasi-judicial immunity. Initiating, investigating, and presenting a case pursuant to the Montana Administrative Procedure Act involve precisely the types of decisions for which the state and its agencies are granted quasi-judicial immunity. Rahrer v. Bd. of Psychologists, 2000 MT 9, 298 M 28, 993 P2d 680, 57 St. Rep. 53 (2000).

Invalid Rule Under Grandfather Clause: Section 66-3208(4), R.C.M. 1947 (deleted by sec. 317, Ch. 350, L. 1974), a grandfather clause, allowed licensure of an established psychologist without a doctoral degree if he had 5 years of professional experience and a master's degree. A rule adopted by the Board of Psychologists required the professional experience to have been obtained after receiving the master's degree. The rule was held invalid because it imposed the additional requirement of a chronological order in which requirements were to be met not envisioned by the Legislature. McPhail v. Mont. Bd. of Psychologists, 196 M 514, 640 P2d 906, 39 St. Rep. 290 (1982).

Case Notes

No Error by District Court in Affirming Final Agency Decision: The petitioner sought licensure as a clinical psychologist and was denied by the Board of Psychologists because he did not meet the educational requirements. The petitioner challenged the board's decision and requested a hearing. The hearing officer found in the petitioner's favor and recommended licensure. The board rejected the hearing officer's findings and again denied licensure. The petitioner sought judicial review of the board's decision and the District Court held in the board's favor. The Supreme Court affirmed and determined that the hearing officer's finding was based on a misinterpretation of the board's rules and was not supported by substantial competent evidence. Mayer v. House Bill No. 518 was approved April 13, 1995, as Ch. 429, L. 1995, and included the repeal of 37-17-304; because House Bill No. 184 was passed and approved as Ch. 362, L. 1995, the repeal of 37-17-304 is void and the amendments to 37-17-304 in House Bill No. 184 are effective.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 75 in (1)(e), at beginning after "employment", deleted "as assistants to veterinarians licensed and registered under this chapter" and at end substituted "if the students are employed by and work under the immediate supervision of a veterinarian licensed and registered under this chapter" for "and authorized by law to confer degrees"; in (3), at end of first sentence, deleted "by individuals who attest to the board that they possess a combination of 3 years' education, experience, and training in that procedure", deleted first sentence of former (3)(b) that read: "Exemption under subsection (3)(a) remains in effect until testing and certification procedures, as determined by board rule, are implemented on or before July 1, 1991", and at end, after "rules", inserted "regarding nonsurgical embryo transfers in bovines"; deleted former (3)(b)(ix) that read: "(ix) establishment of an advisory committee. It is intended that the board be allowed to define by rule the scope of treatments that support personnel may render when working under the supervision of a veterinarian. It is also intended that, in its discretion, the board be allowed to further define situations that constitute emergencies during which support personnel may provide limited care to a veterinarian's animal patients."

At a minimum, it is intended that the rules address:

(1) a definition of accepted livestock management practices in order to determine whether a person who advises on the subject is exempt from Title 37, chapter 18;

(2) development of standards for continuing education requirements, which may be supplemental to present board rules on the subject;

(3) a definition of unprofessional conduct to be used in determining whether a license may be refused, suspended, or revoked;

(4) certification of individuals seeking to practice embryo transfers, to be implemented on or before July 1, 1991; and

(5) formation of an advisory committee to make recommendations regarding the certification of individuals seeking to practice embryo transfers."

Applicability: Section 9, Ch. 650, L. 1989, provided: "The provisions of [this act] clarify existing authority of the board of veterinary medicine to regulate veterinary practices. The provisions of Title 2, chapter 8, part 2 [now repealed], and 5-4-207 [now repealed] do not apply to [this act]."

This employment may not be for a period in excess of 6 months from the date of completion of the third year of study".

Case Notes

Employment Contract for Performance of Embryo Transfers by Nonveterinarian Void for Illegal Purpose: Employment contracts entered into in 1980 by an embryonics corporation and two persons who were not veterinarians, for the performance of bovine embryo transfers in Montana, were contracts for the illegal purpose of unauthorized practice of veterinary medicine and were therefore void. Actions arising from alleged breach of the contracts were unenforceable. Portable Embryonics, Inc. v. J.P. Genetics, Inc., 248 M 242, 810 P2d 1197, 48 St. Rep. 415 (1991).

It is the intent of this bill that the board adopt rules requiring mortuaries to disclose in writing to all customers a complete itemized list of all funeral costs and complete information regarding the need for embalming. Members of the public seeking the services of mortuaries are usually under a great deal of personal stress, and the rules adopted are intended to provide complete disclosure of costs and attendant legal requirements to protect the economic interest of members of the public.

This bill grants the board the authority to establish continuing education programs and requirements to insure maintenance of professional knowledge and competency of licensees. It is the intent of the Legislature that the continuing education programs have as their primary objective the protection of the health, safety, and welfare of the public, and that the programs not serve primarily to limit entry into the profession or occupation or to promote the personal interests of the licensees."

Case Notes

Prohibition Against Abortion by Physician Assistant-Certified Unconstitutional Violation of Right of Privacy: After the decision in Mazurek v. Armstrong, 520 US 968, 138 L Ed 2d 162, 117 S Ct 1865 (1997), ibid., Dr. Armstrong and Cahill, a physician assistant-certified (see 2005 amendment), filed this case in state District Court challenging the constitutionality of 50-20-109 and this section, which prohibited a physician assistant-certified (see 2005 amendment) from performing abortions. The District Court found that the prohibition affected a woman's right to obtain a legal first trimester abortion and that the state had advanced no compelling interest to justify prohibiting Cahill from performing abortions, as she had for 20 years, and granted plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction. Noting that Montana adheres to one of the most stringent protections of its citizens' right of privacy in the United States, exceeding even the federal constitution, the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that legislation that infringes on the exercise of the right of privacy must be reviewed under a strict scrutiny analysis. Under Art. II, sec. 10, Mont. Const., every individual is guaranteed the right to make medical judgments affecting that person's bodily integrity and health, in partnership with a chosen health care provider and free from government interference, except in very limited circumstances not at issue here. The court agreed that the statutory restrictions in question impacted a woman's right to procreative autonomy and her right to seek and obtain a specific lawful medical procedure from the health care provider of her choice, in this case a previability abortion from a physician assistant-certified, and were thus an unconstitutional violation of the right of privacy. Armstrong v. St., 1999 MT 261, 296 M 361, 989 P2d 364, 56 St. Rep. 1045 (1999), following Gryczan v. St., 283 M 433, 942 P2d 112, 54 St. Rep. 699 (1997). See also Intermtn. Planned Parenthood v. St. (Cause No. BDV 97-477) (June 29, 1998) (First Judicial District Court ruling (not appealed to Montana Supreme Court) that the law banning partial-birth abortion procedure infringed on a woman's right to privacy under Art. II, sec. 10, Mont. Const.), and Planned Parenthood of Missoula v. St. (judgment of the First Judicial District, Lewis & Clark County, Dec. 29, 1999, declaring provisions of the Montana Abortion Control Act and the Woman's Right-to-Know Act unconstitutional under Art. II. sec. 10, Mont. Const.).

Standing of Health Care Providers to Litigate Privacy Right of Patient to Obtain Previability Abortion: In a case of first impression, the Supreme Court relied on federal law to decide that the statutes directed at health care providers in 50-20-109 and this section, which prohibit a physician assistant-certified (see 2005 amendment) from performing abortions, interfered with the normal functioning of the physician-patient relationship by criminalizing certain procedures. To establish standing to challenge government action: (1) the complaining party must clearly allege past, present, or threatened injury to a property right or civil right; and (2) the alleged injury must be distinguishable from the injury to the public generally but need not be exclusive to the complaining party. In this case, based on the closeness of the physician-patient relationship, the health care providers had standing, on behalf of their women patients, to assert the women's constitutional privacy right under Art. II, sec. 10, Mont. Const., to obtain a previability abortion from the health care provider of their choosing. Armstrong v. St., 1999 MT 261, 296 M 361, 989 P2d 364, 56 St. Rep. 1045 (1999), following Singleton v. Wulff, 428 US 106, 49 L Ed 2d 826, 96 S Ct 2868 (1976). See also Intermtn. Planned Parenthood v. St. (Cause No. BDV 97-477) (June 29, 1998) (First Judicial District Court ruling (not appealed to Montana Supreme Court) that the law banning partial-birth abortion procedure infringed on a woman's right to privacy under Art. II, sec. 10, Mont. Const.), and Planned Parenthood of Missoula v. St. (judgment of the First Judicial District, Lewis & Clark County, Dec. 29, 1999, declaring provisions of the Montana Abortion Control Act and the Woman's Right-to-Know Act unconstitutional under Art. II. sec. 10, Mont. Const.).

HB 7 intends that the board of medical examiners carry out the provisions of this bill and act to provide better health care for the public. In this spirit, the bill intends for the board of medical examiners to adopt rules which will clarify the nature and limitations of the supervision of physicians' assistants by physicians. The rules adopted should address issues of direction and supervision such as proximity of the supervising physician to his assistant; the nature of the communication between the physician and the assistant, whether it must be face-to-face or whether telephone communications suffice, and under what circumstances; the questions of protocols for interaction between different health care actors, including issues of liability and the possible direction of others by physicians' assistants; and the rules adopted should give additional guidance to prospective applicants with respect to the requirements for education and experience required of physicians' assistants, the nature of a training program approved by the American medical association, and general information indicating the scope of utilization plans likely to be approved.

In addition, a rule shall be promulgated to specify that a physician may not utilize more than one physician's assistant unless he can demonstrate to the board the ability to supervise more than one assistant adequately."

Attorney General's Opinions

Occupational Therapist Not Authorized to Use Iontophoresis: Iontophoresis is a process that uses electricity to administer topical medication. The statutes governing the practice of physical therapy define topical medication and iontophoresis and authorize its use by physical therapists, but the statutes governing the practice of occupational therapy do not contain those definitions or authorize the use of topical medications, including medications administered through iontophoresis, by occupational therapists. If the Legislature had intended to authorize occupational therapists to use iontophoresis, it would have made an authorization corollary to the statutes governing physical therapists, but it did not. Therefore, occupational therapists are not authorized by Montana law to perform iontophoresis. 49 A.G. Op. 1 (2001).

Restriction on Use of Modalities by Occupational Therapists: While the list of permissible occupational services set out in this section is not exhaustive, allowable types of services involve functional activities, such as the development of skills, use of crafts, and administration of muscle and motion tests rather than application of therapeutic modalities, such as heat, cold, air, light, water, electricity, and sound. The use of therapeutic agents may be a viable part of the practice of occupational therapy, and occupational therapists may be fully trained in the employment of those agents; however, the Legislature has not authorized their use as within the scope of the practice (see 1993 amendment). 44 A.G. Op. 3 (1991).

CHAPTER 27
DIRECT-ENTRY MIDWIFERY

Chapter Compiler's Comments

Alternative Health Care Board: Section 3, Chapter 524, L. 1991, provided that if Ch. 524 was passed and approved, the Alternative Health Care Board was substituted for the Board of Direct-Entry Midwifery. The Code Commissioner has not codified sec. 5, Ch. 550, L. 1991, creating the Board of Direct-Entry Midwifery, to reflect Ch. 524.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 550, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 6] [37-27-105] grants rulemaking authority to the board of direct-entry midwifery [alternative health care board] to implement the provisions of this bill. In adopting rules, the board is encouraged to review regulations promulgated by the state of New Hampshire and, where appropriate, to adopt comparable rules specifically applicable to direct-entry midwifery in Montana. At a minimum, it is the intent of the legislature that the board adopt rules:

(1) governing the conduct of board business;

(2) establishing license application and examination procedures, criteria for and grading of examinations, examination and license fees, criteria for minimum educational, apprenticeship, and clinical requirements for license eligibility, and continuing education requirements for license renewal;

(3) establishing eligibility criteria for client screening by direct-entry midwives in order to achieve the goal of providing midwifery services to women during low-risk pregnancies;

(4) developing procedures for the issuance, renewal, suspension, revocation, and reciprocity of licenses;

(5) creating disciplinary standards for licensees, establishing investigatory procedures for processing complaints, and adopting ethical standards for licensed direct-entry midwives;

(6) establishing supporting documentation for primary birth attendants;

(7) establishing standardized informed consent and reporting forms; and

(8) establishing criteria that limits an apprenticeship, as provided in [section 6] [37-27-105]." (Section 3, Ch. 524, L. 1991, provided that if it was passed and approved, the Alternative Health Care Board was substituted for the Board of Direct-Entry Midwifery.)

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

Case Notes

Res Judicata for Claims Against Board of Dentistry: When the parties are the same as in a former action, the subject matter is the same, and the issues are the same and relate to the subject matter, the matter is res judicata to subsequent claims. Res judicata bars not only issues that were litigated in a previous action, but also those that could have been litigated in a prior proceeding. Wiser v. Bd. of Dentistry, 2011 MT 56, 360 Mont. 1, 251 P.3d 675.

Denturists' Due Process Rights Not Violated by Placement Under Board of Dentistry: Denturist plaintiffs contended that the policies, membership, and restrictions imposed on denturity by the Board of Dentistry was a violation of due process, entitling plaintiffs to a federal claim under 42 U.S.C. 1983. The District Court rejected the claim, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Although the Board was comprised mostly of dentists, under Friedman v. Rogers, 440 US 1 (1979), due process does not require that a regulatory board equally represent all professions subject to that board's regulations, nor is there a constitutional right for a profession to be regulated by a board that is sympathetic to the commercial practice of that profession. Additionally, under Zinermon v. Burch, 494 US 113 (1990), to determine whether a procedural due process violation has occurred, the adequacy of the state's process must be examined for constitutionality. Here, plaintiffs did not show that administrative procedures afforded to them were inadequate, and in fact, they did not avail themselves of the process available to them. Plaintiffs' failure to exhaust the administrative process precluded relief by judicial review. Thus, the due process claim failed, and absent a constitutional claim, the 42 U.S.C. 1983 claim failed as well. Wiser v. St., 2006 MT 20, 331 M 28, 129 P3d 133 (2006).

Partial Denture Rule Not Violative of Denturists' Right to Pursue Employment: Denturist plaintiffs challenged the rule of the Board of Dentistry, promulgated pursuant to 37-29-403, requiring dentist referrals before denturists may perform partial denture work, on grounds that the rule violated the constitutional right of denturists to pursue employment. Relying on Wadsworth v. St., 275 M 287, 911 P2d 1165 (1996), plaintiffs contended that they had a fundamental right to practice denturity free of regulation. Although Wadsworth did demonstrate plaintiffs' fundamental right to pursue denturity as a profession, it did not mean that denturists have a right to practice denturity free of all regulations. The partial denture rule does not bar denturity, and plaintiffs may pursue their profession as long as their patient obtains a dentist referral. Although a person does have a fundamental right to pursue employment, one does not have the right to practice a profession free of state regulation promulgated to protect the public welfare. The Supreme Court declined to apply strict scrutiny review, and plaintiffs' employment infringement argument failed. Wiser v. St., 2006 MT 20, 331 M 28, 129 P3d 133 (2006).

Rule Requiring Dentist Referrals Prior to Performance of Partial Denture Work by Denturists Not Violative of Right of Privacy: Denturist plaintiffs challenged the rule of the Board of Dentistry, promulgated pursuant to 37-29-403, requiring dentist referrals before denturists may perform partial denture work, on grounds that the rule violated the private right of patients to seek the medical professional of their choice. The District Court upheld the constitutionality of the rule, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Although the Supreme Court affirmed the right of an individual to obtain and reject medical treatment in Armstrong v. St., 1999 MT 261, 296 M 361, 989 P2d 364 (1999), that general rule does not translate into a fundamental right of a patient to obtain medical care free of regulation. The state may exercise its police power to regulate for the health and safety of its citizens, and that power often implicates individual rights. However, when the rights affected are not fundamental, the state need demonstrate only a rational basis for the regulation rather than a compelling state interest. Plaintiffs did not argue whether the partial denture rule was rationally related to a legitimate state interest, and absent a showing of a fundamental right, the privacy argument failed. Wiser v. St., 2006 MT 20, 331 M 28, 129 P3d 133 (2006).

37-29-103. Association with dentists permitted.

Case Notes

Use of Declaratory Judgment to Settle Question of Business Association Between Dentist and Denturist Improper — Dismissal for Failure to State Claim and Exhaust Administrative Remedies: Brisendine, a licensed denturist, presented to the Board of Dentistry a proposal stating his desire to enter into a business association with a dentist regarding fees and compensation. The Board issued a letter stating that it was considering the proposal but that such association would probably constitute the illegal practice of dentistry. The Board further threatened sanctions against Brisendine if he went forward with his proposal, but no final decision was ever issued by the Board. Brisendine sought a declaratory judgment and injunctive relief in District Court, requesting a decision on whether the business association was legal. The District Court dismissed the complaint for failure to present a justiciable controversy. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that use of a declaratory judgment at this stage of the proceedings constituted an attempt to seek an advisory opinion and an unwarranted intrusion into the Board's regulatory authority. The Supreme Court noted that Brisendine could seek a declaratory judgment from the Board without subjecting his license to suspension or revocation and that dismissal of the motion for declaratory judgment was proper because Brisendine had not exhausted his administrative remedies. Brisendine v. St., 253 M 361, 833 P2d 1019, 49 St. Rep. 444 (1992), distinguished in Ridley v. Guar. Nat'l Ins. Co., 286 M 325, 951 P2d 987, 54 St. Rep. 1430 (1997).

Board of Dentistry Not to Reconsider Licensing Decisions of Board of Denturitry: Administrative agencies enjoy only those powers specifically conferred upon them by statute. They possess no common-law powers, and implied powers are limited only to those necessary for the effective exercise and discharge of powers and duties expressly conferred. Therefore, when the Board of Denturitry had no power to reconsider its licensing decisions, the Board of Dentistry, having succeeded to the functions of the Board of Denturitry, may not reconsider a prior decision of the Board of Denturitry to issue a denturist's license. 43 A.G. Denturists' Due Process Rights Not Violated by Placement Under Board of Dentistry: Denturist plaintiffs contended that the policies, membership, and restrictions imposed on denturity by the Board of Dentistry was a violation of due process, entitling plaintiffs to a federal claim under 42 U.S.C. 1983. The District Court rejected the claim, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Although the Board was comprised mostly of dentists, under Friedman v. Partial Denture Rule Not Violative of Denturists' Right to Pursue Employment: Denturist plaintiffs challenged the rule of the Board of Dentistry, promulgated pursuant to this section, requiring dentist referrals before denturists may perform partial denture work, on grounds that the rule violated the constitutional right of denturists to pursue employment. Relying on Wadsworth v. St., 275 M 287, 911 P2d 1165 (1996), plaintiffs contended that they had a fundamental right to practice denturity free of regulation. Although Wadsworth did demonstrate plaintiffs' fundamental right to pursue denturity as a profession, it did not mean that denturists have a right to practice denturity free of all regulations. The partial denture rule does not bar denturity, and plaintiffs may pursue their profession as long as their patient obtains a dentist referral. Although a person does have a fundamental right to pursue employment, one does not have the right to practice a profession free of state regulation promulgated to protect the public welfare. The Supreme Court declined to apply strict scrutiny review, and plaintiffs' employment infringement argument failed. Wiser v. St., 2006 MT 20, 331 M 28, 129 P3d 133 (2006).

Rule Requiring Dentist Referrals Prior to Performance of Partial Denture Work by Denturists Not Violative of Right of Privacy: Denturist plaintiffs challenged the rule of the Board of Dentistry, promulgated pursuant to this section, requiring dentist referrals before denturists may perform partial denture work, on grounds that the rule violated the private right of patients to seek the medical professional of their choice. The District Court upheld the constitutionality of the rule, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Although the Supreme Court affirmed the right of an individual to obtain and reject medical treatment in Armstrong v. Administrative Rule Valid — Referral to Dentist Mandatory: Plaintiffs failed to make a clear showing that a Board of Dentistry's rule requiring referral to a dentist prior to a denturist starting services added provisions not envisioned by the Legislature. The District Court erred when it declared the rule invalid. An administrative agency's interpretation of a statute under its domain is presumed to be controlling. Christenot v. St., 272 M 396, 901 P2d 545, 52 St. Rep. 749 (1995). See also Hawley v. Bd. of Oil & Gas Conserv., 2000 MT 2, 297 M 467, 993 P2d 677, 57 St. Rep. 5 (2000).

Chapter Case Notes

Constitutionality: Former Title 37, ch. 30, is within state's police powers; it was not rendered unconstitutional as discriminatory by fact that those practicing barbering within state at time of its passage were not required to pass an examination while defendant, who was so practicing in another state at that date, was required to pass an examination. St. v. Bays, 100 M 125, 47 P2d 50 (1935).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

Case Notes

Administrative Rule More Stringent Than Statute Held Invalid: An administrative rule (adopted prior to the 1981 amendment reducing the period of apprenticeship from 1 year to 3 months, prior to the 1983 amendment providing for temporary certificates, and prior to the 1985 amendment eliminating the apprenticeship requirement) of the Board of Barbers requiring a year's apprenticeship served in a "commercial barbershop" prior to examination, as opposed to a year's apprenticeship served "under the immediate personal supervision of a licensed barber" as required by 37-30-301 (now repealed) and 37-30-305 (now repealed), is invalid because it does not satisfy the test as required in 2-4-305 that a rule must be "reasonably necessary to effectuate the purpose of the statute". Bd. of Barbers v. Big Sky College of Barber-Styling, 192 M 159, 626 P2d 1269, 38 St. Rep. 621 (1981).

Administrative Rule Exceeding Statutory Authority — Barbers: Administrative regulations are inconsistent with legislative guidelines if they engraft additional requirements on the statute that were not envisioned by the Legislature. Where the statutes (prior to enactment in 1983 of the requirement for an instructor's examination) set forth experience and character requirements for a barber school operator but did not mention an instructor's examination, an administrative rule requiring such an examination was void. Bell v. St., 182 M 21, 594 P2d 331, 36 St. Rep. 880 (1979).

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 79 inserted definition of board; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2001.

Chapter 213 substituted definition of community water system for former language that read: "means the term as defined in 75-6-102"; in definition of wastewater treatment plant deleted former (b) that read: "(b) discharges an effluent directly into state waters"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 6, 2001.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 79 L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, certain environmental statutes administered by the Montana Department of Environmental Quality provide that a person aggrieved by a decision of the Department may appeal that decision to the Director of the Department; and

WHEREAS, the possibility of an appeal prevents the Director from becoming involved in certain Department decisions that are subject to appeal to the Director; and

WHEREAS, section 82-4-427, MCA, states that a contested case hearing requested under The Opencut Mining Act must be held within 30 days after the hearing is requested; and

WHEREAS, it is difficult for the Department to conduct a contested case hearing under that Act within 30 days after the hearing is requested; and

WHEREAS, certain revisions to statutes administered by the Department are necessary for clarity and consistency and to conform the statutes to current drafting style."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 213, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, section 37-42-102(8), MCA, currently contains three elements in the definition of a "wastewater treatment plant" and defines it as a plant that treats wastewater, that discharges an effluent directly into state waters, and that is either an industrial waste discharge system or a public sewage system as defined in section 75-6-102, MCA; and

WHEREAS, section 75-6-102(9), MCA, already defines "industrial waste discharge system" as a system that discharges industrial waste into state waters; and

WHEREAS, the current definition of "wastewater treatment plant" in section 37-42-102(8), MCA, which includes only systems that discharge directly to state waters, may restrict regulation more than is desired so that some public sewage systems might not be required to have a certified operator; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature wishes to require public sewage systems, whether or not they discharge to state waters, and systems that process industrial waste water and discharge to state waters to be operated by certified operators; and

WHEREAS, removing the requirement that a discharge to state waters is necessary from the definition of a "wastewater treatment plant" would clarify that intent; and

WHEREAS, section 37-42-103, MCA, exempts public water supplies and sewage systems serving fewer than 15 or more service connections or 25 or more people for at least 60 days of the calendar year from the requirement of having a certified operator in responsible charge; and

WHEREAS, a water supply or sewage system that does not serve 15 service connections or 25 or more people for at least 60 days of the calendar year is already excluded from the definition of a "public sewage system" and the definition of a "public water supply system" under section 75-6-102(15) and (16), MCA, and is therefore not required to have a certified operator; and

WHEREAS, industrial waste discharge systems generally do not serve 15 or more service connections or 25 or more people for at least 60 days of the calendar year, and the exemption in section 37-42-103, MCA, might be interpreted to exempt industrial waste discharge systems from needing to have certified operators; and

WHEREAS, repeal of section 37-42-103, MCA, would clarify that industrial waste discharge systems that discharge an effluent to state waters require certified operators."

Saving Clause: Section 18, Ch. 79, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

Section 3, Ch. 213, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 538 inserted definition of nontransient noncommunity water system; at end of definition of water distribution system and at end of definition of water supply system inserted "or a nontransient noncommunity water system"; and made minor changes in style. Applicability: Section 30(2), Ch. 538, L. 1997, provided: "[Section 1] [37-42-102] applies to the licensing of nontransient noncommunity water system operators on or after July 1, 1998."

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 418 in definition of Department substituted "department of environmental quality provided for in 2-15-3501" for "department of health and environmental sciences provided for in Title 2, chapter 15, part 21"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 488 inserted definition of community water system; deleted definition of Montana's waters that read: ""Montana's waters" means all streams and lakes (including all rivers and lakes bordering on the state), wells, springs, irrigation systems, marshes, watercourses, waterways, drainage systems, and other bodies of water, surface and underground, natural or artificial, publicly or privately owned"; inserted definition of state waters; in definition of wastewater treatment plant, at end of (b), deleted "which serves 10 or more families or serves an industry employing 10 or more persons" and inserted (c) to include part of an industrial waste discharge system or public sewer system; in definition of water distribution system, at end, substituted "that is part of a community water system" for "which serves 10 or more families or supplies an industry employing 10 or more persons"; in definition of water supply system, at end, substituted

"that is part of a community water system" for "which serves 10 or more families or serves an industry employing 10 or more persons"; and made minor changes in style.

Style changes in the chapters were slightly different. In each case, the codifier chose the most appropriate.

This bill authorizes the board to license and provide training for persons constructing monitoring wells and to adopt rules regarding the construction, use, and abandonment of monitoring wells. The board's present jurisdiction is over wells intended for the location, diversion, artificial recharge, or acquisition of ground water. It is intended that any existing standards be substantially reviewed, modified, and incorporated into the new standards. It is further intended that the new standards should be modeled after the existing water well construction standards adopted by the Montana well drillers association and the United States environmental protection agency. It is the intent of the legislature that the act of transferring the board of water well contractors from the department of commerce to the department of natural resources and conservation may not be construed to abridge or otherwise restrict the existing authority and autonomy of the board of water well contractors."

Case Notes

Illegal Outfitting Chargeable in County Where Some Outfitting Acts Occur: Ruiz was charged in a fish and game sting operation with outfitting without a license after meeting officers in Missoula County and taking them to Flathead Lake to hunt. The charge was filed in Missoula County, and Ruiz contended that because the actual hunting activity took place in a different county, the charge was filed in an improper venue. The Supreme Court noted that the definition of an outfitter includes a person who provides a personal service for a person to hunt and who accompanies that person, either part or all of the way, on a hunting expedition. Ruiz met the officers in Missoula County and accompanied them on their hunting expedition, so the outfitting violation occurred at least in part in Missoula County. Therefore, charging the crime in Missoula County was a proper venue. St. v. Ruiz, 2004 MT 135, 321 M 357, 91 P3d 565 (2004).

Traversing State Lands to Conduct Outfitting on Private Land as Not Constituting Outfitting on State Lands: The Weitzs owned a ranch, and within the boundaries of their land was state land that they leased. The Weitzs were using roads on their leased land to spot game and were traveling across the leased land on existing roads to get to their own property to hunt. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation concluded that the defendants were engaged in recreational use of state lands and were in violation of a Department rule prohibiting vehicle travel across state lands. The Supreme Court upheld the District Court's decision that noted that the hearings examiner had acknowledged that no elk or deer had been killed, shot at, or pursued on leased state land by the defendants and therefore reversed the hearings examiner's decision as being based upon faulty reasoning, conjecture, and speculation. The Supreme Court also upheld the lower court's ruling that the Department's application of the rule prohibiting travel across state lands by a lessee to conduct activity elsewhere was an overbroad and unlawful application of the rule. In addition, the Supreme Court held that crossing state lands to conduct outfitting on private lands does not constitute outfitting on state lands. Weitz v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 284 M 130, 943 P2d 990, 54 St. Rep. 807 (1997).

The board may not approve a new operations plan or the proposed expansion of net client hunting use under the existing operations plan if it finds that the proposal will cause an undue conflict with existing hunting use of the area"; inserted (5)(e) requiring board to adopt rules establishing outfitter reporting requirements and requiring annual reports on actual leased acreage used and unused by clients; and inserted (7) requiring board to maintain records of actual clients served by certain Montana outfitters. The legislature intends that at a minimum the rules on professional guide qualifications address experience, and if the board considers it appropriate, additional training and a qualifying examination to ensure that licensed professional guides are qualified to safely provide services for compensation to clients of the endorsing outfitter.

The legislature intends that rules on operations plans be directed toward a reduction in new hunting uses of areas by outfitters when the new uses will cause undue conflict with existing hunting uses of the areas."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 220 in (5)(b), in second sentence after "experience", inserted "in activities similar to the service to be provided"; at end of (5)(c) inserted "and outfitters' employees, agents, and representatives"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 528, L. 1987, provided: "A statement of intent is submitted for this bill because the board of outfitters established in section 1 [2-15-3403] is required to adopt rules under section 4 [87-4-104] concerning the licensing of outfitters and guides. Attorney General's Opinions

Failure of Board of Outfitters to Adopt Required Rules — Ruling on Case-by-Case Basis Ruled Improper Implementation of Statute: Subsection (5)(d) of this section required the Board of Outfitters to adopt rules containing standards for review and approval of outfitter operation plans in order for the Board to determine whether a proposed outfitter operation would cause an undue conflict with existing hunting use that would constitute a threat to public health, safety, or welfare. The statutory requirement for the Board to adopt rules was sufficiently clear, definite, and certain that the failure of the Board to initially adopt the rules required by the statute and instead determine on a case-by-case basis whether the proposed use would cause "undue conflict" was not a proper implementation of the statute. 47 A.G. Op. 22 (1998).

Case Notes

Outfitter's Obligation to Ensure Licensure of Guide — Board's Failure to Notify Outfitter of Unlicensed Guide Not Due Process Violation: Crismore hired an unlicensed guide and was sanctioned by the Board of Outfitters. Crismore appealed on grounds that he was denied due process because he was not informed until after the contested case hearing that the guide had applied for a license through a different outfitter but the application was returned for administrative reasons, denying Crismore of the opportunity to present a full and complete defense at the hearing. Although acknowledging that Crismore had a property interest in the outfitter's license that entitled him to due process protections, the Supreme Court nevertheless affirmed that Crismore was not denied due process. It is the responsibility of an outfitter to employ only licensed guides and to sign a guide's license when the guide is employed. It is not the responsibility of the Board to inform every licensed outfitter of the name of each person who unsuccessfully applies for a guide's license. Crismore was given a timely and meaningful opportunity to present his case to the Board as to why he hired an unlicensed guide. Crismore v. Bd. of Outfitters, 2005 MT 109, 327 M 71, 111 P3d 681 (2005).

Illegal Outfitting Chargeable in County Where Some Outfitting Acts Occur: Ruiz was charged in a fish and game sting operation with outfitting without a license after meeting officers in Missoula County and taking them to Flathead Lake to hunt. The charge was filed in Missoula County, and Ruiz contended that because the actual hunting activity took place in a different county, the charge was filed in an improper venue. The Supreme Court noted that the definition of an outfitter includes a person who provides a personal service for a person to hunt and who accompanies that person, either part or all of the way, on a hunting expedition. Ruiz met the officers in Missoula County and accompanied them on their hunting expedition, so the outfitting violation occurred at least in part in Missoula County. Therefore, charging the crime in Missoula County was a proper venue. St. v. Ruiz, 2004 MT 135, 321 M 357, 91 P3d 565 (2004).

Operating Business Across State Lines Not a Fundamental Right: The right to operate an outfitting business across state lines is not a fundamental right within the meaning of the Equal Protection Clause. In re Outfitter's License of Godfrey v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 193 M 304, 631 P2d 1265, 38 St. Rep. 661 (1981).

Outfitter's Residency Requirements Violative of Equal Protection: Prior to 1983 amendment of 87-4-122 (renumbered 37-47-302) and repeal of 87-4-126, in-state residency requirements for holders of an outfitter's license violated the Equal Protection Clause of the Montana Constitution. None of the reasons advanced by the state in defense of the statutes justified the inequities engendered by the statutes. Following St. v. Jack, 167 M 456, 539 P2d 726 (1975). Further, the two exceptions contained in the statutes bore little relationship to what the statute sought to accomplish. In re Outfitter's License of Godfrey v. Fish & Game Comm'n, 193 M 304, 631 P2d 1265, 38 St. Rep. 661 (1981).

Attorney General's Opinions

Statutory Qualifications Not Exclusive: A rule of the Board of Outfitters that requires certain experience as a condition to outfitter licensure and that may not be satisfied by an applicant based on experience in Montana prior to his 18th birthday is not inconsistent with this section, which conditions licensure on an applicant's being at least 18 years of age. 42 A.G. Each day of violation is a separate offense. In addition, the person must be assessed and pay to the board the amount of all costs incurred by the board in investigating and preparing the case for trial and all prosecution costs, including but not limited to witness, transportation, and per diem expenses"; deleted former (4) that read: "(4) A person convicted of engaging in outfitting without a license shall reimburse the full amount of any fees received to the person to whom illegal outfitter services were provided"; and made minor changes in style. Case Notes

Sentencing Under Version of Statute in Effect at Time of Offense — No Error When Penalty Not Reduced in Current Version of Statute: The defendant was convicted of outfitting without a license. Although he was alleged to have committed the acts in 2005, he was sentenced under the 2007 version of the criminalizing statute. On appeal, the defendant argued that the District Court erred in sentencing him under the 2007 statute. The Supreme Court disagreed, finding that the penalty for a violation of the statute had not been reduced in the later version, and affirmed. St. v. Kebble, 2015 MT 195, 380 Mont. 69, 353 P.3d 1175.

No Error in Suspending Hunting and Fishing Privileges for Outfitting Without License When Suspension Also Assessed for Fish and Game Violations: Ruiz was convicted of outfitting without a license and for several fish and game violations. The sentencing court suspended Ruiz's hunting and fishing privileges for both violations, designating the suspension periods to run concurrently. Ruiz appealed on grounds that it was error to suspend privileges for outfitting without a license. The Supreme Court agreed that this section does not allow for the suspension of privileges for outfitting violations. However, 87-1-102 (now repealed) allows suspension for fish and game violations. The practical effect of the concurrent sentences was suspension in any event, and the District Court did not abuse its lawful discretion in suspending hunting and fishing privileges for Ruiz's violations. St. v. Ruiz, 2005 MT 117, 327 M 109, 112 P3d 1001 (2005).

Administrative, Not Criminal, Sanctions Properly Imposed by Board of Outfitters Against Outfitter Who Hired Unlicensed Guide: Crismore hired an unlicensed guide. Pursuant to 37-1-312, the Board of Outfitters fined Crismore $1,000, placed him on probation for 18 months, and ordered him to complete remedial education. Crismore contended that the Board should have applied this section, which is the misdemeanor criminal statute that specifically applies to outfitters and guides and provides a maximum fine of $500. The Supreme Court found that Crismore's argument had no basis in law. The Board of Outfitters has no authority to conduct a criminal proceeding that may lead to a misdemeanor sentence under this section. That authority is vested in courts of limited jurisdiction. Rather, the Board has authority to enforce license regulations and conduct administrative contested case hearings pursuant to 37-1-303 and therefore properly exercised its authority to sanction Crismore pursuant to 37-1-312. Crismore v. Bd. of Outfitters, 2005 MT 109, 327 M 71, 111 P3d 681 (2005).

Three-Year Statute of Limitations Reasonable for Prosecution of Misdemeanor Fish and Game Violations — Equal Protection and Due Process Not Violated: Defendant was charged with five misdemeanor fish and game and outfitter violations that occurred nearly 2 years earlier. Although misdemeanor violations must generally be charged within 1 year, 45-1-205(5) and (6) allow charges for misdemeanor fish and game crimes to be brought within 3 years of violation. Defendant contended that the extended statute of limitations for charging fish and game crimes violated equal protection and due process guarantees. The District Court reviewed the legislative history of 45-1-205(5) and (6) and concluded that the extended statute of limitations served a reasonable relation to the proper legislative purpose of protecting wildlife and that in order to effectively enforce fish and games laws, additional time to discover and investigate fish and game violations was warranted. The Supreme Court agreed. A separate class of misdemeanors for fish and game violations did not violate equal protection because all persons who commit such crimes are in a similarly situated class and subject to the same treatment. Further, because fish and game and outfitter violations sometimes require investigation over several hunting seasons and involve perpetrators who reside out of state, an extended statute of limitations is a reasonable exercise of the state's legitimate police power in preserving wildlife and does not violate substantive due process. St. v. Egdorf, 2003 MT 264, 317 M 436, 77 P3d 517 (2003).

Relative Duties of Outfitters, Guides, and Participants

Part Case Notes

Application of Federal Lacey Act to Outfitting and Guiding — Statute of Limitations on Charges of Conspiracy: While a prosecution under the federal Lacey Act, 16 U.S.C. § 3371, et seq., which prohibits transportation or acquisition in interstate commerce of wildlife in violation of state laws, may not properly be had for the substantive acts of selling guiding services and hunting permits, a prosecution can be maintained for conspiracies to violate the Act while providing outfitting and guiding services, such as arranging for out-of-state hunters to use elk licenses and permits belonging to other hunters, knowing that any elk taken would be transported out of state. The Act applied when evidence was sufficient to establish the involvement of defendant, a hunting guide and outfitter, in a conspiracy to transport elk in interstate commerce in violation of Montana law. Further, the 5-year "catchall" statute of limitations set out in 18 U.S.C. § 3282 applied to charges of conspiring to violate the Act. U.S. v. Chapter Case Notes

Elements of Negligent Misrepresentation Action Against Accountant: In a case in which two banks brought an action against an accounting firm for damages caused by an unqualified audit statement, the Supreme Court set forth the elements of a third-party negligent misrepresentation claim against an accountant under Restatement (Second) of Torts 552. W. Sec. Bank v. Eide Bailly, LLP, 2010 MT 291, 359 Mont. 34, 249 P.3d 35.

Professional Negligence and Negligent Misrepresentation Distinguished — Restatement of Torts 552 Controls Third-Party Negligent Misrepresentation — Accountant's Duty of Care to Third Parties: After Eide Bailly, an accounting firm, issued an unqualified opinion stating that an audit of IMC, a mortgage company, showed that its financial statements didn't contain misstatements, the holding company owning IMC was purchased by plaintiff Glacier Bank, which merged the holding company into plaintiff Western Bank. When it was later discovered that an employee of IMC had manipulated IMC's financial records to make IMC appear more profitable than it was, the plaintiffs sued Eide Bailly, alleging that Eide Bailly owed a duty of care to the plaintiffs. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's ruling that no duty of care was owed. Citing Jim's Excavating Service v. HKM Associates, 265 Mont. 494, 878 P.2d 248 (1994), and the Restatement (Second) of Torts, 552 (1977), the Supreme Court held that the plaintiffs had failed to rebut the affidavits from Eide Bailly that it didn't intend to supply the information to the plaintiffs and that it didn't know the plaintiffs would receive the accounting statement. The Supreme Court therefore affirmed the District Court's grant of summary judgment for defendant Eide Bailly. Relying upon Jim's Excavating, the Supreme Court also distinguished professional negligence claims from claims for third-party negligent misrepresentation claims but treated the case before the court as a case of third-party negligent misrepresentation. Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 335, L. 1983, provided: "This bill requires a statement of intent because it requires rulemaking by the Board of Public Accountants.

Under new subsections added to section 37-50-203, the Board must adopt internal rules to preserve the confidences of clients of investigated public accountants, rules defining experience requirements, and rules for investigations and enforcement of the law and board rules. The internal rules required are intended to prevent disclosure by board members and employees of facts learned through board investigations which the client of the investigated party, who may be unaware of the investigation, never consented to. The Legislature believes this to be a sensitive area, as investigations may or may not result in civil and criminal charges and may even result in legal action by others against the client. Rules governing experience required by the Board must require only so much experience as is necessary for the protection of the public and must not impede access to the profession by those persons reasonably well qualified. Enforcement rules must create a positive enforcement program which will require application of continuing education principles for persons who, among others, may be close to violations of the law but for which other disciplinary action is not warranted."

Existing Orders and Rules Effective Until Revoked or Modified: Section 22, Ch. 684, L. 1979, provided: "All orders and rules relating to the practice of accounting made by the board of public accountants prior to July 1, 1979, remain in effect until revoked or modified in accordance with law."

1979 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 489 (Ch. 684, L. 1979) provided in part: "1. The Board may establish rules setting standards for determining a practitioner's competency in specialized fields of accounting. It is contemplated the rules should address the following:

(a) the fields of specialized practice such as auditing of financial institutions, auditing of governmental entities, estate tax planning and other fields requiring specialized knowledge;

(b) types of programs required for determining competency such as classroom instruction, seminars, homestudy, experience, examination or any combination thereof;

(c) standards for determining programs to be approved for fulfillment of the requirements such as adequacy of facilities, qualifications of instructors, course content and endorsement by other regulatory agencies or professional or educational groups;

(d) the number of hours of instruction or experience, if any, required;

(e) contents of examinations, if any, required;

(f) alternative methods of fulfilling the requirements such as intrafirm or company programs and a provision for waiver of the requirements for hardship.

The rules may not prohibit the person holding a license or certificate from practicing in any area or field of public accounting nor affect his ability to acquire annual renewal of his certificate or license.

2. The Board may establish rules governing education requirements for certification or licensure. It is contemplated that the rules should supplement and interpret 37-50-305 as amended by the bill by:

(a) making determinations as to recognized colleges and universities. The Board may use the University System schools of business as a yardstick;

(b) determining standards for accepting college graduates with majors other than accounting, including but not limited to:

(i) the minimum number of accounting credits required;

(ii) subjects of courses allowed as supplementary business-related courses; and

(iii) the total number of credits required in business administration.

3. The Board may adopt rules prescribing continuing education for continued practice in public accounting. It is contemplated that they should address the following:

(a) types of programs required for determining knowledge and competence such as classroom instruction, seminars, homestudy, experience, examination, or any combination thereof;

(b) standards for determining programs to be approved for fulfillment of the requirements such as adequacy of facilities, qualifications of instructors, course content and endorsement by other regulatory agencies or professional or national groups;

(c) the number of hours of instruction or experience, if any, required;

(d) contents of examinations, if any, required;

(e) alternative methods of fulfilling the requirements such as intrafirm or intracompany programs or prospective programs of study;

(f) methods of monitoring and enforcement;

(g) the rules may not deny a person the ability to acquire annual renewal of his certificate or license if continuing education requirements constitute a hardship due to inaccessibility to programs or interference with an interstate practice;

(h) the rules should reflect standards for continuing education programs to ensure equal access, reasonable cost, exceptions for financial or physical hardships or impediments and reference to areas commonly and not rarely practiced by those engaged in public accounting.

4. The Board may establish rules governing partnerships and corporations practicing public accountancy. It is contemplated that the rules should address the following:

(a) the financial ability of a partnership or corporation to protect the public from damages caused by negligence or malpractice, if any;

(b) the method of establishing financial ability such as unimpaired capital, professional liability insurance, self-insurance or mutual insurance, or agreement;

(c) other areas of regulation regarding firm style, name, title, affiliations, and joint and several liability of members or shareholders are governed by existing statutory law regulating partnerships and professional corporations.

5. The Board may establish rules setting forth terms, not exceeding two years, and areas of experience for original certification or licensure. It is contemplated that the rules should address the following:

(a) the duration of experience required, not to exceed two years;

(b) the areas of experience such as private, public or governmental accounting, or accounting experience as an educator, researcher, publisher or military serviceman, or combination thereof;

(c) the rules should not discriminate between the areas of experience."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 429 deleted (2) through (5) that read: "(2) After the expiration of the 3-year period immediately following the effective date of a board rule establishing continuing education requirements, each application for renewal of a permit by a person who has held his certificate or license for 3 years or more must be accompanied or supported by evidence satisfactory to the board of fulfillment of such requirements during the 3-year period immediately preceding the application.

(3) The board may in its discretion waive the requirement stated in subsection (2) if the applicant agrees to follow a particular program or schedule of continuing education agreeable to the board.

(4) The board may relax or suspend continuing education requirements for an applicant who certifies that he does not intend to engage in the practice of public accounting and for an applicant who cannot fulfill the requirement due to individual hardship.

(5) Subject to subsections (3) and (4), the board may revoke, suspend, or refuse to renew the permit of an applicant who fails to furnish evidence of having met the continuing education requirements established by the board"; and made minor changes in style.

There is an annual certificate or license renewal fee in an amount to be determined by the board. Annual certificates and licenses expire on December 31 of each year and may be renewed for a period of 1 year by certified public accountants and licensed public accountants in good standing on payment of the annual renewal fee."; deleted former (2), which read: "A person who fails to renew his license or certificate shall promptly surrender it to the board upon request."; in (2) inserted "of a permit" after "renewal"; in (5) substituted "permit" for "certificate or license"; inserted (6) requiring current annual permit to be displayed.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 489 (Ch. 684, L. 1979) provided in part: "Section 13 allows the Board to prescribe a reasonable annual renewal fee. It is intended that the fee not exceed an amount necessary to meet administrative costs."

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

Statute of Limitations Barring Professional Negligence Claim Against Accountant Who Entered Business With Client: Brevig's company executed a cattle share agreement with Brevig's accountant wherein the accountant purchased cattle and bulls, paid taxes on the livestock, and agreed to supply labor for the operation of the herd. In turn, the company agreed to manage the herd, cover certain expenses, market the stock, and maintain herd records. The partnership split calves born to the herd, 60% to the company and 40% to the accountant. The arrangement was profitable for both parties and produced appropriate returns on the accountant's investment. Brevig later argued that it was unethical for the accountant to go into business with the partnership because the partnership was one of the accountant's clients. The 3-year statute of limitations in 27-2-204 barred Brevig's negligence claim with respect to the cattle share agreement because the claim of professional negligence was not filed within 3 years from the time that the agreement was executed. Chapter Case Notes

Counterclaim for Payment of Commission Remanded Along With Claims for Fraud, Negligent Misrepresentation, Breach of Contract, and Breach of Covenant of Good Faith: May brought an action against a Bozeman real estate company and a real estate broker, alleging fraud, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress, negligent misrepresentation, and professional negligence. The defendants counterclaimed for payment of their commission, and the District Court granted summary judgment for the defendants and against May on all issues. The Supreme Court reversed the District Court on several of May's claims and remanded them to the District Court. The Supreme Court also held that the defendants' counterclaim for their commission, although not briefed by the parties, was so inextricably connected to the facts of those of May's claims remanded to the District Court that the counterclaim should also be remanded to the District Court for determination along with May's remaining claims. May v. ERA Landmark Real Estate of Bozeman, 2000 MT 299, 302 M 326, 15 P3d 1179, 57 St. Rep. 1256 (2000).

Professional Negligence — Expert Testimony Required to Establish Standard of Care — Statutory Standard Inapplicable: May sued a Bozeman real estate company and real estate agent over the sale of his service station and alleged professional negligence on the part of the agent as one of his claims for relief. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's holding that the defendants were entitled to summary judgment because May had not listed an expert witness to give expert testimony to establish the standard of care for the agent. The Supreme Court distinguished Durbin v. Ross, 276 M 463, 916 P2d 758 (1996), and relied upon Newville v. St., 267 M 237, 883 P2d 793 (1994), reasoning that real estate sales is among the professions requiring special knowledge and that a lay jury could not pass judgment on the question of whether an individual correctly used that knowledge without the assistance of expert testimony. The Supreme Court also held that inasmuch as 37-51-313 had not been enacted until after the instant case arose, the statute could not be relied on to provide express duties of the agent. May v. ERA Landmark Real Estate of Bozeman, 2000 MT 299, 302 M 326, 15 P3d 1179, 57 St. Rep. 1256 (2000).

Real Estate Sale — Alleged Breach of Fiduciary Duties Held Repetitious of Other Claims: May brought an action against a Bozeman real estate company and agent, claiming that defendants breached their fiduciary duty to him and also alleging fraud, professional negligence, negligent misrepresentation, and bad faith. The Supreme Court held that the District Court properly dismissed the claim for breach of fiduciary duties, which May alleged on the basis of Durbin v. Ross, 276 M 463, 916 P2d 758 (1996), because that claim was based upon the same facts as the other claims, was therefore repetitious of those other claims, and added nothing to May's claims for relief. May v. ERA Landmark Real Estate of Bozeman, 2000 MT 299, 302 M 326, 15 P3d 1179, 57 St. Rep. 1256 (2000).

Real Estate Sale — Disclosure Statement Not Susceptible to Violation — Standard Listing Agreement Violation: In an action against a realtor for breach of contract, May alleged violation of both a document entitled "Disclosure Regarding Types of Real Estate Agency Relationships Available" (disclosure statement), listing the duties of a real estate agent, and a "Standard Listing Contract". The Supreme Court held that the disclosure statement was not a contract and could not serve as the basis for a breach of contract action. The Supreme Court also held that the Standard Listing Contract could be violated and that May had sufficiently alleged breach of a specific provision of that contract, that provision being one that the broker was employed to find a buyer ready and willing to acquire the property on the terms stated in the contract, to survive a motion for summary judgment. May v. ERA Landmark Real Estate of Bozeman, 2000 MT 299, 302 M 326, 15 P3d 1179, 57 St. Rep. 1256 (2000).

Qualifications of Real Estate Experts — Differing Valuation: At a hearing concerning the valuation and division of property in the dissolution of Maureen and Joseph's marriage, an agricultural real estate broker testified for Maureen that the parties' ranch was worth $398,000 to $400,000, while a certified and licensed property appraiser testified for Joseph that the ranch was worth $182,500. Joseph contended that the District Court erred in accepting the value of the ranch as testified to by the real estate broker because the broker had no experience as a real property appraiser. Citing Jim's Excavating Serv., Inc. v. HKM Associates, 265 M 494, 878 P2d 248 (1994), the Supreme Court held that whether an adequate foundation has been established for the admission of expert testimony is an issue largely within the discretion of the District Court and that the District Court did not abuse its discretion when it relied upon the testimony of the real estate broker. The Supreme Court therefore affirmed the part of the District Court's order that valued the parties' ranch at $400,000. In re Marriage of Ortiz, 282 M 500, 938 P2d 1308, 54 St. Rep. 446 (1997).

Sale Not Occurring — Broker Entitled to Commission Based on Terms of Contract: Language in a listing agreement was clear and unambiguous in stating that a broker was entitled to a commission upon procuring a buyer who was "ready and willing to purchase" and who entered into a written agreement to make the purchase. The District Court did not err in granting summary judgment in favor of the broker when the seller was obligated to pay the commission even though the proposed sale did not go through. Sayegusa v. Rogers, 256 M 269, 846 P2d 1005, 50 St. Rep. 89 (1993), followed in Johnson v. Nyhart, 269 M 379, 889 P2d 1170, 52 St. Rep. 37 (1995).

Variation From Terms of Listing Contract — No Entitlement to Commission: When differences in the sale offers produced by a real estate broker varied substantially from the terms of the listing contract, the broker was not entitled to a commission on the sale of the property. Watson v. Fultz, 239 M 364, 782 P2d 361, 46 St. Rep. 1751 (1989).

Commission Reduction Agreement Not Breach of Fiduciary Duty: Cady listed his ranch for sale with Ussin, a realtor. Ussin found a buyer in Ehly. Ussin advised Ehly that Cady would not accept Ehly's offer but that Ussin would reduce his commission to make a sale. The agreement entered was that Ussin would reduce his commission by the amount between what Cady wanted and what Ehly wanted to pay. This was not communicated to Cady. A buy-sell was entered, and Cady later breached. He refused to pay Ussin his commission. The District Court awarded Ussin his commission. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that the fiduciary duty of a realtor to the seller is breached if: (1) a seller is foiled or deceived by the contract or does not understand the contract; or (2) full disclosure of all pertinent facts is not made by the broker. The court held that although arguably Ussin had breached his duty to Cady by not disclosing all pertinent facts, there was no damage to Cady. The flow of money to Cady was the same regardless of the commission reduction agreement. Cady suffered no prejudice or damage from the agreement. Ussin was entitled to his commission. Ehly v. Cady, 212 M 82, 687 P2d 687, 41 St. Rep. 1611 (1984).

Duty of Broker to Disclose: The fiduciary relationship which exists between a broker and his client imposed upon plaintiff a duty to verbally disclose a number of facts which were not disclosed verbally, although contained in the listing agreement. These included the fact that defendants could not withdraw plaintiff's authority under the agreement without forfeiting a sizable commission, and could not sell the property on their own during the term of the agreement. The District Court erred in finding there was no fraud involved in the execution of the employment contract. Lyle v. Moore, 183 M 274, 599 P2d 336, 36 St. Rep. 1307 (1979), followed in Watson v. Fultz, 239 M 364, 782 P2d 361, 46 St. Rep. 1751 (1989).

Scope of Act — Honest Mistake: The Real Estate License Act of 1963 (Ch. 250, L. 1963) should be construed to lend maximum efficacy to the enforcement of the fiduciary relationships involved in the real estate profession. However, willful misconduct must be present as opposed to an "honest" mistake, regardless of the argument that another course of conduct or the lack of some negligence would have avoided the situation complained of. Van Ettinger v. Pappin, 180 M 1, 588 P2d 988, 35 St. Rep. 1956 (1978), partially overruled in Cechovic v. Hardin & Associates, Inc., 273 M 104, 902 P2d 520, 52 St. Rep. 854 (1995).

Case Notes

Inability to Obtain Real Estate Financing — Return of Earnest Money Proper: Defendants secured prequalification on a real estate loan and, pursuant to the buy-sell agreement, paid $53,000 in earnest money to purchase a condominium from plaintiff. The buy-sell agreement required the defendants to obtain financing for the remaining $946,000 of the purchase price. However, the economic climate later changed and required the need for a larger down payment, which defendants did not have. Defendants notified plaintiff and requested the return of the earnest money, but plaintiff refused and filed a fraud action, contending that defendants falsely represented their borrowing status and failed to obtain the required financing. The District Court summarily dismissed the fraud claims because the purchase agreement provided that if conventional financing could not be obtained, the agreement was void. On appeal, plaintiff asserted that a genuine issue of material fact remained regarding the fraud claims, precluding summary judgment. The Supreme Court disagreed. It was undisputed that defendants applied for loans and were prequalified for financing, so defendants did not misrepresent their borrowing status. Summary dismissal of the fraud claims was appropriate as a matter of law, particularly because plaintiff had the opportunity to be heard on the issue. The District Court properly terminated the purchase agreement when defendants could not obtain financing, and plaintiff was correctly ordered to return the earnest money. Mill Creek Ltd. Partnership v. Lodge, 2010 MT 65, 355 Mont. 478, 228 P.3d 1144.

Agreement for Commission for Sale of Real Estate Not in Writing — Summary Judgment Denying Commission Affirmed: Andersen assisted in the sale of Schenk's ranch, and although Schenk allegedly told Andersen that Andersen would receive a commission on the sale, no listing agreement was ever reduced to writing. The District Court granted summary judgment for Schenk on the commission issue because 28-2-903 provides that a real estate agreement authorizing an agent to transact for a commission is invalid if it is not in writing. Even though Schenk allegedly told Andersen that a commission would be earned if the ranch sold for at least $10 million, the sale price was $6.5 million, so Andersen could not hold Schenk to an agreement that Schenk never made. Absent a genuine issue of material fact, summary judgment for Schenk was affirmed. Andersen v. Schenk, 2009 MT 399, 353 M 424, 220 P3d 675 (2009).

Simultaneous Representation of More Than One Buyer by Same Buyer Agent — Conflict of Interest: Because a buyer agent must act solely in the best interests of the buyer, a conflict of interest and breach of obligation arises when a buyer agent simultaneously represents more than one buyer competing for the same property. Zuazua v. Tibbles, 2006 MT 342, 335 M 181, 150 P3d 361 (2006).

Officers of National Realty Corporation Not Brokers — Distinction Between "Fee" and "Commission": The officers of a national corporation that provides licensed brokers with catalogs, confidential listings, and referrals for a commission received only after a sale are not acting as "brokers". The forbidden act is the collection of a fee for advertisement of real estate for sale, and there is a distinction between a fee and a commission collected only after an actual sale. Bradt v. Strout Realty, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 1259, 36 St. Rep. 1989 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Questions of Law: Whether plaintiff was doing business in Montana within purview of statute governing foreign corporations or was carrying on business of a real estate broker were questions of law under 26-1-201. Union Interchange, Inc. v. Parker, 138 M 348, 357 P2d 339 (1960).

Attorney General's Opinions

License Not Required for Advertising Real Estate Information: The mere advertisement of a seller's property for a fee charged to the seller does not constitute an act regulated by real estate licensing law. Therefore, a person is not required to be licensed as a real estate broker or salesperson in order to obtain and organize information from potential sellers of real estate and to advertise the information to interested potential buyers for a fee charged to the seller only. 43 A.G. Op. 8 (1989), distinguishing 34 A.G. Op. 23 (1972).

Licensing Regulations Not Applicable to Finder's Fee: A person is not required to be licensed as a real estate broker or salesperson in order to receive a fee, commission, or compensation for referring the name of a potential buyer of real estate. Further, a broker's license should not be revoked or suspended for paying a finder's fee when the payee does not perform any negotiation or other services regulated by real estate licensing law. 43 A.G. Op. 8 (1989), distinguishing 34 A.G. Op. 23 (1972).

"Broker" and "Salesman" (now "Salesperson") — Scope of Definitions: The definitions of "broker" and "salesman" (now "salesperson") include individuals engaged in the business of renting or leasing real property, transacting interests in condominiums, providing lists of real property rentals, or arranging fee ownership time-sharing of real property. 40 A.G. Op. 54 (1984).

Computer Referral Service: Corporations operating a computer referral service for the purpose of promoting the sale, lease, or disposition of real estate within the state must comply with the licensing requirements of Title 37, ch. 51, part 3, in order to conduct operations in Montana. 34 A.G. Op. 23 (1971).

1997 Amendment: Chapter 251 in (1), near middle of introductory clause after "section", substituted "must identify" for "shall constitute"; in (1)(b), near beginning before "special", deleted "duly executed"; inserted (1)(i) exempting a person who performs acts with respect to certain right-of-way transfers, condemnations, or governmental or tribal permits from licensure requirements; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Amendment: Pursuant to sec. 6, Ch. 565, L. 1995, the Code Commissioner in (1) substituted "salesperson" for "salesman".

1989 Amendments: Chapter 180, in (1)(b), after "executed", inserted "special or general", after "authorizing the" deleted "final consummation of any contract for the", and after "real estate" inserted language clarifying that attorney-in-fact exemption from licensing requirement does not apply to a person who regularly, consistently, or for commission or consideration participates in a real estate transaction for another in conjunction with business or to avoid licensing requirements.

Chapter 314 near beginning of (1), before "compensation", deleted "a commission or"; inserted (2) excepting general circulation print and broadcast media; and made minor changes in grammar and style.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 180, L. 1989, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds that there presently is an attorney-in-fact exemption from the requirement that a person be licensed as a real estate broker or salesman [now salesperson]; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds that there is a potential use of the attorney-in-fact exemption by certain persons on a regular or consistent basis, thereby allowing those persons to avoid license requirements and negating adequate safeguards to the public; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds the present attorney-in-fact exemption is limited to one based on a special power of attorney; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds that the attorney-in-fact exemption from the requirement that a person be licensed as a real estate broker or salesman [now salesperson] should be expanded to include a general power of attorney.

THEREFORE, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds it appropriate to expand the attorney-in-fact exemption to include one based on a general power of attorney and to limit all attorney-in-fact exemptions to occasional use under circumstances in which it is reasonably certain that adequate safeguards to the public are maintained."

Agent Seller — Bond Coverage: Members of the public have the right to rely upon express or implied representations of a licensed real estate agent or broker, although the agent is in fact the owner of the property being sold. Therefore, the surety is bound by such express or implied representations, and the bond must cover such judgments entered. Twite v. W. Sur. Co., 176 M 286, 577 P2d 1219 (1978).

Advertising Not Dealing: Advertising for purpose of bringing buyers and sellers together is not dealing in real estate for license purposes. Union Interchange, Inc. v. Parker, 138 M 348, 357 P2d 339 (1960).

Isolated Transactions: Under former provision (sec. 3, Ch. 195, L. 1921, repealed by Ch. 250, L. 1963) defining real estate broker and setting forth classes exempted from Ch. 195, L. 1921, provision similar to present 37-51-401 had no application to one who acted as a broker in connection with a single transaction only. Harbolt v. Hensen, 78 M 228, 253 P 257 (1927).

Case Notes

No Board Requirement to Rule With Particularity on Objections and Exceptions: Proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law as prepared by a hearing examiner detailed the factual basis for his conclusion that the Board of Realty Regulation had power to suspend or revoke Sorini's broker's license. Prior to her appearance before the full Board, Sorini submitted her contentions of claimed error in the findings and conclusions. The Board considered these contentions and voted unanimously to adopt the findings and conclusions of the hearing examiner. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that Sorini was entitled to nothing further and that the Board was not required to specifically state in writing that her exceptions to the proposed findings were insufficient. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Penalty Not Unusual or Unwarranted: Sorini argued that the revocation of her broker's license was based on a finding by a hearing examiner that the mortgage on her client's home was foreclosed due to her actions. The violations with which she was charged did not include causing the foreclosure, and she maintained that she was punished to an unusual and unwarranted degree for the violations with which she was charged. The Supreme Court noted that the Board of Realty Regulation found that Sorini had violated three statutory prohibitions under 37-51-321, any one of which would result in revocation or suspension at the Board's discretion. There were enough facts before the Board to allow revocation without considering whether Sorini caused the foreclosure. The court held that the penalty was not unusual or unwarranted. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Revocation of Real Estate Broker's License — No Denial of Rights at Administrative Hearing — Hearing Examiner and Board Attorney as Deputy Attorneys General: A hearing examiner recommended that Sorini's real estate broker's license be revoked for violations of 37-51-321. On appeal, Sorini argued that she was denied her rights at the administrative hearing because both the hearing examiner and the attorney for the Board of Realty Regulation were deputies in the Attorney General's office; however, she failed to submit any proof to support this allegation. The Supreme Court noted that 2-4-611 establishes the manner in which a party may file an affidavit for disqualification of a hearing examiner, holding that in the absence of an affidavit it was not proper to raise the issue on appeal. The court agreed that having a greater separation of prosecutorial and decisionmaking functions would eliminate an appearance of impropriety, but found nothing to warrant a reversal of the District Court. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Part Case Notes

Intentional Violation Not Required to Recover Under Real Estate License Laws: Saville, the seller, and her realtor were sued by the purchasers of her property. The suit was based on negligent misrepresentation of the boundaries of the property by the realtor. Saville cross-claimed for indemnification against the realtor for any judgment obtained against her by the plaintiffs and was awarded indemnification by the jury. Hardin, the realtor, appealed, arguing that Saville was not an aggrieved person as contemplated by this chapter. The Supreme Court held that Saville did not have to show that the misrepresentation made by the realtor was a malicious or intentional violation of the chapter in order to be an aggrieved person under the chapter. Cechovic v. Hardin & Associates, Inc., 273 M 104, 902 P2d 520, 52 St. Rep. 854 (1995), partially overruling Van Ettinger v. Pappin, 180 M 1, 588 P2d 988 (1978).

No Recovery When Seller Owns Property: The plaintiffs sought to recover for a real estate loss from the state's real estate recovery account. The plaintiffs had been part of a partnership in which the general partner had fraudulently sold some of his own property in a manner that caused the partnership to lose money. The Supreme Court held that when an owner sells his own property, no real estate license is required and therefore under the terms of the statute, no recovery is available from the state's fund. (Decided prior to 1989 amendments.) Yellowstone Valley Properties v. Bd. of Realty Regulation, 243 M 241, 794 P2d 341, 47 St. Rep. 1209 (1990).

Advice to Broker by Nonlicensed Corporate Employee: The act of a nonlicensed employee of a national corporation, whose job was to procure brokers to enter into contracts with the corporation, in accompanying a broker to get a real estate listing and in advising the broker how to set up a "net listing" did not put the corporation out of compliance with this section. The employee was not an "officer" of the corporation in the usual sense, and his actions did not amount to the negotiation of a listing. Bradt v. Strout Realty, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 1259, 36 St. Rep. 1989 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Licensing of Corporate Officers: It is not required that every officer of a corporation be licensed, only those officers who "perform the functions of a broker". By way of illustration, the president of a Montana corporation who himself did no real estate business of any kind but simply managed the office and general corporate affairs would not need to be licensed. The purpose of Montana law is to require that the buying and selling of real estate be handled by persons who are licensed. Bradt v. Strout Realty, Inc., 478 F. Supp. 1259, 36 St. Rep. 1989 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Advertising Not Dealing: Advertising for purpose of bringing buyers and sellers together is not dealing in real estate for license purposes. Union Interchange, Inc. v. Parker, 138 M 348, 357 P2d 339 (1960).

Case Notes

Charges of Incompetence and Untrustworthiness Not Determined by Issuance of Broker's License: A complaint was filed against Sorini, a licensed real estate salesperson, for violations of 37-51-321 relating to her competence and trustworthiness. After charges were filed, she was allowed to sit for the real estate broker's examination and was subsequently issued a broker's license. On appeal, she argued that the question of her competence or trustworthiness became moot because the Board of Realty Regulation was required to consider those characteristics before issuing her a broker's license under this section. The Supreme Court noted that while the Board is required by statute to determine that an applicant for a broker's license meets certain standards, in the absence of evidence that the Board considered the pending charges, the determination that she met the standards of conduct was not dispositive of the pending charges against her. The court found no such evidence in the record and concluded that the issue of competence and trustworthiness as raised by the charges was not determined by the issuance of the real estate broker's license. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

No Board Requirement to Rule With Particularity on Objections and Exceptions: Proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law as prepared by a hearing examiner detailed the factual basis for his conclusion that the Board of Realty Regulation had power to suspend or revoke Sorini's broker's license. Prior to her appearance before the full Board, Sorini submitted her contentions of claimed error in the findings and conclusions. The Board considered these contentions and voted unanimously to adopt the findings and conclusions of the hearing examiner. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that Sorini was entitled to nothing further and that the Board was not required to specifically state in writing that her exceptions to the proposed findings were insufficient. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

City Licensing: A city can license local aspects of interstate commerce if not a direct burden or impediment; but, enterprises preempted by state regulation are not subject to city licensing. 37 A.G. Op. 100 (1977).

Case Notes

No Duty by Seller's Agent to Inspect or Discover Adverse Facts: The requirement to "ascertain all pertinent facts" found in 37-51-313(13) is not a restatement of common law duties and does not require a seller's agent to inspect property or verify a seller's statements. Rather, it is a duty to disclose any adverse facts that the seller's agent is aware of and to disclose when the seller's agent has no personal knowledge of the veracity of the seller's statements. Watterud v. Gilbraith, 2015 MT 288, 381 Mont. 218, 358 P.3d 891.

Simultaneous Representation of More Than One Buyer by Same Buyer Agent — Conflict of Interest: Because a buyer agent must act solely in the best interests of the buyer, a conflict of interest and breach of obligation arises when a buyer agent simultaneously represents more than one buyer competing for the same property. Zuazua v. Tibbles, 2006 MT 342, 335 M 181, 150 P3d 361 (2006).

Professional Negligence — Expert Testimony Required to Establish Standard of Care — Statutory Standard Inapplicable: May sued a Bozeman real estate company and real estate agent over the sale of his service station and alleged professional negligence on the part of the agent as one of his claims for relief. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's holding that the defendants were entitled to summary judgment because May had not listed an expert witness to give expert testimony to establish the standard of care for the agent. The Supreme Court distinguished Durbin v. Ross, 276 M 463, 916 P2d 758 (1996), and relied upon Newville v. St., 267 M 237, 883 P2d 793 (1994), reasoning that real estate sales is among the professions requiring special knowledge and that a lay jury could not pass judgment on the question of whether an individual correctly used that knowledge without the assistance of expert testimony. The Supreme Court also held that inasmuch as this section had not been enacted until after the instant case arose, the statute could not be relied on to provide express duties of the agent. May v. ERA Landmark Real Estate of Bozeman, 2000 MT 299, 302 M 326, 15 P3d 1179, 57 St. Rep. 1256 (2000).

(a) Seller agent disclosure to the seller: "(Name of seller agent) will be representing you as your agent or subagent in the sale of your property located at (address of property). Your seller agent is obligated to you as enumerated below. If your seller agent is also representing a buyer who becomes interested in your property, a dual agency may be created. In a dual agency relationship, the seller agent is obligated to the buyer in the same way as to you. This conflict will prohibit the seller agent from advocating exclusively on your behalf or the buyer's behalf and may limit the level of representation you receive. (b) Seller agent disclosure to the buyer: "(Name of seller agent) is the agent of the seller with respect to the seller's property located at (address of property). Although the seller agent is primarily obligated to the seller, the seller agent is obligated to you as specified below.

A seller agent is obligated to a buyer as follows:

(1) to disclose to a buyer any adverse material facts that concern the property and that are known to the seller agent;

(2) to deal in good faith with the buyer; and

(3) to comply with all applicable federal and state laws, rules, and regulations.

"Adverse material fact" means a fact that should be recognized by a broker as being of enough significance as to affect a person's decision to enter into a contract to buy or sell real property and may be a fact that materially affects the value or structural integrity or presents a documented health risk to occupants of the property. The term may not include the fact that an occupant of the property has or has had a communicable disease or that the property was the site of a suicide or felony."

(c) Buyer agent disclosure to the buyer: "(Name of buyer agent) will be representing you as your agent or subagent in the purchase of real property of the nature described in the buyer broker agreement. (7) to comply with all applicable federal and state laws, rules, and regulations; and

(8) to carry out the terms of the buyer broker agreement."

(d) Buyer agent disclosure to the seller: "(Name of buyer agent) is representing the buyer with respect to the seller's property located at (address of property). Although the buyer agent is primarily obligated to the buyer, the buyer agent is obligated to you as specified below.

A buyer agent is obligated to a seller as follows:

(1) to disclose to a seller any adverse material facts that concern the ability of the buyer to perform on any purchase offer and that are known to the buyer agent;

(2) to deal in good faith with the seller; and

(3) to comply with all applicable federal and state laws, rules, and regulations.

"Adverse material fact" means a fact that should be recognized by a broker as being of enough significance as to affect a person's decision to enter into a contract to buy or sell real property and may be a fact that materially affects the buyer's ability or intent to perform the buyer's obligations under a proposed or existing contract."

(e) Statutory broker disclosure to the buyer and seller: "(Name of statutory broker) will be involved as a statutory broker with respect to the purchase and sale of real property located at (address). A statutory broker is not the agent of the buyer or seller but is only assisting the parties in executing a sale of the property. A statutory broker is obligated to the buyer and seller as specified below.

A statutory broker is obligated to the parties as follows:

(1) to disclose to a buyer any adverse material fact that concerns the property and that is known to the statutory broker and not known to the buyer. However, the statutory broker is not required to conduct an independent inspection of the property or to verify any representation made by the seller.

(2) to disclose to the seller any adverse material fact that concerns the buyer's intent or ability to perform on the purchase offer and that is known to the statutory broker and not known to the seller;

(3) to exercise reasonable skill, care, and diligence in facilitating the purchase and sale of the property; and

(4) to comply with all applicable federal and state laws, rules, and regulations.

"Adverse material fact" means a fact that should be recognized by a broker as being of enough significance as to affect a person's decision to enter into a contract to buy or sell real property. (f) Dual agent disclosure to the buyer and seller: "(Name of dual agent) is the agent of the buyer interested in purchasing the property and of the seller of the property located at (address of property). A dual agent is obligated to the buyer and seller as follows:

(1) to act solely in the best interests of the buyer and seller to the exclusion of all other interests including the dual agent's;

(2) to obey promptly and efficiently all lawful instructions of the buyer and seller;

(3) to disclose to the buyer and seller all relevant and material information that concerns the real estate transaction and that is known by the dual agent and not known by the buyer or seller, unless the information is subject to confidentiality arising from a prior or existing agency relationship;

(4) to exercise reasonable skill, care, and diligence in pursuing the buyer's and seller's objectives as established in the listing agreement and buyer broker agreement;

(5) to fully account to the buyer and seller for all funds or property of the buyer and seller coming into the dual agent's possession;

(6) to comply with all applicable federal and state laws, rules, and regulations;

(7) to carry out the terms of the buyer broker agreement; and

(8) to safeguard the buyer's and seller's confidences, subject to the obligation to disclose to a buyer or a seller any adverse material facts that are known to the dual agent, regardless of any confidentiality considerations. The following may not be disclosed without the written consent of the party to whom the information is confidential:

(a) that the buyer is willing to pay more than the buyer has offered for the property;

(b) that the seller is willing to accept less than the asking price for the property;

(c) factors motivating the buyer to buy or the seller to sell; and

(d) any other information that a party specifically indicates in writing to the dual agent is to be kept confidential and that is not an adverse material fact.

"Adverse material fact" means a fact that should be recognized by a broker as being of enough significance as to affect a person's decision to enter into a contract to buy or sell real property. It may be a fact that materially affects the value or structural integrity or presents a documented health risk to occupants of the property, but may not include the fact that an occupant of the property has or has had a communicable disease or that the property was the site of a suicide or felony, or it may be a fact that materially affects the buyer's ability or intent to perform the buyer's obligations under a proposed or existing contract.

Upon signing this disclosure form, the buyer and seller acknowledge that they understand the obligations owed by a dual agent to them and consent to the dual agent representing them as a dual agent""; inserted (7) setting out form of subsequent disclosure; inserted (8) setting out information permitted in any required disclosure; and made minor changes in style. Case Notes

Alleged Failure to Disclose Agency Relationship — Resolution of Conflicting Evidence — Alternative Findings Not Required: Garrison purchased property on Flathead Lake through Averill, a real estate broker. Later, Garrison filed suit against Averill and the seller of the property, alleging that he, Garrison, considered Averill his agent and relied on Averill to represent his interests and that Averill was aware of that reliance. Garrison also argued that the District Court ignored testimony from his expert to the effect that Averill breached the standard of care by failing to document his disclosure to Garrison of his agency relationship with the seller. Garrison also alleged that Averill was negligent and that the negligence caused Garrison's damages. The Supreme Court pointed out testimony in the record from Averill's expert and concluded that the District Court had not ignored the testimony presented by Garrison but simply resolved conflicting evidence against Garrison. Citing Yellowstone Basin Properties, Inc. v. Burgess, 255 M 341, 843 P2d 341 (1992), the Supreme Court held that just because there is evidence in the record on which the District Court could have based certain findings of fact does not require the District Court to make those findings. Garrison v. Averill, 282 M 508, 938 P2d 702, 54 St. Rep. 454 (1997).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 294 in (1)(r) substituted "supervising broker" for "registered broker" and at end inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 170 in (1)(a) near middle of second sentence after "broker's own name" substituted "or" for "in the franchise name or logotype or does not conspicuously display, on the broker's letterhead and other printed materials available to the public, a statement that the broker's office is independently owned and operated and" and at end inserted "in the franchise name or logotype". Amendment effective March 24, 1999.

Purported Repeal — Coordination: Section 128, Ch. 429, L. 1995, repealed this section, but sec. 130, Ch. 429, L. 1995, a coordination section, voided the repeal.

Case Notes

Expert Testimony Unnecessary on Issue of Standard of Care — District Court Not Directed as to All Expert Testimony on All Claims: Durbins purchased a home through the seller's realtors. Contrary to the representations of the realtors, Durbins discovered that the property had no legal septic system, that the household water was unsafe to use for any purpose, and that the access road was located on the neighbor's property. Durbins brought an action against the realtors, alleging negligent misrepresentation, actual and constructive fraud, and statutory violations involving the Montana real estate licensing laws and the Montana Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act of 1973. The defendants sought and achieved dismissal of the case on the grounds that Durbins failed to prove through expert testimony the applicable standard of care of the realtors. The Supreme Court held that expert witnesses were unnecessary to prove a standard of care. Durbins also asked that the Supreme Court direct the District Court to exclude testimony of any expert witnesses on any claim asserted by the Durbins. The Supreme Court noted that the District Courts have great latitude concerning the admissibility of evidence and that the District Court would in any event have to comply with Rule 702, M.R.Ev. (Title 26, ch. 10). The Supreme Court therefore declined to direct the District Court as requested by the Durbins. Durbin v. Ross, 276 M 463, 716 P2d 758, 53 St. Rep. 471 (1996).

Board of Realty Regulation Not Empowered to Award Damages — Complaint to Board Inadequate Notice of Legal Claim: The Board of Realty Regulation may only revoke or suspend a broker's license and has no power to award damages for negligence or fraud. Further, because the Board is not designated by law as a quasi-judicial board pursuant to 2-15-124, a complaint to the Board does not give adequate notice of the existence of a legal claim. Erickson v. Croft, 233 M 146, 760 P2d 706, 45 St. Rep. 1379 (1988).

No Duty to Disclose What Seller Already Knows: On the question of a real estate agent's duty to inform sellers of the buyer's offer to secure the balance of the purchase price for property with bonds encumbered by margin loans, the Supreme Court noted that the sellers' attorneys were aware of this fact from buyer's initial proposals. The real estate agent had no duty to disclose what the sellers already knew. Bills v. Hannah, Inc., 230 M 250, 749 P2d 1076, 45 St. Rep. 179 (1988).

No False Representations by Real Estate Agent — Dismissal Proper: Real estate agent was properly dismissed from an action involving fraudulent misrepresentations of income by the seller of a business when it was found the agent concealed nothing from buyers and had no knowledge of and made no representations to buyers concerning business profitability. Selvidge v. McBeen, 230 M 237, 750 P2d 429, 45 St. Rep. 168 (1988).

Charges of Incompetence and Untrustworthiness Not Determined by Issuance of Broker's License: A complaint was filed against Sorini, a licensed real estate salesperson, for violations of this section relating to her competence and trustworthiness. After charges were filed, she was allowed to sit for the real estate broker's examination and was subsequently issued a broker's license. On appeal, she argued that the question of her competence or trustworthiness became moot because the Board of Realty Regulation was required to consider those characteristics before issuing her a broker's license under 37-51-302. The Supreme Court noted that while the Board is required by statute to determine that an applicant for a broker's license meets certain standards, in the absence of evidence that the Board considered the pending charges, the determination that she met the standards of conduct was not dispositive of the pending charges against her. The court found no such evidence in the record and concluded that the issue of competence and trustworthiness as raised by the charges was not determined by the issuance of the real estate broker's license. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

No Board Requirement to Rule With Particularity on Objections and Exceptions: Proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law as prepared by a hearing examiner detailed the factual basis for his conclusion that the Board of Realty Regulation had power to suspend or revoke Sorini's broker's license. Prior to her appearance before the full Board, Sorini submitted her contentions of claimed error in the findings and conclusions. The Board considered these contentions and voted unanimously to adopt the findings and conclusions of the hearing examiner. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that Sorini was entitled to nothing further and that the Board was not required to specifically state in writing that her exceptions to the proposed findings were insufficient. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Penalty Not Unusual or Unwarranted: Sorini argued that the revocation of her broker's license was based on a finding by a hearing examiner that the mortgage on her client's home was foreclosed due to her actions. The violations with which she was charged did not include causing the foreclosure, and she maintained that she was punished to an unusual and unwarranted degree for the violations with which she was charged. The Supreme Court noted that the Board of Realty Regulation found that Sorini had violated three statutory prohibitions under this section, any one of which would result in revocation or suspension at the Board's discretion. There were enough facts before the Board to allow revocation without considering whether Sorini caused the foreclosure. The court held that the penalty was not unusual or unwarranted. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Revocation of Real Estate Broker's License — No Denial of Rights at Administrative Hearing — Hearing Examiner and Board Attorney as Deputy Attorneys General: A hearing examiner recommended that Sorini's real estate broker's license be revoked for violations of this section. On appeal, Sorini argued that she was denied her rights at the administrative hearing because both the hearing examiner and the attorney for the Board of Realty Regulation were deputies in the Attorney General's office; however, she failed to submit any proof to support this allegation. The Supreme Court noted that 2-4-611 establishes the manner in which a party may file an affidavit for disqualification of a hearing examiner, holding that in the absence of an affidavit it was not proper to raise the issue on appeal. The court agreed that having a greater separation of prosecutorial and decisionmaking functions would eliminate an appearance of impropriety, but found nothing to warrant a reversal of the District Court. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Broker Malpractice — Failure to Provide Copy of Assignment: A real estate agent was found by the trial court to have been culpable of broker malpractice along with her broker in failing to supply purchasers, who had assigned their purchase interest to the agent and broker, with a copy of the assignment. However, the Supreme Court held that the agent was in no position to give the purchasers a copy of the assignment because not all the purchasers signed the assignment at the same time. The agent turned the partially signed document over to the broker for the remaining purchaser to sign. Hoefer v. Wilckens, 210 M 218, 684 P2d 468, 41 St. Rep. 1019 (1984).

Aggrieved Persons — Persons Sustaining Damages — Waiver of Damages: Appellants do not qualify as aggrieved persons or persons sustaining damages for an alleged violation of 37-51-321(9) when suing a broker over an alleged defect in an easement purportedly conveyed to the appellants because appellants failed to first establish the nonexistence of the easement in question. Secondly, and more importantly, appellants waived any claim for damages by closing the transaction after they became aware of the alleged defect in the easement. Van Ettinger v. Pappin, 180 M 1, 588 P2d 988, 35 St. Rep. 1956 (1978).

Agent Seller — Bond Coverage: Members of the public have the right to rely upon express or implied representations of a licensed real estate agent or broker, although the agent is in fact the owner of the property being sold. Therefore, the surety is bound by such express or implied representations, and the bond must cover such judgments entered. Twite v. W. Sur. Co., 176 M 286, 577 P2d 1219 (1978).

Misrepresentation Action in Real Estate Sale: The court properly awarded summary judgment to defendants in a misrepresentation action under the Montana Real Estate License Act of 1963 (Ch. 250, L. 1963) when the record indicated that no fraudulent representations were made by defendants and the Statute of Limitations had expired, notwithstanding the "discovery" exception. Anderson v. Applebury, 173 M 411, 567 P2d 951 (1977).

Fraudulent Listing: Broker who obtained exclusive listing through a discharged real estate salesman and assured seller that he would "get rid" of a prior exclusive listing of same property which seller had made with another broker was in violation of this section. Johnson v. Doran, 167 M 501, 540 P2d 306 (1975).

Wide Range of Evidence Allowed in Fraud Cases: Where broker induced sellers to sign listing agreement coupled with option to purchase, knowing different broker had exclusive listing, which caused sellers considerable expense, it was not error for trial court to allow wide range of evidence in order that fraud may be detected and exposed, as fraud assumes many shapes, disguises, and subterfuges and is generally so secretly hatched that it can only be detected by a consideration of facts and circumstances which are not infrequently trivial, remote, and disconnected. Johnson v. Doran, 167 M 501, 540 P2d 306 (1975).

Civil Liability Resulting From Violation: Vendor was entitled to cancellation of contract for sale of land as well as damages from real estate broker for misrepresentations relating to marketability of title made by broker during course of dealings with vendor in violation of subsections (2) and (3) of this section. The vendee was entitled to damages from broker for misrepresentations and failure to remit vendee's earnest money to vendor in violation of subsections (2), (3), and (5) of this section. Stafford v. Love, 151 M 270, 442 P2d 190 (1968).

Innocent Misrepresentation of Acreage: Misrepresentation as to acreage of tract offered by broker was not in itself sufficient ground for cancellation of license where acreage stated was that stated by landowner, broker had no reason to believe that acreage stated was incorrect, and prospective purchaser had been over the tract and was not deceived by the misrepresentation. Meyer v. Unroe, 139 M 174, 362 P2d 218 (1961).

Licensing Regulations Not Applicable to Finder's Fee: A person is not required to be licensed as a real estate broker or salesman in order to receive a fee, commission, or compensation for referring the name of a potential buyer of real estate. Further, a broker's license should not be revoked or suspended for paying a finder's fee when the payee does not perform any negotiation or other services regulated by real estate licensing law. 43 A.G. Case Notes

Intentional Violation Not Required to Recover Under Real Estate License Laws: Saville, the seller, and her realtor were sued by the purchasers of her property. The suit was based on negligent misrepresentation of the boundaries of the property by the realtor. Saville cross-claimed for indemnification against the realtor for any judgment obtained against her by the plaintiffs and was awarded indemnification by the jury. Hardin, the realtor, appealed, arguing that Saville was not an aggrieved person as contemplated by this chapter. The Supreme Court held that Saville did not have to show that the misrepresentation made by the realtor was a malicious or intentional violation of the chapter in order to be an aggrieved person under the chapter. Cechovic v. Hardin & Associates, Inc., 273 M 104, 902 P2d 520, 52 St. Rep. 854 (1995), partially overruling Van Ettinger v. Pappin, 180 M 1, 588 P2d 988 (1978).

Board of Realty Regulation Not Empowered to Award Damages — Complaint to Board Inadequate Notice of Legal Claim: The Board of Realty Regulation may only revoke or suspend a broker's license and has no power to award damages for negligence or fraud. Further, because the Board is not designated by law as a quasi-judicial board pursuant to 2-15-124, a complaint to the Board does not give adequate notice of the existence of a legal claim. Erickson v. Croft, 233 M 146, 760 P2d 706, 45 St. Rep. 1379 (1988).

Statute of Limitations Begins at Time of Injury: Plaintiff alleged defendant violated this section by misrepresenting himself as being a real estate broker licensed by another state. Plaintiff's complaint was filed over 2 years after the alleged tort. Plaintiff contends that defendant's alleged misrepresentation constitutes concealment of a material fact, and therefore the statute of limitations should be tolled. The court held that defendant's misrepresentation was not an affirmative act calculated to obscure plaintiff's cause of action. In nonmalpractice tort actions, the statute of limitations begins to run on the date of plaintiff's injury. This action is barred because plaintiff did not file within the 2-year period. Payne v. Stratman, 229 M 377, 747 P2d 210, 44 St. Rep. 2059 (1987).

Penalty Not Unusual or Unwarranted: Sorini argued that the revocation of her broker's license was based on a finding by a hearing examiner that the mortgage on her client's home was foreclosed due to her actions. The violations with which she was charged did not include causing the foreclosure, and she maintained that she was punished to an unusual and unwarranted degree for the violations with which she was charged. The Supreme Court noted that the Board of Realty Regulation found that Sorini had violated three statutory prohibitions under 37-51-321, any one of which would result in revocation or suspension at the Board's discretion. There were enough facts before the Board to allow revocation without considering whether Sorini caused the foreclosure. The court held that the penalty was not unusual or unwarranted. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Treble Damages Not Awarded — No Harm Caused by Realtor's Actions: No penalty was awarded under this section when an audit of a realtor's trust account indicated that even though disbursement from the client's trust account was not approved in advance by the client, the disbursements were proper and the client suffered no damages. United Farm Agency v. Blome, 198 M 435, 646 P2d 1205, 40 St. Rep. 19 (1982).

Aggrieved Persons — Persons Sustaining Damages — Waiver of Damages: Appellants do not qualify as aggrieved persons or persons sustaining damages for an alleged violation of 37-51-321(9) when suing a broker over an alleged defect in an easement purportedly conveyed to the appellants because appellants failed to first establish the nonexistence of the easement in question. Secondly, and more importantly, appellants waived any claim for damages by closing the transaction after they became aware of the alleged defect in the easement. Van Ettinger v. Pappin, 180 M 1, 588 P2d 988, 35 St. Rep. 1956 (1978).

Scope of Act — Honest Mistake: The Real Estate License Act of 1963 (Ch. 250, L. 1963) should be construed to lend maximum efficacy to the enforcement of the fiduciary relationships involved in the real estate profession. However, willful misconduct must be present as opposed to an "honest" mistake, regardless of the argument that another course of conduct or the lack of some negligence would have avoided the situation complained of. Van Ettinger v. Pappin, 180 M 1, 588 P2d 988, 35 St. Rep. 1956 (1978), partially overruled in Cechovic v. Hardin & Associates, Inc., 273 M 104, 902 P2d 520, 52 St. Rep. 854 (1995).

Misrepresentation Action in Real Estate Sale: The court properly awarded summary judgment to defendants in a misrepresentation action under the Montana Real Estate License Act of 1963 (Ch. 250, L. 1963) when the record indicated that no fraudulent representations were made by defendants and the Statute of Limitations had expired, notwithstanding the "discovery" exception. Anderson v. Applebury, 173 M 411, 567 P2d 951 (1977).

Proof of Injury: To recover under this section, plaintiff must show not only that real estate broker violated this act (Ch. 250, L. 1963) but also that plaintiff suffered damage thereby. Evidence that broker received commission is not sufficient proof of damage. Sellers who exchanged their equity in residence for cash sufficient to pay broker's commission and assignment of buyer's interest in an installment promissory note were not entitled to recovery from broker when only two installments were paid on note in absence of evidence that note was valueless. Sellers who made no attempt to contact debtors for payment or to contact buyers for information or assistance were not yet damaged since note might still be fully collectible with interest. Denny v. Brissonneaud, 161 M 468, 506 P2d 77 (1973).

Civil Liability Resulting From Violation: Where vendor sued vendee, broker, and broker's surety for cancellation of contract for sale of land and for damages and where vendee filed cross-complaint against broker and broker's surety, vendor was entitled to cancellation of contract and both vendor and vendee were entitled to reasonable attorney's fees and equal share in treble damage award based on vendee's right to recover his earnest money from broker and broker's surety. Receipt of Asking Price and Licensing — Only Requirements for Commission: Defendants decided to sell their ranch and were contacted by plaintiff, a real estate salesperson. Defendants listed the ranch on a nonexclusive basis for $1.6 million and agreed to pay a 5% commission on the sale. Plaintiff presented offers from Semenza, which were rejected. Later, Semenza offered the asking price, and a contract to sell and purchase was executed, reciting that Semenza had paid $50,000 to plaintiff as earnest money. Semenza failed to obtain financing by the closing date, and it was determined he had never paid the earnest money to plaintiff. A new agreement to sell was executed, referencing the obtaining of long-term financing, at a meeting at which defendants were again represented by counsel. The transaction was closed, and defendants refused to pay plaintiff his commission, contending he was not a licensed broker as claimed at the time they entered the agreement and that he had actually represented the buyer. On appeal from a summary judgment, the Supreme Court found that under 37-51-401 a person need only be a licensed salesperson to receive a commission and that plaintiff was a licensed broker at the time the transaction closed. The defendants received their asking price through plaintiff's efforts, even though Semenza had to bring in a partner. There was no evidence defendants were damaged by the claimed conflict of interest. They ratified the entire transaction and were represented by competent counsel throughout. Deimler v. Ostler, 200 M 350, 651 P2d 41, 39 St. Rep. 1797 (1982).

Pretrial Order and Evidence to Establish Standing: In an action for a real estate commission, the real estate broker (Nardi) did not allege himself to be a licensed broker in his initial complaint. The pretrial order, however, contained an amendment to the complaint stating that Nardi was a licensed real estate broker. In addition, Nardi introduced his broker's license at trial. The pretrial order and the exhibit adequately proved Nardi to be licensed pursuant to the statute, giving him standing to sue. Nardi v. Smalley, 197 M 321, 643 P2d 228, 39 St. Rep. 606 (1982).

When Recovery of Compensation Not Barred — Out-of-State Services: Where defendant agreed to pay commission for brokerage services rendered by out-of-state plaintiff not licensed in Montana and services were performed by plaintiff both within and without Montana, the fact that recovery cannot be had for services rendered in Montana because of proscription of this section does not prevent recovery for services rendered out of the state. Ryckman v. Wildwood, Inc., 197 M 154, 641 P2d 467, 39 St. Rep. 378 (1982).

Completing Sale Distinguished From Finding Purchaser: In action to recover broker's commissions purportedly due and owing from sale of property owned by defendant, the Supreme Court held that the defendant was not liable because plaintiff broker failed to perform the terms of the exclusive listing agreement by completing the sale. It was insufficient under this agreement to merely find a purchaser. Diehl & Associates v. Houtchens, 173 M 372, 567 P2d 930 (1977), followed in Blumfield Agency v. Little Belt, Inc., 203 M 515, 663 P2d 1164, 40 St. Rep. 605 (1983).

Deal Held Not Option but Sale Entitling Broker to Commission: Where owner left deed to real property with broker under agreement to pay him 5% commission if he found party acceptable purchaser and broker produced a prospective purchaser who agreed to forfeit $200 downpayment if by a specified date he failed to meet the major portion of the purchase price, which proposal owner and his wife accepted in writing with the payment, the transaction was a sale and not a mere option, and broker was entitled to his commission. Anderson v. Craig, 111 M 182, 108 P2d 205 (1940).

Waiver of License Issue: Failure to allege license is waived where defendant fails to take advantage thereof by special demurrer (demurrer abolished, former Rule 7(c), M.R.Civ.P., now superseded, and 25-31-503, now repealed) or answer, a general demurrer (demurrer abolished) not reaching the point. Piatt & Heath Co. v. Wilmer, 87 M 382, 288 P 1021 (1930).

Isolated Transactions: Under former provision (sec. 3, Ch. 195, L. 1921, repealed by Ch. 250, L. 1963) defining real estate broker and setting forth classes exempted from Ch. 195, L. 1921, provision similar to this section had no application to one who acted as a broker in connection with a single transaction only. Harbolt v. Hensen, 78 M 228, 253 P 257 (1927).

Nonbroker Not Required to Prove Status — Waiver of Issue: This section did not require one who was not a real estate broker to allege and prove that he was not a broker; failure of defendant to raise issue of license in answer waived the point. Harbolt v. Hensen, 78 M 228, 253 P 257 (1927).

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 492, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that delays in licensing board responses to complaints of misconduct by licensees and unlicensed practice that result in frustration on behalf of the public, licensees, and boards is caused by a lack of personnel to assist with compliance issues; and

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

WHEREAS, a uniformly flexible approach to license renewal scheduling would also reduce frustration on the part of licensees and the public that they serve; and

WHEREAS, inflexible examination dates for license applicants in the plumbing and electrical fields have caused undue hardship with no discernable [sic] public benefit; and

WHEREAS, the Committee on Business and Labor desires to alleviate these and other related problems by appropriating funds for certain professional and occupational boards that need additional compliance specialists, by allowing the Department of Commerce [now Department of Labor and Industry] to establish license renewal dates by rule, and by allowing electrical and plumbing apprentices to take the examination required for licensure before the apprenticeships expire."

Chapter Case Notes

Qualifications of Real Estate Experts — Differing Valuation: At a hearing concerning the valuation and division of property in the dissolution of Maureen and Joseph's marriage, an agricultural real estate broker testified for Maureen that the parties' ranch was worth $398,000 to $400,000, while a certified and licensed property appraiser testified for Joseph that the ranch was worth $182,500. Joseph contended that the District Court erred in accepting the value of the ranch as testified to by the real estate broker because the broker had no experience as a real property appraiser. Citing Jim's Excavating Serv., Inc. v. HKM Associates, 265 M 494, 878 P2d 248 (1994), the Supreme Court held that whether an adequate foundation has been established for the admission of expert testimony is an issue largely within the discretion of the District Court and that the District Court did not abuse its discretion when it relied upon the testimony of the real estate broker. The Supreme Court therefore affirmed the part of the District Court's order that valued the parties' ranch at $400,000. In re Marriage of Ortiz, 282 M 500, 938 P2d 1308, 54 St. Rep. 446 (1997).

Case Notes

Improper Award of Contractual Interest in Case of Negligent Misrepresentation of Real Property Appraisal: A professional appraiser prepared appraisal reports on two properties, which a lender reviewed and relied on in its decision to make loans at 61% to 62% of appraised market value and secured by the appraised properties. When the borrower defaulted, the lender foreclosed. After the Sheriff's sale, a deficiency judgment of $848,067, including $241,333.02 in contractual interest on the note, was entered against the borrower. The lender later sued the appraiser for damages arising from negligent misrepresentation of the appraisals, seeking an additional $620,572 in lost earnings on the deficiency. Under section 552B, Restatement (Second) of Torts, damages recoverable for a negligent misrepresentation are those necessary to compensate the plaintiff for the pecuniary loss of which the misrepresentation is a legal cause, including: (1) the difference between the value of what has been received in the transaction and its purchase price or other value given for it; and (2) pecuniary loss suffered otherwise as a consequence of the plaintiff's reliance on the misrepresentation. Under this rationale, the District Court erred in awarding the contractual interest but properly denied the award for lost earnings. United First Fed. S&L Ass'n v. White-Stevens, Ltd., 253 M 242, 833 P2d 170, 49 St. Rep. 490 (1992).

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 63, L. 1987, which amended this section, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because in section 3 [37-60-202] it expands the authority of the board of private security patrolmen and investigators to provide for the application of administrative fines and penalties for minor infractions of Title 37, chapter 60, and the supporting rules.

It is the intent of the legislature that the board adopt rules that conform with chapter 60 and other applicable statutes. Administrative fines and penalties for minor infractions of the chapter or of the board's rules must be commensurate with the gravity of the infraction, and the board may not suspend or revoke a license granted under this chapter except upon indisputable evidence of violation of this chapter, other applicable statutes, or the board's rules."

1985 Amendment: Inserted (12) referring to issuance of probationary and temporary licenses; and inserted (13) referring to issuance of probationary identification cards.

qualifying agents" and after "licensees" inserted "registrants, and holders of identification cards"; in (3) substituted language directing the Board to establish various licensing fees for former text that read: "carrying out generally the provisions of this chapter"; and inserted (4) through (10) requiring Board to adopt and enforce rules to prohibit establishment of branch offices, provide for certification of training programs, provide for approval of weapons, require maintenance of records, require filing of insurance policy or proof of financial responsibility, define unprofessional conduct, and establish expiration and renewal periods.

1983 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 550, L. 1983, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because section 7 [37-60-202] requires the board to adopt administrative rules.

Subsection (1) of 37-60-202 requires the board to adopt rules specifying the form of various documents granted by the board and the method of taking various licensing actions on the same. The minimum standards for the documents are set out in section 37-60-309 but may include such other matters of identification, such as fingerprints, as the board determines to be necessary. The procedures and standards for suspension and revocation of a license, registration, or identification card are set out in 37-60-321 [now repealed]. This section facially allows the board to suspend or revoke the registration of an individual for violations by his licensed employee or vice versa. As to those situations involving the suspension or revocation of the document of one party for the actions by another, it is the Legislature's intent that the board rules governing this matter should only require or allow the suspension or revocation of a document issued by the board if the person or entity whose document is in jeopardy had the right of control over the person or entity whose actions put the document in jeopardy and if the person whose document is in jeopardy knew or should have known of the actions of that other person.

Subsection (4) of 37-60-202 also requires the board to adopt rules prohibiting the establishment of certain branch offices without approval by the board and establishing requirements for board approval. The qualifications that may be required by the board under this subsection may not apply to proprietary security organizations, and may concern such matters as the supervision and management of the office but must not prescribe requirements for office size, equipment, etc.

Subsection (5) requires the adoption of training program rules. It is the intention of the Legislature that these rules specify a minimum curriculum and minimum standards for instructors used in all phases of the program, including firearms instructors.

Board rules adopted under subsection (8) relating to insurance may not require schools to carry insurance to protect themselves against civil liability for negligent or inadequate training incurred after students graduate from the training program.

Board rules defining "unprofessional conduct" under subsection (9) may include only that conduct which has a direct relationship to the ability of the board member or the licensee, registrant, or identification cardholder to perform official duties or acts taken in the capacity of a licensee, registrant, or cardholder.

Under subsection (11), the board must adopt rules which, at a minimum, provide for a maximum period of time in which employees may be considered to be "on probation" with an employer and for that period only, excused from the requirements for identification or registration cards which would otherwise apply."

Chapter Case Notes

No District Court Subject Matter Jurisdiction Over Attorney Disciplinary Matters: The Supreme Court suspended a Yellowstone County Deputy City Attorney, publicly censured her, and placed her on probation for 2 years. Plaintiff newspaper requested that the District Court provide the documents related to the attorney's disciplinary proceedings, but the District Court declined to release the documents on grounds that it lacked subject matter jurisdiction. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The Supreme Court, not the District Court, possesses original and exclusive jurisdiction and responsibility in all matters involving the conduct and disciplining of Montana attorneys, and court disciplinary rules provide for the confidentiality of disciplinary procedures. Billings Gazette v. St., 2008 MT 287, 345 M 385, 190 P3d 1126 (2008). See also Boe v. Court Administrator, 2007 MT 7, 335 M 228, 150 P3d 927 (2007).

Insurer-Imposed Billing Rules and Procedures Violative of Rules of Professional Conduct: When presented with the question of whether an attorney licensed to practice in Montana or admitted pro hac vice may agree to abide by an insurer's billing and practice rules that impose conditions limiting or directing the scope and extent of representation of the attorney's client, the insured, the Supreme Court considered the requirement imposed by some insurers that defense counsel secure the consent of the insurer's claim professional before proceeding with the case, in order to ensure adequate consultation. Insurers cited Jessen v. O'Daniel, 210 F. Supp. 317 (D.C. Mont. 1962), for the proposition that under Montana law, in the absence of a real conflict, the insurer and the insured are dual clients of defense counsel, arguing that as co-client of defense counsel, the insurer may require preapproval of attorney activities. The Supreme Court noted that although decisions subsequent to Jessen recognized the conclusion that an insurance contract may place absolute control of litigation in the hands of the insurer, the dual representation doctrine is not recognized under the Rules of Professional Conduct, but applies only in determining whether the communications between an insurer and its attorneys are subject to the attorney-client privilege. The contractual relationship between insurer and insured does not supersede or waive defense counsels' obligations under the Rules of Professional Conduct. Rather, the Rules of Professional Conduct have application in all cases involving attorneys and clients, and under the rules, the insured is the sole client of defense counsel. The court concluded that defense counsel in Montana who submit to the requirement of prior approval from the insurer violate the Rules of Professional Conduct by fundamentally interfering with their duties to exercise independent judgment and to give their undivided loyalty to insureds. The court noted that the prior approval requirement also creates a substantial appearance of impropriety by suggesting that the insurer, rather than defense counsel, controls the day-to-day details of the defense. In re Rules of Professional Conduct & Insurer Imposed Billing Rules & Procedures, 2000 MT 110, 299 M 321, 2 P3d 806, 57 St. Rep. 433 (2000).

Requirement That Attorney Submit Detailed Descriptions of Services Violative of Client Confidentiality: When presented with the question of whether an attorney licensed to practice in Montana or admitted pro hac vice may be required by an insurer's billing and practice rules to submit detailed descriptions of professional services to outside persons or entities, such as third-party insurance auditors, without first obtaining the informed consent of the client, insurers cited U.S. v. Mass. Institute of Technology, 129 F3d 681 (1st Cir. 1997), in claiming that as agents of insurers, third-party auditors are part of a privileged community or magic circle within which confidential information may be shared without waiver of attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine. The insurers also cited Indian Law Resource Center v. Dept. of Interior, 477 F. Supp. 144 (D. D.C. 1979), for the proposition that an auditor is a confidential agent of a privileged party, so disclosure of attorney fee information did not waive any privilege. The Supreme Court found neither case persuasive, concluding that third-party auditors are not confidential agents of insureds, but function rather as agents of insurers, and thus are not within the magic circle of confidentiality. Rather, disclosure of detailed billing statements to third-party auditors constitutes disclosure to a potential adversary because there is always the possibility of disputes between auditors and defense counsel and their clients that could result in litigation. As possible adversaries, auditors stand in potential conflict with the interests of insureds in competent representation by defense counsel who exercise their independent professional judgment. The court looked to Rule 1.6 of the Rules of Professional Conduct, which extends to all communications between insureds and defense counsel, making it broader in both scope and protection than the attorney-client privilege and the work product doctrine. Although disclosures of billing information to insurers are permissible because insurers are impliedly authorized to carry out representation, disclosure to third-party auditors is not impliedly authorized. The court also rejected the insurers' argument that insureds' consent by contract to disclosure of billing statements comports with Rule 1.6. An insured executing a liability policy with an insurer cannot know at that time what kind of claim will be brought against that insured, what the issues will be, what kind of services will be undertaken by defense counsel, or the legal consequences that might result from the disclosure of billing information to a third-party auditor. Under Rule 1.6, for an insured to make a fully informed consent to disclosure of detailed billing statements, the consent must be contemporaneous with the facts and circumstances of which the insured should be aware. Thus, disclosure by defense counsel of detailed descriptions of professional services to third-party auditors without first obtaining the informed consent of the insured violates confidentiality under the Rules of Professional Conduct. In re Rules of Professional Conduct & Insurer Imposed Billing Rules & Procedures, 2000 MT 110, 299 M 321, 2 P3d 806, 57 St. Rep. 433 (2000), distinguishing U.S. v. Schwimmer, 892 F2d 237 (2nd Cir. 1989).

Corporate Officer Without Authority for Pro Se Representation of Corporation — Refusal to Consider Brief: Plaintiff realty corporation brought an action in District Court to find defendants in default for failure to make payments under a contract for deed. Plaintiff was represented by counsel in District Court, but on appeal, it was represented by the president of the corporation. The Supreme Court, sua sponte, raised the issue of whether the corporation could be represented by its president and held that it could not. Citing Weaver v. Law Firm of Graybill, 246 M 175, 803 P2d 1089 (1990), the Supreme Court held that a corporation is a separate legal entity and cannot appear on its own behalf through an agent other than an attorney. The Supreme Court therefore determined not to consider the brief filed by the president on behalf of the corporation. Cont. Realty, Inc. v. Gerry, 251 M 150, 822 P2d 1083, 48 St. Rep. 1134 (1991).

Legal Malpractice Complaint — Upheld Under Liberal Rules of Pleading: In a legal malpractice suit, the defendant-attorney moved to dismiss the action on the grounds that the complaint did not state a cause of action because the complaint did not specifically allege that had it not been for the negligence of the attorney, the client would have won the lawsuit. The District Court dismissed the case. The Supreme Court reversed, ruling that under Montana's liberal rules of pleading, the complaint was sufficient. R.H. Schwartz Constr. Specialties, Inc. v. Hanrahan, 207 M 105, 672 P2d 1116, 40 St. Rep. 1926 (1983).

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 198, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, Article VII, section 2, of the Montana Constitution provides that the Montana Supreme Court may make rules for admission to the bar and the conduct of its members."

Part Case Notes

Multistate Bar Examination: In response to a petition of students of the 1986 graduating class of the University of Montana (now University of Montana-Missoula) School of Law, the Supreme Court held that the petitioners did not establish compelling reasons for elimination of the multistate bar examination. The examination provides a practical and useful means of testing applicants' qualifications. In re Revision of Mont. Bar Exam., 222 M 25, 720 P2d 285, 43 St. Rep. 1158 (1986).

Restriction on Continuing Study of Law: The practices, policies, rules, and procedures under which the fitness of a student to continue the study of law is appraised, as applied to plaintiff, do not violate constitutional requirements of due process and equal protection or 37-61-204 (now repealed). Johnson v. Sullivan, 174 M 491, 571 P2d 798 (1977).

Admission to Practice for Particular Purpose: The Supreme Court has the exclusive power to determine who may practice law in Montana, and the court may admit an attorney from another jurisdiction for the purpose of investigation and prosecution of criminal offenses disclosed by a legislative audit. St. v. Cline, 170 M 520, 555 P2d 724 (1976).

Legislative Veto Power Not to Extend to Admission to the Bar: Rules of appellate and civil procedure are subject to disapproval by the Legislature; however, as to rules promulgated by the court relative to practice, admission to the bar, and conduct of members of the bar, the Legislature has no such veto authority as, under the principle of separation of powers, the Supreme Court was given exclusive authority to promulgate such rules. In re McCabe, 168 M 334, 544 P2d 825 (1975).

Judicial Power to Make Rules Exclusive: Under Art. VII, sec. 2, Mont. Const., the Supreme Court has exclusive power to make rules governing admission to the bar and the conduct of its members, and the purported amendment of 37-61-204 (now repealed) by Ch. 342, L. 1974, was patently void and in contravention of the principle of separation of powers set forth in Art. III, sec. 1, Mont. Const. In re McCabe, 168 M 334, 544 P2d 825 (1975); In re Senate Bill No. 630, 164 M 366, 523 P2d 484 (1974).

Legality of Diploma Privilege:

Diploma privilege accorded graduates of University of Montana (now University of Montana-Missoula) law school does not violate the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th amendment and does not impinge upon fundamental right of interstate travel. Huffman v. Mont. Supreme Court, 372 F. Supp. 1175 (D.C. Mont. 1974), affirmed 419 US 955 (1974).

Familiarity of Supreme Court Justices with University of Montana (now University of Montana-Missoula) law school and its faculty and students justifies continuation of practice of admitting graduates without examination. Goetz v. Harrison, 154 M 274, 462 P2d 891 (1969).

Grant of diploma privilege to graduates of University of Montana (now University of Montana-Missoula) law school while requiring graduates of other accredited schools to take bar examination did not constitute an unconstitutional denial of equal protection of laws. Goetz v. Harrison, 154 M 274, 462 P2d 891 (1969).

Applicability to Administrative Proceedings: Section 37-61-208 (now repealed) is applicable to administrative proceedings under the supervision of the Supreme Court. Application of Am. Smelting & Ref. Co., 164 M 139, 520 P2d 103 (1973).

Jurisdiction of District Court: District Court had no jurisdiction of an action contesting the validity of 37-61-204 (now repealed) and seeking restraining order against members of Supreme Court in their official capacity. Goetz v. Harrison, 153 M 403, 457 P2d 911 (1969). See also Boe v. Court Administrator, 2007 MT 7, 335 M 228, 150 P3d 927 (2007).

Waiver of Objection: Defendants, present in court during trial, who made no objection to the appearance of nonresident as their attorney, were not entitled to an order vacating and setting aside judgment on the ground that nonresident attorney was not licensed to practice in Montana. Shoal v. Bailey, 139 M 198, 362 P2d 234 (1961).

Admission Without Examination Denied: Where an applicant took and failed the bar examination three times, the Supreme Court will not allow a petition by the applicant to admit the applicant on motion and without examination, for this would set at naught the labors and recommendations of the Board of Law Examiners and nullify the governing statutes and rules of the court. Petition of Bergen, 125 M 607, 233 P2d 399 (1951).

Unauthorized Practice: Since the Supreme Court has been given the exclusive power to authorize persons to practice law and to deprive them of that right, it has jurisdiction to punish one attempting to practice in any court of law without a license as for a contempt. State ex rel. Freebourn v. Merchants' Credit Serv., Inc., 104 M 76, 66 P2d 337 (1937).

Fees of Nonresident Attorneys Not Allowed: While under 37-61-208 (now repealed) courts may permit a nonresident attorney who has been admitted to practice in his own state to appear on a cause on motion of a duly admitted attorney in this state, they may not allow a fee for his services to his client if successful. Vaill v. N. Pac. Ry. Co., 66 M 301, 213 P 446 (1923), overruled in Winer v. Jonal Corp., 169 M 247, 545 P2d 1094 (1976).

Notice to Nonresident Attorney: An attempted appearance for a foreign heir by an attorney residing in another state who had not been licensed to practice in this state either generally or specially, by means of a letter to the District Court stating that he appeared in behalf of the heir and requesting that notice in the proceeding be served upon him, amounted to no appearance and did not estop the heir from attacking the decree for want of notice. State ex rel. Rubin v. District Court, 62 M 60, 203 P 860 (1921), distinguished in Shoal v. Bailey, 139 M 198, 362 P2d 234 (1961).

Privileges of Nonresident Attorneys — Power of District Judge: A District Judge is without authority to grant anyone the privilege of appearing in his court to represent a client unless such person is duly admitted to practice law or a nonresident attorney, and in the latter case only for the purpose of conducting a particular cause and upon motion of a member of the bar of Montana. In re White, 54 M 476, 171 P 759 (1918).

Fraudulent Admission to Bar: It is ground for the disbarment of an attorney that he presented with his application a letter of recommendation to which he had forged the name of a local firm. In re Woodward, 27 M 355, 71 P 161 (1903).

Commission on Unauthorized Practice of Law Dissolved: Following extensive public comment, the Supreme Court concluded that a petition by the Commission on the Unauthorized Practice of Law to dissolve the Commission should be granted. The court will continue to address cases of unauthorized practice that are properly before the court and will continue to regulate the practice of law by Montana attorneys, but the Attorney General's Office of Consumer Protection will receive, process, evaluate, and address complaints of unauthorized practice of law by nonattorneys. In re Dissolving Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law, 2010 MT 82, 356 Mont. 109, 242 P.3d 1282.

Constitutionality of Law Prohibiting and Punishing Unauthorized Practice of Law: O'Neil was a paralegal and state senator who was investigated by the Commission on the Unauthorized Practice of Law and permanently enjoined from engaging in conduct that constituted the practice of law. O'Neil challenged the constitutionality of 37-61-210 and this section, which prohibit and punish the unauthorized practice of law, on grounds that the law interfered with O'Neil's freedom of speech and the free speech of O'Neil's customers. O'Neil asserted that the statutes were too overbroad and vague to impose any restrictions on his liberty and insufficient to support the District Court's finding of contempt and entry of the injunction against him. The Supreme Court held that O'Neil incorrectly framed the freedom of speech challenge as an overbreadth challenge. The overbreadth doctrine allows plaintiffs to challenge a statute not because their own rights of free expression are violated but because of a judicial prediction or assumption that the statute's very existence may cause others not before the court to refrain from constitutionally protected speech or expression. However, O'Neil failed to show that the impact of the statutes on the conduct of other speakers would differ from its impact on O'Neil's conduct, so O'Neil's case was not susceptible to a facial overbreadth challenge based on hypothetical applications of the law not before the court. The central question of O'Neil's free speech challenge was whether the injunction unconstitutionally restricted O'Neil's right to free speech. The Supreme Court cited Ohralik v. Ohio St. Bar Ass'n, 436 US 447 (1978), for the holding that regulation of the bar is a subject only marginally affected with free speech concerns and noted that other courts have repeatedly rejected claims that an individual has a free speech right to practice law, free even of rationally based regulation, because such a broadly formulated argument, if successful, would greatly undermine the recognized power of states to regulate bar membership. Just as O'Neil had no free speech right to practice law without a license, O'Neil's customers had no free speech right to unlicensed legal representation because the constitutional right to receive legal advice is limited to clients of qualified attorneys, consistent with the state's interest in high standards of legal ethics. Section 37-61-210 and this section were not void for vagueness because they provided fair notice of the prohibited conduct. O'Neil's challenge to the constitutionality of the statutes failed. Mont. Supreme Court Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law v. O'Neil, 2006 MT 284, 334 M 311, 147 P3d 200 (2006).

Jury Trial Not Required in Civil Contempt Case: O'Neil was enjoined from and held in civil contempt for the unauthorized practice of law. O'Neil appealed on grounds that due process required that he be granted a jury trial on the charges. The Supreme Court disagreed, noting that under federal law, there might be a right to a jury trial in criminal contempt cases that impose serious contempt penalties, but that there is no general federal constitutional right to a jury trial for criminal contempt in federal or state courts. However, O'Neil was charged with civil contempt, not criminal contempt, and the penalty under 3-1-511 does not provide sanctions that rise to the level of a serious penalty. O'Neil was afforded adequate due process under 3-1-518, including a reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel, to prepare a defense or explanation prior to hearing, to testify in his own behalf, and to call witnesses at the hearing. O'Neil was not entitled to a higher standard of due process that might require a jury trial, and the District Court did not err in holding that a jury trial was not required. Mont. Supreme Court Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law v. O'Neil, 2006 MT 284, 334 M 311, 147 P3d 200 (2006), following Kauffman v. District Court, 1998 MT 239, 291 M 122, 966 P2d 715 (1998).

No Standing by Nonattorney to Assert Attorney-Client Privacy Rights: O'Neil was a paralegal and state senator who was investigated by the Commission on the Unauthorized Practice of Law and permanently enjoined from engaging in conduct that constituted the practice of law. O'Neil filed a counterclaim against the Commission and the State Bar, asserting that the Commission and the State Bar violated his, his customers', and his constituents' right to privacy by interfering with their discussion and disclosure of matters involving the preparation and strategy of their personal and legal matters with whom they chose. The Supreme Court disagreed. O'Neil was not licensed to practice law, and his customers therefore had no privacy right in seeking services from O'Neil that he was not authorized to perform, nor did O'Neil have representational standing to assert, on behalf of his customers, a privacy right that by law did not exist. Additionally, O'Neil's own right to privacy was not violated because a person has no privacy interest to misrepresent to the public that the person is a licensed professional when that person is not. The motions for summary judgment by the Commission and the State Bar were properly granted. Mont.

Supreme Court Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law v. O'Neil, 2006 MT 284, 334 M 311, 147 P3d 200 (2006).

Sufficient Evidence That Paralegal Engaged in Unauthorized Practice of Law — No Requirement That Full Faith and Credit Be Given to Tribal Decision to Authorize Legal Practitioners: O'Neil was a paralegal and state senator who was investigated by the Commission on the Unauthorized Practice of Law and permanently enjoined from engaging in conduct that constituted the practice of law. O'Neil asserted that the evidence was insufficient to support the District Court's finding of contempt and entry of the injunction against him. However, O'Neil admitted that he drafted pleadings for his customers, provided them with legal advice, and appeared in court with them without having a license to practice law. This conduct unquestionably constituted the practice of law, and the District Court did not err in finding that O'Neil engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. O'Neil also asserted that because he was an attorney licensed to practice law in Blackfeet Tribal Court, the Supreme Court should give full faith and credit to the tribe's decision. The court noted that O'Neil was not an attorney with the tribal court, but rather a lay advocate. The doctrine of full faith and credit did not apply to the tribe's decision because as a sovereign nation, the tribe could license whomever it wants before its courts, but there was no requirement that the tribe's decision be given full faith and credit regarding the practice of law in Montana state courts. The District Court was affirmed. Mont. Supreme Court Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law v. O'Neil, 2006 MT 284, 334 M 311, 147 P3d 200 (2006).

Student Attorney Considered to Be Practicing Law: Following the resignation of the acting County Attorney, Jefferson County Commissioners interviewed applicants and subsequently selected Valerie Wilson to fill the position effective August 18, 1995. To be qualified for the position, state law requires an attorney to be admitted to practice for at least 5 years prior to appointment or election. The District Court concluded that although Wilson had begun practicing law as a student attorney in 1990, she was not admitted to the Montana Bar until October 1991 and thus would not achieve the required 5 years until October 1996. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed, ruling that state law does not require that one must be admitted to the State Bar in order to be "deemed practicing law" in Montana. Certification of student attorneys by Supreme Court order along with certification by the dean of the law school provide the guidelines for admission of a student attorney to the practice of law. Shapiro v. Jefferson County, 278 M 109, 923 P2d 543, 53 St. Rep. 848 (1996).

Practicing Law Without License: The court properly dismissed appellants' complaint on the Daly Ditch decision because appellants' spokesman, Bernie Swift, was practicing law without a license. He is not licensed to practice law in Montana and therefore cannot act as spokesman for others before the court. Swift v. St., 226 M 439, 736 P2d 117, 44 St. Rep. 786 (1987).

Filling In Preprinted Forms Not Practice of Law: When the bank filled in blanks on preprinted forms for a mortgage and deed of trust as a service to the buyer and the sellers and incident to a real estate transaction in which the bank was involved, this did not constitute the unauthorized practice of law. The Supreme Court listed three factors as most important in resolving the question of whether filling in preprinted real estate forms is the practice of law: (1) the real estate instruments must be prepared only incident to transactions in which the maker is interested; (2) the instruments must be prepared without a separate charge; and (3) the preparation must not go beyond the filling in of blank forms. Pulse v. N. Am. Land Title Co. of Mont., 218 M 275, 707 P2d 1105, 42 St. Rep. 1578 (1985).

Collection Agency Practices as Constituting the Practice of Law: Collection agency corporation acting in a representative capacity when it prepared pleadings and filed them in the District Court on assigned claims in which it was not the real party in interest and not entitled to bring the action under the facts presented was doing something usually done and performed by attorneys at law in the practice of their profession, and the corporation and its agent were practicing law within the meaning of this section. State ex rel. Freebourn v. Merchants' Credit Serv., Inc., 104 M 76, 66 P2d 337 (1937).

Acts Constituting Practice of Law: One who appears as an attorney of record in a cause pending in the District Court, files papers in behalf of a party thereto, and advertises himself as an attorney in newspapers, on letterheads used by him in his correspondence, or by a sign displayed in front of his office, practices law in a court of record. Case Notes

Constitutionality of Law Prohibiting and Punishing Unauthorized Practice of Law: O'Neil was a paralegal and state senator who was investigated by the Commission on the Unauthorized Practice of Law and permanently enjoined from engaging in conduct that constituted the practice of law. O'Neil challenged the constitutionality of 37-61-201 and this section, which prohibit and punish the unauthorized practice of law, on grounds that the law interfered with O'Neil's freedom of speech and the free speech of O'Neil's customers. O'Neil asserted that the statutes were too overbroad and vague to impose any restrictions on his liberty and insufficient to support the District Court's finding of contempt and entry of the injunction against him. The Supreme Court held that O'Neil incorrectly framed the freedom of speech challenge as an overbreadth challenge. The overbreadth doctrine allows plaintiffs to challenge a statute not because their own rights of free expression are violated but because of a judicial prediction or assumption that the statute's very existence may cause others not before the court to refrain from constitutionally protected speech or expression. However, O'Neil failed to show that the impact of the statutes on the conduct of other speakers would differ from its impact on O'Neil's conduct, so O'Neil's case was not susceptible to a facial overbreadth challenge based on hypothetical applications of the law not before the court. The central question of O'Neil's free speech challenge was whether the injunction unconstitutionally restricted O'Neil's right to free speech. The Supreme Court cited Ohralik v. Ohio St. Bar Ass'n, 436 US 447 (1978), for the holding that regulation of the bar is a subject only marginally affected with free speech concerns and noted that other courts have repeatedly rejected claims that an individual has a free speech right to practice law, free even of rationally based regulation, because such a broadly formulated argument, if successful, would greatly undermine the recognized power of states to regulate bar membership. Just as O'Neil had no free speech right to practice law without a license, O'Neil's customers had no free speech right to unlicensed legal representation because the constitutional right to receive legal advice is limited to clients of qualified attorneys, consistent with the state's interest in high standards of legal ethics. Section 37-61-201 and this section were not void for vagueness because they provided fair notice of the prohibited conduct. O'Neil's challenge to the constitutionality of the statutes failed. Mont. Supreme Court Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law v. O'Neil, 2006 MT 284, 334 M 311, 147 P3d 200 (2006).

Jury Trial Not Required in Civil Contempt Case: O'Neil was enjoined from and held in civil contempt for the unauthorized practice of law. O'Neil appealed on grounds that due process required that he be granted a jury trial on the charges. The Supreme Court disagreed, noting that under federal law, there might be a right to a jury trial in criminal contempt cases that impose serious contempt penalties, but that there is no general federal constitutional right to a jury trial for criminal contempt in federal or state courts. However, O'Neil was charged with civil contempt, not criminal contempt, and the penalty under 3-1-511 does not provide sanctions that rise to the level of a serious penalty. O'Neil was afforded adequate due process under 3-1-518, including a reasonable opportunity to obtain counsel, to prepare a defense or explanation prior to hearing, to testify in his own behalf, and to call witnesses at the hearing. O'Neil was not entitled to a higher standard of due process that might require a jury trial, and the District Court did not err in holding that a jury trial was not required. Mont. Supreme Court Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law v. O'Neil, 2006 MT 284, 334 M 311, 147 P3d 200 (2006), following Kauffman v. District Court, 1998 MT 239, 291 M 122, 966 P2d 715 (1998).

No Standing by Nonattorney to Assert Attorney-Client Privacy Rights: O'Neil was a paralegal and state senator who was investigated by the Commission on the Unauthorized Practice of Law and permanently enjoined from engaging in conduct that constituted the practice of law. O'Neil filed a counterclaim against the Commission and the State Bar, asserting that the Commission and the State Bar violated his, his customers', and his constituents' right to privacy by interfering with their discussion and disclosure of matters involving the preparation and strategy of their personal and legal matters with whom they chose. The Supreme Court disagreed. O'Neil was not licensed to practice law, and his customers therefore had no privacy right in seeking services from O'Neil that he was not authorized to perform, nor did O'Neil have representational standing to assert, on behalf of his customers, a privacy right that by law did not exist. Additionally, O'Neil's own right to privacy was not violated because a person has no privacy interest to misrepresent to the public that the person is a licensed professional when that person is not. The motions for summary judgment by the Commission and the State Bar were properly granted. Mont. Supreme Court Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law v. O'Neil, 2006 MT 284, 334 M 311, 147 P3d 200 (2006).

Sufficient Evidence That Paralegal Engaged in Unauthorized Practice of Law — No Requirement That Full Faith and Credit Be Given to Tribal Decision to Authorize Legal Practitioners: O'Neil was a paralegal and state senator who was investigated by the Commission on the Unauthorized Practice of Law and permanently enjoined from engaging in conduct that constituted the practice of law. O'Neil asserted that the evidence was insufficient to support the District Court's finding of contempt and entry of the injunction against him. However, O'Neil admitted that he drafted pleadings for his customers, provided them with legal advice, and appeared in court with them without having a license to practice law. This conduct unquestionably constituted the practice of law, and the District Court did not err in finding that O'Neil engaged in the unauthorized practice of law. O'Neil also asserted that because he was an attorney licensed to practice law in Blackfeet Tribal Court, the Supreme Court should give full faith and credit to the tribe's decision. The court noted that O'Neil was not an attorney with the tribal court, but rather a lay advocate. The doctrine of full faith and credit did not apply to the tribe's decision because as a sovereign nation, the tribe could license whomever it wants before its courts, but there was no requirement that the tribe's decision be given full faith and credit regarding the practice of law in Montana state courts. The District Court was affirmed. Mont. Supreme Court Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law v. O'Neil, 2006 MT 284, 334 M 311, 147 P3d 200 (2006).

Nonlawyer Filing Brief and Notice of Appearance for Civil Defendant: In the state's action against Brue for an injunction, alleging operation of an unlicensed and unshielded motor vehicle wrecking facility, Huffine filed a notice of appearance as counsel for Brue and a brief in support of the pleadings. Huffine advised the court that it should direct all further correspondence to him, "a private citizen having been designated to act as counsel by and for the Defendant". The actions of Huffine, who was not a licensed attorney, constituted the practice of law without a license and were a contempt of court. Huffine v. District Court, 285 M 104, 945 P2d 927, 54 St. Rep. 1065 (1997).

Denial of Lay Counsel in City Court — Any Prejudice Cured by Trial De Novo on Appeal: Henry was charged with driving under the influence and was tried in City Court. The City Court refused to permit a family friend to represent Henry in the trial. Henry then appealed to the District Court for a trial de novo in which Henry was represented by counsel. The Supreme Court refused to address the merits of Henry's claim of violation of the right to counsel. The trial de novo on appeal to the District Court cured any prejudice that may have resulted from the City Court's decision regarding representation. St. v. Henry, 271 M 491, 898 P2d 1195, 52 St. Rep. 516 (1995).

Nonlawyer Representing Others — Effect of Failure of Others to File Appeal Notice: A nonlawyer may represent himself or herself but may not represent another, including on appeal. Because the nonlawyer's relatives did not file notices of appeal, they were not properly before the court on the nonlawyer's appeal of the case. Traders St. Bank of Poplar v. Mann, 258 M 226, 852 P2d 604, 50 St. Rep. 509 (1993).

Limitation on Lay Representation in Courts of Limited Jurisdiction: Petitioners sought a declaration by the Supreme Court that under 25-31-601 and this section, nonattorneys have the right to represent clients in Montana courts of limited jurisdiction on a regular and recurring basis. After accepting original jurisdiction of the petition, the Supreme Court held that only practice before courts of limited jurisdiction as is specifically authorized by statute or court rule may be undertaken by lay people. This representation does not extend to criminal proceedings in any court or to representation in any jurisdiction on a regular and recurring basis. Section 25-31-601 provides for a one-time only grant of the privilege in Justice Court civil cases to enable a friend or relative to assist and speak on behalf of a party at one proceeding. Recurring representation constitutes the unauthorized practice of law. Sparks v. Johnson, 252 M 39, 826 P2d 928, 49 St. Rep. 124 (1992).

Pro Se Practice of Law by Corporate Shareholders and Directors Prohibited: Although shareholders and directors of a corporation have the right under 35-1-930 (now repealed) to take action on behalf of the corporation, that does not entitle those persons to practice law on behalf of the corporation. A corporation is a separate legal entity and cannot appear through an agent other than an attorney. Representation by a stockholder or director who is not an attorney constitutes contempt of court punishable under this section. Weaver v. Law Firm of Graybill, Ostrem, Warner & Crotty, 246 M 175, 803 P2d 1089, 47 St. Rep. 2316 (1990).

No Right to Representation by Nonlawyer: A defendant has an inalienable right to represent himself, but has no right to demand representation by a nonlawyer. A District Court lacks authority to allow representation of a defendant by a nonlawyer. St. v. Barnes, 232 M 405, 758 P2d 264, 45 St. Rep. 1150 (1988).

Corporate Practice of Law: Where an incorporated collection agency was practicing law, it was guilty of contempt for its acts in the Justices' Courts as well as in the District Court, for such a corporation cannot be entitled to practice law and is not a "person" entitled to the exceptions stated in this section. State ex rel. Freebourn v. Merchants' Credit Serv., Inc., 104 M 76, 66 P2d 337 (1937).

Acts Constituting Practice of Law Without a License: One who, though not admitted by the Supreme Court to practice in the courts of the state, holds himself out as an attorney at law by conducting legal correspondence on letterheads on which was printed his name followed by "Attorney at Law", by signing himself as such, by advertising himself by the use of a professional card in newspapers and telephone directory, and by a sign on his office building as an attorney, by taking and perfecting appeals from the Justice to the District Court, and appearing in the appellate court in connection with such appeals is practicing without a license and guilty of contempt of court under this section. In re Phillips, 64 M 492, 210 P 89 (1922).

District Court Power to Permit Practice Without License: Since a District Judge has no authority to permit one to practice law without having been admitted to the bar, such person cannot justify his violation of the law in this regard by alleging such permission as his excuse. In re White, 54 M 476, 171 P 759 (1918).

Nonresident Attorneys — Admission for Particular Case: Under 37-61-208 (now repealed), a nonresident attorney who has been admitted to practice in the highest courts of the state of his residence may, on motion of a member of the bar of this state, be permitted by a Judge before whom a trial is pending to appear and conduct that particular case. In re White, 54 M 476, 171 P 759 (1918).

Acts Constituting Practice of Law: A person who advises clients in legal matters pending or to be brought before a court of record, prepares pleadings or proceedings for use in a court of record, or appears before a court of record, either directly or by a partner or proxy, is practicing law in a court of record; and, if he has no license to do so, he is guilty of contempt of court. Case Notes

Validity of Attorney License Tax: A $25 license tax on attorneys, along with the attendant penalty provision for nonpayment, has the effect of regulating the practice of law in that an attorney may not practice law in Montana without paying the tax. The tax is a minimal and inoffensive intrusion on the Supreme Court's constitutional prerogatives and is valid as a legislative enactment in aid of the power of the court to regulate the practice of law. In re Application of Kradolfer v. Smith, 246 M 210, 805 P2d 1266, 47 St. Rep. 1861 (1990).

Tax on Sale of Attorney's Services — Invalid: A city ordinance imposing an annual tax on every lawyer or law firm carrying on the practice of law, calculated on the basis of gross revenue generated from attorney-client relationships, was held to be an unconstitutional sales tax. The tax was beyond the scope of self-government powers and in violation of 7-1-112, since it was not related to any regulatory control measure for the health or welfare of the city but was a tax on the sale of attorneys' services. Brueggemann v. Billings, 221 M 375, 719 P2d 768, 43 St. Rep. 905 (1986).

Regulatory Municipal Business License Applicable to Attorneys — Unconstitutional: A business license ordinance enacted by a self-governing municipality requiring municipal licensure of attorneys and providing for regulation was an unconstitutional encroachment on the Supreme Court's authority to regulate the bar as provided in Art. III, sec. 2, Mont. Const., because the ordinance conditions attorneys' access to the practice of law. The ordinance included police provisions that could conceivably cover standards of practice, prohibited attorneys from carrying on their occupation without procuring a municipal license, required municipal licensure of nonresident attorneys practicing in the municipality, and provided for fines and incarceration for failing to comply with the ordinance. Harlen v. Helena, 208 M 45, 676 P2d 191, 41 St. Rep. 162 (1984).

State Jurisdiction Over Indian Contract: One licensed to practice law in this state cannot make a contract as an attorney to be performed both on and off the reservation and then use his status as an Indian to defeat state jurisdiction when he is sued on the contract involved. Commission on Unauthorized Practice of Law Dissolved: Following extensive public comment, the Supreme Court concluded that a petition by the Commission on the Unauthorized Practice of Law to dissolve the Commission should be granted. The court will continue to address cases of unauthorized practice that are properly before the court and will continue to regulate the practice of law by Montana attorneys, but the Attorney General's Office of Consumer Protection will receive, process, evaluate, and address complaints of unauthorized practice of law by nonattorneys. Attorney Disclaiming Knowledge of Licensing Requirements: Upon returning to the state, an attorney paid his outstanding bar dues but was denied a license to practice law because there was an unresolved matter pending against him before the Commission on Practice. Subsequently, the attorney entered a notice of appearance in two actions. The attorney argued that he should not be disbarred for his actions because he was unsure of his status since paying his bar dues. The Supreme Court held that an attorney cannot disclaim knowledge of the licensing laws of the state. Practicing without a license is a misdemeanor that can subject an attorney to disbarment. In re Halprin, 244 M 363, 798 P2d 80, 47 St. Rep. 1242 (1990).

Pro Se Litigant — No Standing to Question Validity of Statute: With respect to the purported unconstitutionality of 37-61-215 on the grounds that it did not provide for attorney fees to nonattorneys, Lussy had no standing to question its validity. He was not a prevailing party in the action below. The general rule is in the absence of statute or contract, attorney fees will not be awarded. On a reciprocal basis, if the respondents were entitled to attorney fees in this case by virtue of contract, Lussy would be entitled to the same under 28-3-704. However, to bring himself within the latter section, he must be the prevailing party. Lussy's assertion that he was attorney-in-fact for the members of his family was frivolous. Lussy v. Bennett, 214 M 301, 692 P2d 1232, 41 St. Rep. 2487 (1984).

Sister State Attorney — Recovery for Services: Court held that an attorney licensed in one state may recover for services rendered in Montana, even though not duly licensed in Montana, if he initially discloses that fact to his client and further informs him of the necessity to associate with local counsel because such an interpretation is better suited to the modern practice of law and in promoting comity between the states. Winer v. Jonal Corp., 169 M 247, 545 P2d 1094 (1976), overruling Vaill v. N. Pac. Ry. Co., 66 M 301, 213 P 446 (1923).

Justice Court Practice: Under this section the allowance of an attorney's fee by any court is unlawful in an action where the party to whom allowed is represented by one other than a duly licensed attorney. A demand for such allowance by one not an attorney in a Justice Court amounts to an unlawful practice of law. State ex rel. Freebourn v. Merchants' Credit Serv., Inc., 104 M 76, 66 P2d 337 (1937).

Admission and License Required: An attorney's fee is not allowable in any action or proceeding in which attorneys' fees are allowed by law unless the attorney has been duly admitted and licensed to practice in Montana, and though the words of the section are "duly admitted or licensed", the word "or" must be read "and", any other construction rendering the provision meaningless. Vaill v. N. Pac. Ry. Co., 66 M 301, 213 P 446 (1923).

Attorney General's Opinions

Party Authorized to Represent Self in Justice's Court: Section 25-31-601 authorizes a party who is not a corporation to represent himself in a Justice's Court. Section 37-61-215 attaches a stipulation to 25-31-601 but does not preclude a party from representing himself. 30 A.G. Op. 16 (1963).

Part 3
Disbarment and Suspension

Part Case Notes

Dual Representation During Federal Criminal Investigation Violative of Rules of Professional Conduct: The Office of Disciplinary Counsel (ODC) filed a formal disciplinary complaint against an attorney for the attorney's representation of both a husband and wife, without obtaining an informed waiver of any actual or potential conflict, during a federal criminal investigation of the husband and, after the attorney no longer represented the husband, for the attorney's continued representation of the wife in the federal investigation and in divorce proceedings initiated against the husband. The Supreme Court upheld the Commission on Practice's decision to strike an ODC witness's testimony on the basis that the ODC improperly withheld new information from the attorney's counsel. The attorney violated Rule 1.7, Montana Rules of Professional Conduct, by concurrently representing the husband and wife during the federal investigation, regardless of whether the husband's defense was actually prejudiced, and violated Rule 1.9, Montana Rules of Professional Conduct, by subsequently representing the wife, whose position was materially adverse to her husband, the attorney's former client. In re Neuhardt, 2014 MT 88, 374 Mont. 379, 321 P.3d 833.

Fraud Substantiated in Attorney's Handling of Probate Case — Violation of Attorney's Duty of Truthfulness — Public Censure Warranted: Attorney Potts represented parties in a will contest. Two of the parties knew that some joint tenancy accounts were not included in the value of the estate and, in an attempt to secure the funds in the accounts, directed Potts to remain silent as to whether the settlement agreement prepared by Potts included the accounts. Potts failed to notify the court and counsel for the estate that one of his clients intended to obtain the jointly held property regardless of the outcome of any settlement. The Supreme Court subsequently determined in In re Estate of Stukey, 2004, MT 279, 323 M 241, 100 P3d 114 (2004), that the parties intended that the total estate value, including the joint tenancy accounts, be included in the settlement. A professional misconduct complaint was later filed against Potts, alleging that Potts engaged in or assisted in client fraud by failing to disclose material information to opposing counsel and that Potts breached the duty of candor to the tribunal by failing to disclose material information to the court. The Commission on Practice found that Potts knew that his clients were using Potts' services to perpetuate fraud in violation of Rules 1.2(d) and 3.3(a)(2) of the Montana Rules of Professional Conduct (MRPC), that Potts failed to fulfill his ethical obligation to inform the clients that he would not participate in the fraudulent conduct, a violation of Rule 1.2(d), MRPC, and that Potts violated the duty of candor to the tribunal in violation of Rule 3.3(a)(2), MRPC. The Commission recommended that Potts be publicly censured and suspended from the practice of law for 30 days. Potts appealed, raising issues of client confidentiality, asserting that his clients did not engage in fraud because the accounts passed to his client as a matter of law and thus could not have been included as part of the settlement basis, contending that he had no duty to correct opposing counsel's erroneous understanding of the settlement, and arguing that the Commission's proposed sanctions were inappropriate. The Supreme Court held that, by definition, Potts' clients were engaged in fraudulent conduct, that Potts assisted in the conduct by not disclosing the conduct to the court and to opposing counsel in violation of the duty of truthfulness and by drafting a stipulation stating that all disputes had been settled when he knew that the parties relied on a misrepresentation in drafting a settlement, and that Potts could have avoided the situation by withdrawing from representation. Potts' conduct resulted in considerable injury to the parties, requiring one District Court proceeding and two appeals to determine the meaning and scope of the stipulation. The Commission's findings were affirmed. However, the court reversed the suspension of Potts' practice in light of mitigating factors of Potts' history of compliance with the rules of professional conduct and his good character and reputation to this point and held that public censure sufficed to apprise Potts of the gravity of the misconduct. In re Potts, 2007 MT 81, 336 M 517, 158 P3d 418 (2007).

Constitutional Due Process and Equal Protection Rights Not Violated by Procedure in Rule 9 Regulating Practice of Attorneys: Formal complaints against two attorneys were filed with the State Bar Commission on Practice, which recommended disciplinary actions against the attorneys. In their appeal, the attorneys contended that Rule 9 of the Rules on Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement, which sets forth the procedure relied on by the Commission, unconstitutionally violated their rights to due process, to an impartial tribunal, and to equal protection, because the procedure improperly vested both investigatory and adjudicatory functions in one body—the Commission. The Supreme Court disagreed. Applying Withrow v. Larkin, 421 US 35, 43 L Ed 2d 712, 95 S Ct 1456 (1975), the court noted that bias in a decisionmaker is not presumed and must be proved and that state and federal case law generally rejects the idea that the combination of judging and investigation functions is a denial of due process. Although attorneys who are confronted with proceedings that may result in the loss of their licenses to practice law are entitled to the same due process considerations as any other professionals faced with such proceedings, the attorneys in this case cited no authority stating that either equal protection or due process requires that identical procedures must be followed in all types of disciplinary proceedings, nor did they establish that the procedure for handling disciplinary complaints under Rule 9 denied them their constitutional rights. In re Goldstein & Albers v. Comm'n on Practice, 2000 MT 8, 297 M 493, 995 P2d 923, 57 St. Rep. 31 (2000), following In re Wyse, 212 M 339, 688 P2d 758, 41 St. Rep. 1780 (1984).

Constitutional Right to Due Process Not Violated by Confidentiality Provisions in Rule 13 Regulating Complaints Against Attorneys: Formal complaints against two attorneys were filed with the State Bar Commission on Practice, which recommended disciplinary actions against the attorneys. In their appeal, the attorneys contended that Rule 13 of the Rules on Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement violated their rights to due process, based on their alleged inability to prepare for their cases before the Commission because of the prohibition against reviewing documents in the Commission's files that were filed prior to the filing of the formal complaints against them. Although agreeing that any exculpatory evidence obtained by the Commission prior to filing of the formal complaints that is related to the matters eventually included in the formal complaints must be disclosed to the respondent attorneys, the Supreme Court's examination of the files and records in the present case revealed no such exculpatory evidence. Thus, the attorneys failed to demonstrate any due process violation. In re Goldstein & Albers v. Comm'n on Practice, 2000 MT 8, 297 M 493, 995 P2d 923, 57 St. Rep. 31 (2000), following In re Wyse, 212 M 339, 688 P2d 758, 41 St. Rep. 1780 (1984).

Constitutional Right to Equal Protection Not Violated by Confidentiality Provisions in Rule 13 Regulating Complaints Against Attorneys: Formal complaints against two attorneys were filed with the State Bar Commission on Practice, which recommended disciplinary actions against the attorneys. In their appeal, the attorneys contended that Rule 13 of the Rules on Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement violated their rights to equal protection under the law, making a comparison with the constitutional provision in Art. VII, sec. 11, Mont. Const., and statutes concerning the Judicial Standards Commission under which a judge responding to a disciplinary complaint may waive confidentiality. The Supreme Court found the argument inscrutable and unworthy of consideration. The attorneys failed to establish that they were treated differently under the Rules on Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement from than any other attorney facing disciplinary charges. In re Goldstein & Albers v. Comm'n on Practice, 2000 MT 8, 297 M 493, 995 P2d 923, 57 St. Rep. 31 (2000), following In re Wyse, 212 M 339, 688 P2d 758, 41 St. Rep. 1780 (1984).

Constitutional Right to Free Speech Not Violated by Confidentiality Provisions in Rule 13 Regulating Complaints Against Attorneys: Formal complaints against two attorneys were filed with the State Bar Commission on Practice, which recommended disciplinary actions against the attorneys. In their appeal, the attorneys contended that Rule 13 of the Rules on Lawyer Disciplinary Enforcement violated their rights to free speech by placing a blanket gag order on all freedom of expression relating to ethical charges against an attorney, citing Doe v. Supreme Court of Fla., 734 F. Supp. 981 (S.D. Fla. 1990). The Supreme Court distinguished Doe based on totally different facts and circumstances. The attorneys failed to establish that their free speech rights were violated. In re Goldstein & Albers v. Comm'n on Practice, 2000 MT 8, 297 M 493, 995 P2d 923, 57 St. Rep. 31 (2000), following In re Wyse, 212 M 339, 688 P2d 758, 41 St. Rep. 1780 (1984).

Disciplinary Rules for Attorneys in Remarks on Criminal Cases — Violation of Attorney's Freedom of Speech: Disciplinary Rules 7-107(B) and (H) of the Canons of Professional Ethics, adopted in Montana to govern the conduct of attorneys, restrict the use of extrajudicial statements in criminal actions on various subjects to protect the accused's right to a fair trial. The Supreme Court voided the Rules because, read literally, the Rules invaded an attorney's right of free speech; thus, a standard for interpretation of the Rules would be necessary to balance an attorney's right to free speech and the accused's right to a fair trial. The court declined to adopt such a standard and instead provided that new disciplinary rules be drafted incorporating such a standard. In re Keller, 213 M 196, 693 P2d 1211, 41 St. Rep. 2045 (1984).

Commission on Practice and Disciplinary Proceedings — Not Violative of Due Process: The Commission on Practice, a body appointed by the Supreme Court, undertakes proceedings relating to the discipline of members of the bar. The proceedings are designed to establish a record upon which the Supreme Court may act, the Supreme Court having retained exclusive jurisdiction over disciplinary matters. The accused member of the bar retains full rights of representation, confrontation, production of evidence, and argument before the Commission. The report of the Commission is not binding on the Supreme Court, and the accused may again make denials and argue defenses before the Supreme Court. This process does not constitute any deprivation of due process rights but rather provides an orderly process preserving in the accused the widest latitude of due process. In re Wyse, 212 M 339, 688 P2d 758, 41 St. Rep. 1780 (1984), followed in In re Goldstein & Albers v. Comm'n on Practice, 2000 MT 8, 297 M 493, 995 P2d 923, 57 St. Rep. 31 (2000).

Preservation of Confidences and Secrets of Client — Disciplinary Rule 4-101: Disciplinary Rule 4-101 relates to the preservation of confidences and secrets of a client. As the term "secret" is used in the rule, the rule prohibits the unconsented-to disclosure of information that would be embarrassing or detrimental to the client even though the information related to the client's child rather than to the client herself. In re Wyse, 212 M 339, 688 P2d 758, 41 St. Rep. 1780 (1984).

GENERAL

Dual Representation During Federal Criminal Investigation Violative of Rules of Professional Conduct: The Office of Disciplinary Counsel (ODC) filed a formal disciplinary complaint against an attorney for the attorney's representation of both a husband and wife, without obtaining an informed waiver of any actual or potential conflict, during a federal criminal investigation of the husband and, after the attorney no longer represented the husband, for the attorney's continued representation of the wife in the federal investigation and in divorce proceedings initiated against the husband. The Supreme Court upheld the Commission on Practice's decision to strike an ODC witness's testimony on the basis that the ODC improperly withheld new information from the attorney's counsel. The attorney violated Rule 1.7, Montana Rules of Professional Conduct, by concurrently representing the husband and wife during the federal investigation, regardless of whether the husband's defense was actually prejudiced, and violated Rule 1.9, Montana Rules of Professional Conduct, by subsequently representing the wife, whose position was materially adverse to her husband, the attorney's former client. In re Neuhardt, 2014 MT 88, 374 Mont. 379, 321 P.3d 833.

When Statute of Limitations Begins to Run on Legal Malpractice Claim Stemming From Criminal Representation: In a case of first impression, the Supreme Court considered whether the statute of limitations for a legal malpractice claim should be tolled while a criminal defendant pursues a claim for postconviction relief or whether the defendant should pursue a legal malpractice claim simultaneously with the claim for postconviction relief. After considering both approaches, the court adopted the two-track approach in Gebhardt v. O'Rourke, 510 NW 2d 900 (Mich. 1994), because it incorporates a strict reading of the statute of limitations and at the same time addresses problems posed by multiple litigations. Thus, pursuant to Gebhardt, a criminal defendant must file a malpractice claim within 3 years of discovering the act, error, or omission. With the claim preserved, the defendant can then seek a stay in the civil suit until the criminal case is resolved, and the trial court handling the civil suit would have discretion regarding the duration of the stay, keeping in mind the nature of the claim asserted for postconviction relief. After adopting this new rule, the Supreme Court declined to retroactively apply the rule in the present case on equitable grounds, but did put parties convicted in criminal proceedings on notice of the new rule henceforth. Ereth v. Cascade County, 2003 MT 328, 318 M 355, 81 P3d 463 (2003).

County Attorney Censured for Questioning Defendant Without Opposing Counsel Present: The Supreme Court censured a County Attorney for questioning a defendant when the defendant's attorney was not present and for failing to attend several hearings scheduled by the Commission on Practice. In re Quinlan, 245 M 438, 801 P2d 1337, 47 St. Rep. 2182 (1990).

Commission Findings Adopted — Disbarment Ordered: Adopting the findings of the Commission on Practice, the Supreme Court ordered disbarment based on facts that the attorney: (1) had been temporarily suspended from practice in 1990 for conviction of the crime of issuing bad checks and for nonpayment of State Bar of Montana membership dues; (2) failed to respond orally or in writing to a complaint filed by the Commission; (3) failed to perfect an appeal in the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals on behalf of a client who paid him to do so; (4) was convicted of criminal contempt for failure to appear at the sentencing of his client before the U.S. District Court of Western Michigan and misrepresented to the District Court Judge the nature of the Montana bad check charge; (5) was suspended by the State Bar in 1986 for noncompliance with court rules for mandatory continuing legal education and for failure to pay State Bar dues; (6) represented a client in federal court in California while suspended from practice of law in Montana; and (7) was admonished by the Third Circuit Court of Appeals in 1988 for failure to diligently prosecute his client's cause. In re Shrom, 246 M 333, 806 P2d 23, 47 St. Rep. 2086 (1990).

Commission Not Divested of Jurisdiction by Surrender of License: The appellant argued that his surrender of his license divested the Commission on Practice of its jurisdiction so that it could not take the further action of recommending his disbarment. The Supreme Court disagreed, pointing out that the pertinent rule was amended prior to the date of the surrender so that surrender no longer affected the Commission's jurisdiction. In re Pearce, 246 M 313, 806 P2d 21, 47 St. Rep. 2054 (1990).

Distinction Between Disbarment and Suspension: The Supreme Court held that although the statutes do not differentiate between disbarment and suspension, a difference does exist. The court indicated that disbarment implies a more permanent or severe penalty even though the disbarred attorney has the same rights to seek reinstatement as a suspended attorney. In re Morse, 245 M 49, 798 P2d 75, 47 St. Rep. 1189 (1990).

Consideration of Nature of Dealings Between Attorney and Client: When the determination of duties owed to an insurance company by its attorney involved a question of fact, the District Court did not err in examining past legal dealings between the parties or in ascertaining the exact duties expected of the attorney from an examination of the parties' conduct. Based on that conduct, the court properly concluded that the attorney had fulfilled his required advisory duties and was not liable for any negligence or breach of contract. Aetna Fin. Co. v. Ball, 237 M 535, 774 P2d 992, 46 St. Rep. 1031 (1989).

Establishment of Professional Negligence Action Against Attorney — Proof Required: To establish a professional negligence action, the plaintiff must prove that the professional owed him a duty and that the professional failed to live up to that duty, causing damages to the plaintiff. In pursuing a negligence or breach of contract action against an attorney, the plaintiff must initially establish the existence of an attorney-client relationship. The plaintiff must then establish that the acts constituting negligence or breach of contract occurred, proximately causing damages to the plaintiff. Finally, the plaintiff must establish that but for the negligence or breach of contract, the client would have been successful in the prosecution or defense of the action. Lorash v. Epstein, 236 M 21, 767 P2d 1335, 46 St. Rep. 151 (1989), citing Christy v. Saliterman, 179 NW 2d 288 (Minn. 1970), and followed in Merzlak v. Purcell, 252 M 527, 830 P2d 1278, 49 St. Rep. 139 (1992), Oar Lock Land & Cattle Co. v. Crowley, 253 M 336, 833 P2d 146, 49 St. Rep. 456 (1992), Kane v. Miller, 258 M 182, 852 P2d 130, 50 St. Rep. 488 (1993), Moore v. Does 1 to 25, 271 M 162, 895 P2d 209, 52 St. Rep. 399 (1995), Fang v. Bock, 2001 MT 116, 305 M 322, 28 P3d 456 (2001), and Babcock Place Ltd. Partnership v. Berg, Lilly, Andriolo, & Tollefsen, P.C., 2003 MT 111, 315 M 364, 69 P3d 1145 (2003).

Misconduct Warranting Disbarment Rather Than Suspension: Disbarment, rather than temporary suspension, was appropriate for an attorney charged with seven counts of misconduct in the practice of law, including the use of methods that serve only to embarrass and burden a third party, failure to provide competent representation, failure to exercise the degree of competency required of an attorney in prosecuting an action without a good faith basis, and the promotion of prostitution. In re Bechhold, 235 M 383, 771 P2d 563, 46 St. Rep. 74 (1989).

Indefinite Suspension Proper — Violation of Ethics Rules: The Supreme Court adopted the recommendations of the Commission on Practice that an attorney be indefinitely suspended from practice, be required to remit client fees, and pay Commission costs. The Commission found that Rules 1.16(d) and 8.4(c) of the Rules of Professional Conduct were violated by the attorney's failure to remit client fees and return his work product to the clients when he knew or should have known that he was going to leave the state and could not represent the clients. Also, Rules 8.4(c), 8.4(d), and 3.3(a)(1) were violated when the attorney set forth as one continuous quotation statements actually taken from two entirely different portions of a deposition, resulting in a misleading representation of testimony. In re Ziskind, 233 M 510, 766 P2d 218, 45 St. Rep. 1691 (1988).

Suspension and Censure Appropriate — Ethics Violations: The Supreme Court affirmed the recommendations of the Commission on Practice to censure and suspend an attorney after substantiating counts of filing frivolous and unfounded ethics violations claims against opposing counsel; disobedience of a judge's order; attempting to obstruct justice; physical assault; outrageous, undignified, and discourteous conduct; intimidation and threats to a public official; contacting a prospective client for private representation on a matter investigated by the County Attorney's office; conflict of interest; contacting an adverse party represented by counsel; and a continued pattern of misconduct. In re Belue, 232 M 365, 766 P2d 206, 45 St. Rep. 1119 (1988).

Expert Testimony Required in Legal Malpractice Case — Directed Verdict Proper: An attorney's standard of care depends on the skill and care ordinarily exercised by attorneys—a criteria that rarely falls within the common knowledge of lay persons. Therefore, expert testimony is required in a legal malpractice case. Absent such testimony, a directed verdict was proper. Carlson v. Morton, 229 M 234, 745 P2d 1133, 44 St. Rep. 1929 (1987), followed in Brown v. Small, 251 M 414, 825 P2d 1209, 49 St. Rep. 98 (1992), and Moore v. Does 1 to 25, 271 M 162, 895 P2d 209, 52 St. Rep. 399 (1995).

Disciplinary Action Against Attorney: The Supreme Court relied on the findings of fact of the Commission on Practice and concluded that the attorney who was the subject of the disciplinary action failed to shift the burden of demonstrating that the findings were not supported by the evidence or that the recommendations were erroneous or unlawful. However, the court rejected the Commission's recommendation that the attorney be disbarred. In re Goldman, 179 M 526, 588 P2d 964, 35 St. Rep. 1912 (1978).

Maliciously Attempting to Deprive Persons of Property: Professional misconduct in the form of maliciously filing a quitclaim deed to cloud the title of property in order to deprive the owner of the property merits disbarment. In re Conklin, 169 M 549, 556 P2d 1237, 33 St. Rep. 1024 (1976).

Exceptions to Findings of Commission on Practice — Sham: The purpose of making and filing exceptions to the report, findings, and recommendations of the Commission on Practice is to permit one charged with misconduct to challenge the findings of the Commission or its conclusions resulting from an adversary hearing wherein the weight of evidence is considered and the conclusions arrived at thereby. When the person charged offers no evidence and waives the presentation of proof, an exception to the findings or conclusions of the Commission is a sham and frivolous. In re Carstensen, 167 M 321, 539 P2d 387 (1975).

Recommendations of Commission Rejected: Although the recommendations of the Commission on Practice are given careful consideration, the recommendation of indefinite suspension was rejected for attorney who admitted to violations involving moral turpitude with no proof of mental disease or defect, and disbarment was ordered. In re Hall, 164 M 543, 530 P2d 456 (1974).

Debauching of Young Girl: Disbarment was justified for attorney who had been previously disciplined by reprimand and who, after having been charged with debauching young girl, represented her procurer in criminal proceedings, represented both parties in procurer's divorce action, represented girl in quashing affidavit after procurer had married her, and represented another defendant charged with raping the girl. In re Keast, 159 M 311, 497 P2d 103 (1972).

No Jurisdictional Question as to Decision to Act: Where the accused attorney is charged with felonies committed without the sphere of his duties as such but the court, after an investigation by the Attorney General and report made to it by him sufficient to move its discretion, has decided to act, its exercise of that discretion does not present a jurisdictional question. In re Young, 77 M 332, 250 P 957 (1926).

Jurisdiction of Supreme Court Exclusive: The Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction in a disbarment proceeding to hear the evidence and determine the truth of charges of crimes and misdemeanors involving moral turpitude, whether committed within this jurisdiction or not and whether within or without the sphere of official duty. In re Thresher, 33 M 441, 84 P 876 (1906).

Sufficiency of Evidence: Sufficient facts were not stated to render respondent liable to disbarment under subsection (2)(e) of this section. In re Weed, 26 M 241, 67 P 308 (1902), distinguished in In re McCue, 80 M 537, 261 P 341 (1927).

Accusation by Private Person Allowed: Where an accusation preferred by a private person in a disbarment proceeding is for a cause named in subsection (2)(e) of this section, an objection that such accusation is preferred by a person not authorized by law to inform the court of the matters therein charged is without merit. In re Wellcome, 23 M 140, 58 P 45 (1899).

Nature of Action Not Criminal: A proceeding in disbarment is in no sense a criminal investigation. In re Thresher, 33 M 441, 84 P 876 (1906); In re Wellcome, 23 M 213, 58 P 47 (1899).

Truth of Charges Alone Not Investigated: Where the accused is charged with bribery and conspiracy, the court will refuse to inquire into the truth of the charges unless reasons be furnished by the accusation or by a showing in support of it why jurisdiction should be entertained in advance of a criminal prosecution and conviction. In re Wellcome, 23 M 140, 58 P 45 (1899), distinguished in In re Young, 77 M 332, 250 P 957 (1926).

CONVICTION OF CRIME

Censure and Temporary Suspension for Crimes of Moral Turpitude: The record of conviction of misdemeanors involving moral turpitude, including failure to disburse and an aggravated case of resisting arrest, was conclusive evidence of cause for public censure and removal or suspension from practice. In re Vainio, 240 M 413, 787 P2d 744, 46 St. Rep. 2094 (1989).

Scheme to Defraud as Warranting Disbarment: Conviction by a jury in a federal court of the offense of devising and intending to devise a scheme to defraud and to obtain money by means of false and fraudulent pretenses warranted attorney's disbarment. In re Gross, 160 M 506, 503 P2d 995 (1972), certiorari denied 410 US 991 (1973).

Action by Court on Own Motion: Under subsection (2)(a) of this section, whenever it is brought to its attention that an attorney of the bar of this state has been convicted of a felony or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude in a state or federal court, the Supreme Court will on its own motion and on the record of conviction alone strike his name from the roll of attorneys. In re Peters, 73 M 284, 235 P 772 (1925).

Only Record of Conviction Necessary: Since, generally, the record of conviction of an attorney itself shows whether the crime or misdemeanor of which he was convicted involved moral turpitude, the only question before the Supreme Court in a disbarment proceeding based upon subsection (2)(a) of this section is whether he was convicted, not whether he was actually guilty. In re Peters, 73 M 284, 235 P 772 (1925).

Nature of Action Not Criminal: A proceeding in disbarment is in no sense a criminal investigation. In re Thresher, 33 M 441, 84 P 876 (1906); In re Wellcome, 23 M 213, 58 P 47 (1899).

DECEIT INVOLVING MORAL TURPITUDE

Fraudulent Procurement of Real Estate: Disbarment, rather than 3 months' suspension, was ordered for attorney who grossly overcharged aged and illiterate client on annual retainer basis, then procured conveyance to himself of valuable real estate on pretext of protecting client's interest but refused to reconvey on demand claiming that the conveyance had been in consideration for legal services. In re McDonald, 112 M 129, 113 P2d 790 (1941).

Defrauding of Bank: Evidence in a disbarment proceeding reviewed and held sufficient to warrant the referee's findings that the accused had made a false entry upon a blank bank deposit slip on which by inadvertence the signature of a bank officer had been placed in carbon and on which on presentation to the bank he had obtained credit for the amount of such entry, thus defrauding the bank of that amount. In re Young, 77 M 332, 250 P 957 (1926).

Misrepresentation as to Sanity of Party: Where an attorney at law testifies, in an action which, by reason of the defense interposed, involves the legality of a marriage, that one of the parties to such marriage was at the time thereof insane, such testimony being given for the purpose and with the intent of deceiving the court and inducing the presiding judge to believe that such party was incapable of entering into a marriage contract, such conduct of the attorney justifies his disbarment under subsection (2)(e) of this section. In re O'Keefe, 55 M 200, 175 P 593 (1918).

Attorney Representing Both Parties: Where an attorney acted for both parties in a divorce proceeding without acquainting the court with all the facts connected with the case, he was guilty of deceit and malpractice involving moral turpitude. In re Carleton, 33 M 431, 84 P 788 (1906).

Divorce Proceedings — Agreement for Fees: The conduct of an attorney who entered into a contract with his client in a divorce proceeding whereby he was to receive, in addition to the attorney's fee that might be allowed him by the court, a portion of all money received by his client as alimony, and who failed to call such agreement to the court's attention prior to the making of the order allowing counsel fees, is reprehensible and in violation of his duty as a member of the bar, in that he was guilty of deceit and malpractice involving moral turpitude. In re Carleton, 33 M 431, 84 P 788 (1906).

MISAPPROPRIATION

Commingling of Client's Funds: When an attorney commingled the proceeds of a Veterans' Administration (now Veterans Affairs) loan with his own funds and used them to pay obligations other than that for which the loan was intended, deceived the Veterans' Administration (now Department of Veterans Affairs) and the client as to the status of documents pertaining to the loan, and had received a prior private censure for like conduct, he was ordered disbarred. In re Carstensen, 167 M 321, 539 P2d 384 (1975).

Unauthorized Use of Estate Funds as Deceit: The conduct of an attorney in opening a checking account in the name of an estate of which he had been appointed executor and making withdrawals for his personal use constituted deceit and malpractice involving moral turpitude. In re O'Donnell, 143 M 51, 387 P2d 303 (1963).

Willful Refusal to Return Funds as Violation of Oath: Under subsection (2)(b) of this section, providing that an attorney may be disbarred for "violation of the oath taken by him, or of his duties as such attorney", an attorney may be punished for a willful omission to remit money collected by him as such, even though he did not practice deceit and frankly admits his delinquency. In re McCue, 80 M 537, 261 P 341 (1927).

Misrepresentation and Personal Use of Funds Deposited With Clerk: An attorney, after securing an order of court to that effect, withdrew the sum of $414.90 deposited by a client with a Clerk of Court as a tender, after final disposition of the action by the Supreme Court adverse to his client, and thereafter, in reply to inquiries by the client, repeatedly stated that the money was still in the hands of the Clerk, where it should remain until the end of the litigation so as to keep the tender good, notwithstanding the funds had long been misappropriated by him. Under pretense that he was still conducting the litigation in her behalf, he obtained the additional sum of $65 at various times as court fees and expenses. For these acts the attorney was guilty of conduct warranting his disbarment. In re Thresher, 33 M 441, 84 P 876 (1906). See also In re Lunke, 56 M 226, 182 P 126 (1919).

MORAL TURPITUDE

Pattern of Conduct as Reason for Disbarment: Even though an act falls short of an offense involving moral turpitude under case law prior to adoption by the Supreme Court of the canons of professional ethics, it may justify disbarment. Even though an individual act or omission may in and of itself be insufficient grounds for action, repeated violations establishing a pattern of conduct revealing a gross disregard for the highest standards of honesty, justice, or morality may and should be grounds for disbarment, suspension, censure, or a request for surrender of license to practice law. In re Advisory Opinion to Comm'n on Practice, 156 M 514, 495 P2d 1128 (1971).

Failure to Return Employees' Withholding Taxes: Failure of attorney to make return of employees' withholding taxes was offense involving moral turpitude under this section so as to justify indefinite suspension from practice. In re Kline, 156 M 177, 477 P2d 881 (1970).

Vices to Affect Attorneys' Personal or Professional Integrity: Since complaints against attorneys may be prosecuted only for causes specified by this section, where specific charges under that section are made and none of them present the question of general moral delinquency other than such as may be included under subsection (2)(e), "being guilty of deceit, malpractice, crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude", the court is confined to the specifications made against him, upon which he was tried, and cannot punish him for vices affecting to some extent his moral character but not his personal or professional integrity. In re McCue, 80 M 537, 261 P 341 (1927).

Definition: Moral turpitude, within the meaning of this section, authorizing the disbarment of an attorney on conviction of a crime or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, is everything done contrary to justice, honesty, or good morals. In re Peters, 73 M 284, 235 P 772 (1925).

Forgery: The crime of forgery involves moral turpitude within the meaning of subsection (2)(a) of this section. In re Sutton, 50 M 88, 145 P 6 (1914).

Conviction of Crime — No Discretion for Supreme Court: Where an attorney has been convicted of a felony or a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, the Supreme Court is left without discretion in the matter of his removal or suspension but must proceed under this section on receipt of a certified copy of the record of conviction, which is considered to be conclusive evidence. Permanent Disbarment Not Mandated for Felony: Permanent disbarment is not mandated upon conviction of a felony. In re McKeon, 201 M 515, 656 P2d 179, 39 St. Rep. 2270 (1982).

Reinstatement Following Disbarment for Multiple Felonies: On the record, petitioner showed by clear and convincing evidence that he was entitled to reinstatement to the State Bar of Montana. Petitioner had pleaded guilty to the felonies of offering false evidence, obtaining money by false pretenses, grand larceny by bailee, and forgery. Eight years had passed, and he had served his prison time and was making restitution on schedule. He had lived an exemplary life during the 8 years and had a record of immense service to the public prior to the commission of the felonies. The evidence against reinstatement consisted of a letter stating that felons should be denied reinstatement and a statement from a businessman that reinstatement should be denied in view of the severity of the crimes. Reinstatement was supported by 20 letters and by petitions with approximately 250 signatures, 48 of them those of lawyers. No person requested an opportunity to appear at a hearing in opposition to the application for reinstatement. An investigation into the application had been made. The evidence uniformly showed that applicant had reformed and that the public believed he had reformed. In re McKeon, 201 M 515, 656 P2d 179, 39 St. Rep. 2270 (1982).

Negligence of Attorney: Attorney was deprived of the right to practice in the courts of Montana for 45 days where he was guilty of deliberate falsehood in telling client that case filed in April 1956 was at issue and was awaiting trial, the debtor in the action having entered no appearance and default judgment such as was entered on April 11, 1961, could have been entered in June of 1956. In re Hirst, 140 M 91, 368 P2d 157 (1962).

Part 4
Provisions Regulating Practice

Part Case Notes

Defendant's Convictions Upheld — Alleged Ineffective Assistance Not Contributing to Convictions: The defendant was questioned by police after he was arrested and charged with deliberate homicide for the death of his ex-wife and tampering with evidence. During the questioning, the defendant was advised of his Miranda rights, he declined to waive his rights, and at times he indicated that he did not need an attorney, while at other times he indicated that he had an attorney. The defendant also said he would not answer questions, but he continued to do so and never told the police to stop. At trial, the defendant filed a motion to suppress, arguing that the police interview violated his right to counsel. The District Court denied the motion, and the defendant's attorney failed to seek admission of a video recording of the interview for the purpose of pointing out undisputed inconsistencies in the trial transcript. One of the clips in the video allegedly showed the defendant indicating he would not continue in the interview without an attorney. After deliberations, the jury convicted the defendant of both charges. On appeal, the defendant argued that his defense counsel provided ineffective assistance by failing to present the video recording of the police interview at the suppression hearing. The Supreme Court determined there was no reasonable probability the results of the trial would have been different had the video recording of the interview been held admissible based on all the other evidence in the case. Consequently, the defendant was unable to establish prejudice and his ineffective assistance of counsel claim was denied. St. v. Larson, 2015 MT 271, 381 Mont. 94, 356 P.3d 488.

Motion to Disqualify Properly Denied — No Violation of Rules of Professional Conduct: The wife in a dissolution proceeding moved to disqualify and enjoin the husband's attorney on the basis that the wife had consulted the same attorney years before the dissolution was filed about representing the wife in a dissolution proceeding against the husband. The District Court denied the motion. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, concluding that disqualification was improper under Rule 1.20 of the Rules of Professional Conduct because the wife did not establish that any of the information she divulged to the attorney could have any impact on the current dissolution proceeding and that it was permissible for the attorney to testify at the disqualification hearing pursuant to Rule 3.7 of the Rules of Professional Conduct and, pursuant to Rules 1.6 and 1.9 of the Rules of Professional Conduct, to use information about her previous contact with the wife to respond to the wife's allegations. In re Marriage of Perry, 2013 MT 6, 368 Mont. 211, 293 P.3d 170.

Causation in Legal Malpractice Claim — Summary Judgment Not Proper — Plaintiffs Not Required to Show Claim Would Have Been Successful: An attorney missed a statute of limitations deadline in a medical malpractice case by failing to file an application with the Montana Medical Legal Panel before filing a complaint in District Court, as required under 27-6-301 and 27-6-701. After the medical malpractice claim was dismissed, the plaintiffs filed a legal malpractice case against the attorney, but the District Court dismissed the legal malpractice case during summary judgment on the grounds that the plaintiffs did not carry the burden of showing that the underlying medical malpractice claim would have been successful. On appeal, the Supreme Court revisited Busta v. Columbus Hosp. Corp., 276 Mont. 342, 916 P.2d 122 (1996), Babcock Place Ltd. Partnership v. Berg, Lilly, Andriolo, & Tollefsen, P.C., 2003 MT 111, 315 Mont. 364, 69 P.3d 1145, and Fisher v. Swift Transp. Co., Inc., 2008 MT 105, 342 Mont. 335, 181 P.3d 601, and determined that it was error for the District Court to require the plaintiffs to prove that the medical malpractice case would have been successful given that there was no independent intervening cause after the plaintiffs' injury. All that was required was a showing that the plaintiffs' injury (not being able to pursue the case) would not have occurred but for the attorney's negligent conduct. Labair v. Carey, 2012 MT 312, 367 Mont. 453, 291 P.3d 1160.

Loss of Opportunity for Settlement Based on Attorney Missing Filing Deadline — Potential Value in Medical Malpractice Claim That Can Survive Summary Judgment: An attorney missed a statute of limitations deadline in a medical malpractice case by failing to file an application with the Montana Medical Legal Panel before filing a complaint in District Court, as required under 27-6-301 and 27-6-701. After the medical malpractice claim was dismissed, the plaintiffs filed a legal malpractice case against the attorney, but the District Court dismissed the legal malpractice case during summary judgment on the grounds that the plaintiffs did not carry the burden of showing that the underlying medical malpractice claim would have been successful. On appeal, the Supreme Court concluded that the plaintiffs could have survived summary judgment on the underlying medical malpractice claim and that the loss of the opportunity to present the claim was an injury that prevented the plaintiffs from receiving a favorable outcome by way of settlement or trial. Labair v. Carey, 2012 MT 312, 367 Mont. 453, 291 P.3d 1160, following Spencer v. Beck, 2010 MT 256, 358 Mont. 295, 245 P.3d 21.

Neglect by Attorney Attributable to Client — Sanctions Upheld: Ending a 3-year discovery dispute, the District Court sanctioned the defendants by ordering a default judgment in favor of the plaintiff. The defendants moved to set aside the order, claiming that their attorney was partly responsible and that his actions should not be attributed to them. The District Court denied the motion, reasoning that the defendants had prevented the attorney from producing discovery documents by not providing them to the attorney in the first place, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Kraft v. High Country Motors, Inc., 2012 MT 83, 364 Mont. 465, 276 P.3d 908.

Former or Current Client — Plaintiffs' Attorney Joins Law Firm Representing Defendants — Motion to Disqualify Firm — Denial of Motion Reversed: The plaintiffs sued a lender for breach of contract, breach of the covenants of good faith and fair dealing, and fraud. Early in the case, the plaintiffs' attorney hired a tax attorney to advise them on certain issues related to their case. The plaintiffs and both attorneys met to discuss the case against the lender. Following the meeting, the plaintiffs received from the tax attorney an engagement letter and a bill, which the plaintiffs paid. A few weeks before the trial date, the plaintiffs received a letter from the tax attorney notifying them that he had taken a position with the law firm representing the lender. This was the plaintiffs' first notice that the tax attorney intended to join the opposing law firm. The plaintiffs moved to disqualify the firm from representing the lender. The lender claimed that the plaintiffs were former clients of the tax attorney and therefore, under the Rules of Professional Conduct, the firm could continue to represent the lender as long as there was a screen in place. The District Court agreed that the plaintiffs were former clients and denied the motion to disqualify. The plaintiffs appealed to the Supreme Court, which reversed the District Court. The Supreme Court concluded that the plaintiffs reasonably believed they were current clients of the tax attorney based on the engagement letter, the fact the bill did not indicate it was a final bill, and the lack of notice. Because the plaintiffs were current clients at the time the tax attorney joined the other law firm, the Supreme Court held that the firm was disqualified from representing the lender. Krutzfeldt Ranch, LLC v. Pinnacle Bank, 2012 MT 15, 363 Mont. 366, 272 P.3d 635.

Charging Unreasonable Fee and Improper Handling of Client's Trust Funds Grounds for Attorney's Sanction: Although the Commission on Practice found that attorney Engel violated no rules of practice and recommended no sanctions, the Supreme Court weighed the Commission's findings and disagreed. Engel violated Rule 1.5 of the Rules of Professional Conduct by charging an unreasonable fee of $121,545 for handling an uncontested trust termination proceeding for which an attorney customarily would have received between $1,500 and $2,500. Engel also improperly commingled hundreds of thousands of dollars of trust funds with his personal operating account rather than depositing the client funds into a trust account, in violation of Rules 1.15 and 1.18 of the Rules of Professional Conduct. The court remanded the case to the Commission for recommendation of an appropriate sanction for the rules violations. In re Engel, 2007 MT 172, 338 M 179, 169 P3d 345 (2007).

Following remand, the Commission on Practice, citing several mitigating factors, recommended that Engel be subjected to public censure and be required to pay the costs of the disciplinary proceedings, but that no harsher sanctions be imposed. The Supreme Court examined each cited mitigating factor, but failed to find any of the factors persuasive. Engel was therefore not only publicly censured and required to pay the costs of the disciplinary proceedings, but was also suspended from the practice of law for 60 days. In re Engel, 2008 MT 42, 341 M 360, 177 P3d 502 (2008).

Following the 2008 Engel decision (Engel II), Engel filed an objection, alleging that the process by which the Supreme Court reviewed the disciplinary proceeding deprived the court of jurisdiction over the formal complaint filed by the Office of Disciplinary Counsel against Engel. The Supreme Court vacated the public censure and accepted briefs on the jurisdiction issue. After a review of the proceedings in Engel I and Engel II, the court concluded that nothing in the process by which the court came to review Engel's disciplinary proceeding deprived the court of its constitutionally endowed authority to regulate lawyer conduct, so the court maintained subject matter jurisdiction throughout. Engel enjoyed the full panoply of rights afforded to lawyers facing disciplinary proceedings, and no procedural due process rights were violated. Engel's public censure was reinstated, and he was assessed with costs of the proceedings and suspended from practice for 60 days. In re Engel, 2008 MT 215, 344 M 219, 194 P3d 613 (2008).

No Showing of Damages or That Client Would Have Prevailed on Lost Appeal of Marital Dissolution Case — Failure of Legal Malpractice Claim: Richards brought a malpractice claim against an attorney who negligently failed to appeal Richards' marriage dissolution proceeding prior to the deadline for appeal. The District Court dismissed the claim, ruling that the court, rather than a jury, should decide the consequences of the attorney's failure to file the appeal and that the lost appeal would not have succeeded. Richards appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Even though the attorney admitted malpractice by allowing the claim to expire, the attorney contended that no damages occurred. When a malpractice claim changes to the question of whether an attorney perfected an appeal, the analysis shifts from one of fact to one of law, which is properly considered by the court rather than a jury. The question of the probable outcome of a lost appeal also presents a question of law for the trial court to decide based on the special expertise required to analyze the relevant law and rules of appellate procedure, and the review is limited to the transcript and record of the underlying action and arguments presented by counsel. Here, there was substantial credible evidence regarding primary parenting time, valuation of the marital estate, and child support payments showing that Richards' lost appeal would not have resulted in a successful or favorable outcome. Further, one element of a legal malpractice claim requires a showing that the attorney's conduct proximately caused damages suffered by the claimant. Because Richards failed to show that the lost appeal would have been successful, he also failed to show that the attorney's breach caused any damages, so the malpractice claim failed. Richards v. Knuchel, 2005 MT 133, 327 M 249, 115 P3d 189 (2005).

Attorney's Duty of Care Owed to Estate Beneficiary — Standing of Estate to Bring Legal Malpractice Action: A personal representative brought a legal malpractice damage suit on behalf of the estate against an attorney who drafted a trust document and will. Before granting summary judgment to the attorney, the District Court raised the issue of whether the estate and personal representative had standing to bring the suit, based on a questionable fiduciary relationship between the plaintiffs and the attorney. On appeal, the Supreme Court concluded that as a representative of the decedent, the estate stood in the shoes of the decedent and was thus considered to be in privity with the attorney, so the estate had standing to bring a malpractice claim. Further, the question of whether the trust and the personal representative had standing was a question of fact to be determined at trial, so summary judgment was precluded and the case remanded for further proceedings. Watkins Trust v. Lacosta, 2004 MT 144, 321 M 432, 92 P3d 620 (2004).

Legal Malpractice Claim by Estate Not Barred by Res Judicata, Equitable Estoppel, or Judicial Estoppel: A personal representative brought a legal malpractice damage suit on behalf of the estate against an attorney who drafted a trust document and will. The trust beneficiaries brought a separate suit against the trustee. The District Court granted summary judgment for the attorney on grounds of res judicata, equitable estoppel, and judicial estoppel. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Res judicata and collateral estoppel did not apply because the subject matter and parties in the beneficiaries' suit were different. Equitable estoppel did not apply because the defendants did not present any evidence to establish that they relied on an act by the personal representative or changed their position for the worse because of that act. Judicial estoppel did not apply because the judicial admission in this case referred only to plaintiffs' legal theory and not to an unequivocal statement of fact and because of the absence of any evidence that defendants were misled by a judicial admission. Thus, summary judgment was inappropriate. Watkins Trust v. Lacosta, 2004 MT 144, 321 M 432, 92 P3d 620 (2004).

No Attorney Negligence Given Reasonable Representation — Jury Verdict Affirmed: Plaintiffs contended that defendant, their attorney, was negligent by failing to obtain and review all relevant documents in order to explain the nature of a business transaction in order for plaintiffs to make an informed decision and that by failing in this duty, the attorney negligently allowed plaintiffs to make a binding commitment to sell the business. After 5 days of trial, which included conflicting testimony from experts for both parties, a jury found that the attorney was not negligent. After reviewing the record, the Supreme Court affirmed. When viewed in the light most favorable to the attorney, there was sufficient credible evidence to support the jury's conclusion that the attorney met the duty of care to plaintiffs. Moreover, it was within the standard of care for the attorney to rely on the opinion of a financial consultant as to the reasonableness of the financial tests contained in the sale agreement. The court declined to reverse a jury verdict that was supported by substantial credible evidence. Byers v. Cummings, 2004 MT 69, 320 M 339, 87 P3d 465 (2004).

No Prejudice in Jury Instructions Explaining General Elements of Legal Malpractice: Plaintiffs contended that general instructions regarding the elements of legal malpractice given to the jury in a legal malpractice case were internally inconsistent, incomplete, and essentially confusing. Defendant attorney asserted that the jury was advised that the attorney had a duty to use the care and skill ordinarily used by lawyers practicing in Montana and that the jury was not confused by an instruction that did not recite every duty discussed by an expert. The Supreme Court agreed with defendant. Although the trial court might have crafted other instructions that may have better assisted the jury in considering the law applicable to the case, when taken as a whole, the instructions, when coupled with extensive expert testimony for both parties, adequately described the attorney's standard of care and did not potentially mislead or confuse the jury, resulting in prejudice to plaintiffs. Byers v. Cummings, 2004 MT 69, 320 M 339, 87 P3d 465 (2004).

Question of Material Fact Regarding Law Firm's Handling of Real Estate Contract — Summary Judgment Improperly Granted: Plaintiff sued its law firm for work performed in writing a contract for a real estate transaction. Plaintiff's expert opined that the firm violated the standard of care when it: (1) had a nonattorney with no contract drafting experience draft the initial agreement and insert an inaccurate legal description of the property obtained from plaintiff's own engineering firm; (2) used the phrase "more or less" to cure defects in the property description when the legal description was clearly deficient; (3) failed to include a provision that required the seller to sign future applications for a final plat; and (4) failed to execute proper escrow documents to prevent the seller from having veto power over any proposed development of the property. The law firm presented its own expert to refute the allegations. The District Court analyzed the allegations of negligence, applying the legal malpractice standards in Lorash v. Epstein, 236 M 21, 767 P2d 1335 (1989), and, finding no issues of material fact, granted the law firm's motion for summary judgment. Plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed, finding that summary judgment was improper. The conflicting expert testimony itself raised a material issue of fact regarding the standard of care that required resolution by a trier of fact. Further, material questions remained concerning whether the law firm's independent failure to recognize a problem with the legal description contributed as a cause to plaintiff's damages, whether the firm followed the requisite standard of care in drafting the escrow agreement, and whether the purported terms of the escrow agreement satisfied the requisite standard of care. Babcock Place Ltd. Partnership v. Berg, Lilly, Andriolo, & Tollefsen, P.C., 2003 MT 111, 315 M 364, 69 P3d 1145 (2003).

Defense Attorney's Remarks Constituting Entry of Plea Without Defendant's Consent and Undermining Plea Agreement — Prejudice Warranting New Trial: Jefferson indicated in a pretrial letter to the District Court that he wished to withdraw from a plea agreement to plead guilty to felony assault in order to have the opportunity to either be acquitted or be convicted of a lesser offense than felony assault. However, in both opening statements and in closing arguments, Jefferson's defense counsel admitted Jefferson's guilt to felony assault, undermining the very purpose for which Jefferson withdrew from the plea agreement and directly contravening the reason Jefferson accepted the risk involved in facing the more serious charge of attempted deliberate homicide in a jury trial. Counsel's statements had the effect of entering a plea for Jefferson without Jefferson's consent and by which the jury was not bound. The admission could not be considered a trial strategy or tactical decision under the circumstances, and counsel's conduct fell below the reasonable range of professional conduct required. The question under the Strickland test then became whether Jefferson was prejudiced by counsel's conduct. Counsel precluded Jefferson from making a case for a lesser offense by admitting Jefferson's guilt of felony assault, denying Jefferson of both the right to deny guilt and to have the benefit of the previous agreement to admit guilt. There would have been no reason for Jefferson to withdraw from the plea agreement or to go to trial if he had been aware that his counsel would initiate the trial with an admission of guilt to felony assault. This prejudicial conduct by counsel rendered the criminal proceeding fundamentally unfair, and the Supreme Court reversed for a new trial. St. v. Jefferson, 2003 MT 90, 315 M 146, 69 P3d 641 (2003).

Implied Attorney-Client Relationship — Motion for Disqualification of Attorney — Client's Burden of Showing Reasonable Belief That Attorney-Client Relationship Exists: Defendant telephoned attorney Penwell's office and spoke to the legal secretary regarding possible representation in this action, but never spoke personally to Penwell. Defendant was informed that Penwell was accepting no new cases and was referred to another attorney. Penwell ultimately appeared as counsel for plaintiff, and defendant moved to disqualify Penwell, asserting that confidential information was disclosed during the telephone conversation with the secretary and that the information was imputed to Penwell, creating an attorney-client relationship. At the hearing on the motion, defendant did not disclose what type of information was allegedly disclosed, relying on the conclusory statement that what was disclosed was confidential. The District Court denied the motion, holding that defendant had failed to meet the burden of conclusively establishing the existence of an attorney-client relationship. Defendant appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Although an alleged client should not be required to reveal actual confidences at a disqualification hearing, the alleged client must at least inform the court of the nature of the information disclosed so that the court can make a reasoned judgment. Under the circumstances, defendant could not have reasonably believed that an attorney-client relationship was formed with Penwell, based upon two telephone conversations with the secretary, when defendant never spoke or met with Penwell, and was advised that Penwell would not take the case. Pro-Hand Serv. Trust v. Monthei, 2002 MT 134, 310 M 165, 49 P3d 56 (2002). See also Krutzfeldt Ranch, LLC v. Pinnacle Bank, 2012 MT 15, 363 Mont. 366, 272 P.3d 635.

Improper Grant of Motion to Dismiss Legal Malpractice Suit for Failure to State Claim Upon Which Relief Could Be Granted: Hauschulz faced criminal charges in Billings, and while awaiting trial, he was extradited to Idaho on unrelated charges and incarcerated. The Michael Law Firm was hired to represent Hauschulz in the Billings proceedings, which Hauschulz could not attend. Instead of moving for dismissal of the charges unless Montana extradited Hauschulz, the law firm professed not to know where Hauschulz was and negotiated an unauthorized plea agreement on behalf of Hauschulz. Upon learning of the law firm's actions, Hauschulz filed a legal malpractice complaint alleging constitutional violations and requesting damages. The District Court dismissed the action on grounds that Hauschulz had failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, reasoning that no damages could be awarded because Hauschulz's problems all stemmed from the failure to appear at trial. Hauschulz appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. A complaint should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond a doubt that plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of the claim that would entitle the plaintiff to relief, and a dismissal will be affirmed by the Supreme Court only if plaintiff is not entitled to relief under any set of facts that would support the claim. As set out in Merzlak v. Purcell, 252 M 527, 830 P2d 1278 (1992), to recover damages in a legal malpractice claim, plaintiff must establish that: (1) the professional owed plaintiff a duty of care; (2) the professional breached the duty of care through failure to use reasonable care and skill; (3) plaintiff suffered an injury; and (4) the professional's conduct was the proximate cause of the injury. In this case, the Supreme Court found that each element was satisfied. Hauschulz might be able to prove a set of facts that would entitle him to relief and has stated a sufficient claim to survive a challenge under former Rule 12(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded). Hauschulz v. Michael Law Firm, 2001 MT 160, 306 M 102, 30 P3d 357 (2001). See also Trankel v. St., 282 M 348, 938 P2d 614 (1997).

Failure to Show That but for Negligent Legal Advice, Deportation Could Have Been Successfully Defended — Professional Negligence Claim Properly Dismissed: Fang, a Chinese citizen and lawful permanent United States resident employed by Montana State University-Bozeman, was involved in a domestic dispute with his wife that resulted in charges of assault. Fang consulted Bock, who worked at the university legal services offices, regarding the possibility of deportation. Bock in turn consulted Rice, an attorney who had made a presentation on immigration law at a seminar that Bock had attended, and asked if a misdemeanor domestic abuse charge was grounds for deportation. Rice informed Bock that the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) would not initiate deportation proceedings until the commission of two misdemeanors. Bock relayed that information to Fang, who relied at least in part on the information and pleaded guilty to family member assault. However, in 1996, Congress enacted a new immigration statute (see 8 U.S.C. 1227(a)(2)(E)(i)) that provides that domestic violence convictions are deportable offenses. Several weeks after pleading guilty, Fang received a notice to appear and face deportation. After hiring new counsel, Fang moved to withdraw the guilty plea. The District Court granted the motion on grounds that the failure of Bock to inform Fang of the possibility of removal to China constituted ineffective assistance of counsel, and the INS agreed to suspend further proceedings until the resolution of charges against Fang. Based on the advice of his new counsel, Fang reached a plea agreement with the Gallatin County Attorney to plead guilty to an amended charge of assault. Following conviction, the INS again moved to deport Fang, and based on the fact that assault also constitutes a crime of violence against a protected person pursuant to federal immigration law, Fang was ordered to be deported. Fang then filed a complaint against Bock, seeking damages for professional negligence and negligent supervision and treble damages under 37-61-406. The District Court applied Lorash v. Epstein, 236 M 21, 767 P2d 1335 (1989), and determined that Fang could not satisfy the last element of the test for a prima facie case of professional negligence, which requires a showing that but for such negligence, Fang would have successfully defended against the offense. The court then summarily dismissed the case. Fang appealed, contending that because of Bock's advice, he was exposed to the possibility of removal from this country and had to spend substantial amounts of money to avoid that exposure. Pursuant to Lorash, the Supreme Court had to determine whether Fang would have been exposed to the possibility of removal from this country with or without Bock's advice, in light of the offenses to which Fang pleaded guilty, the statutory basis for deportation, and the immigration judge's explanation for the deportation order. Under either charge, Fang was guilty of an offense of violence against a protected person—his wife. The title of the offense was irrelevant because for purposes of immigration law, misdemeanor assault is considered just as much a crime of violence against a spouse as family member assault. Further, Fang's argument that a different result was compelled by the fact that the assault conviction was subsequently expunged based on a deferred prosecution also failed because under federal case law, no effect is to be given to a state action that purports to remove a guilty plea or conviction by operation of a state rehabilitative statute. Thus, Fang's situation was a result of the conduct that he admitted and was the same following correct legal advice as it was following Bock's incorrect advice. Although Bock misinformed Fang, that advice did not lead to Fang's predicament, nor would the money that he spent to have the first conviction set aside have changed the result. Fang could not prove that but for negligent legal advice he could have avoided deportation, and Bock was entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fang v. Bock, 2001 MT 116, 305 M 322, 28 P3d 456 (2001).

In-House Counsel Not Precluded From Bringing Wrongful Discharge From Employment Claim Even if Proof of Claim Requires Disclosure of Confidential Information: Burkhart was hired as in-house counsel for Semitool, Inc. (Semitool). Following his discharge from employment, Burkhart sued Semitool for wrongful discharge. The District Court concluded that even though

Burkhart had a right to protection against wrongful discharge, Semitool also had a right to protection of its trade secrets and that because the rights conflicted, the attorney-client privilege must prevail. The court dismissed Burkhart's claim on grounds that he was precluded from bringing an employment claim because, as staff counsel hired to provide legal advice or services, proof of the claim would require disclosure of confidential matters. Burkhart maintained on appeal that the Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act applied to any employee and that there was no exclusion for attorneys. Semitool argued that because Art. VII, sec. 2, Mont. Const., gives the Supreme Court sole authority to regulate the conduct of lawyers, the Act is unconstitutional to the extent that it interferes with that authority. Semitool also cited Campbell v. Bozeman Investors of Duluth, 1998 MT 204, 290 M 374, 964 P2d 41 (1998), for the "universal rule" that clients may fire lawyers at any time, for any reason, with or without cause and that for that reason, application of the Act to the employment relationship of staff attorneys and the client employer was not proper. In a case of first impression, the Supreme Court examined two lines of cases from other jurisdictions that appeared to support either conclusion. The court then concluded that the reasoning and analysis in Gen. Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court, 876 P2d 487 (Calif. 1994), and its progeny were the more sound and realistic approach. The holding in Campbell does not create an absolute right to discharge an attorney with complete impunity no matter the form of the attorney-client relationship. The universal rule does not apply in an attorney-client relationship in which the attorney is the employee of the client because in that context, the client has avoided the traditional relationship and granted the attorney protections that do not apply to independent contractors, but do apply to employees, including the Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act. Further, although Art. VII, sec. 2, Mont. Const., gives the Supreme Court sole authority to regulate the conduct of lawyers, the court does not have sole authority to regulate employer conduct. The Act pertains solely to employer conduct and does not implicate the conduct of lawyers in the practice of law, and thus, it is not an unconstitutional encroachment on the court's authority for the Act to apply to lawyers as employees or employers. Further, Rule 1.6 of the Montana Rules of Professional Conduct contemplates that a lawyer may reveal confidential attorney-client information to the extent that the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to establish an employment-related claim against an employer who is also a client. Thus, the plain language of the Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act requires courts to recognize an in-house counsel's right to pursue and maintain an action for wrongful discharge, and those claims are within the contemplation of the rules of professional conduct for attorneys. A lawyer does not forfeit rights simply because confidential information must be used to prove them, nor may a client gain the right to cheat the lawyer by imparting confidences. Burkhart v. Semitool, Inc., 2000 MT 201, 300 M 480, 5 P3d 1031, 57 St. Rep. 785 (2000). See also Doe v. A Corp., 709 F2d 1043 (5th Cir. 1983).

Insurer-Imposed Billing Rules and Procedures Violative of Rules of Professional Conduct: When presented with the question of whether an attorney licensed to practice in Montana or admitted pro hac vice may agree to abide by an insurer's billing and practice rules that impose conditions limiting or directing the scope and extent of representation of the attorney's client, the insured, the Supreme Court considered the requirement imposed by some insurers that defense counsel secure the consent of the insurer's claim professional before proceeding with the case, in order to ensure adequate consultation. Insurers cited Jessen v. O'Daniel, 210 F. Supp. 317 (D.C. Mont. 1962), for the proposition that under Montana law, in the absence of a real conflict, the insurer and the insured are dual clients of defense counsel, arguing that as co-client of defense counsel, the insurer may require preapproval of attorney activities. The Supreme Court noted that although decisions subsequent to Jessen recognized the conclusion that an insurance contract may place absolute control of litigation in the hands of the insurer, the dual representation doctrine is not recognized under the Rules of Professional Conduct, but applies only in determining whether the communications between an insurer and its attorneys are subject to the attorney-client privilege. The contractual relationship between insurer and insured does not supersede or waive defense counsels' obligations under the Rules of Professional Conduct. Rather, the Rules of Professional Conduct have application in all cases involving attorneys and clients, and under the rules, the insured is the sole client of defense counsel. The court concluded that defense counsel in Montana who submit to the requirement of prior approval from the insurer violate the Rules of Professional Conduct by fundamentally interfering with their duties to exercise independent judgment and to give their undivided loyalty to insureds. The court noted that the prior approval requirement also creates a substantial appearance of impropriety by suggesting that the insurer, rather than defense counsel, controls the day-to-day details of the defense. In re Rules of Professional Conduct & Insurer Imposed Billing Rules & Procedures, 2000 MT 110, 299 M 321, 2 P3d 806, 57 St. Rep. 433 (2000).

Requirement That Attorney Submit Detailed Descriptions of Services Violative of Client Confidentiality: When presented with the question of whether an attorney licensed to practice in Montana or admitted pro hac vice may be required by an insurer's billing and practice rules to submit detailed descriptions of professional services to outside persons or entities, such as third-party insurance auditors, without first obtaining the informed consent of the client, insurers cited U.S. v. Mass. Institute of Technology, 129 F3d 681 (1st Cir. 1997), in claiming that as agents of insurers, third-party auditors are part of a privileged community or magic circle within which confidential information may be shared without waiver of attorney-client privilege or work product doctrine. The insurers also cited Indian Law Resource Center v. Dept. of Interior, 477 F. Supp. 144 (D. D.C. 1979), for the proposition that an auditor is a confidential agent of a privileged party, so disclosure of attorney fee information did not waive any privilege. The Supreme Court found neither case persuasive, concluding that third-party auditors are not confidential agents of insureds, but function rather as agents of insurers, and thus are not within the magic circle of confidentiality. Rather, disclosure of detailed billing statements to third-party auditors constitutes disclosure to a potential adversary because there is always the possibility of disputes between auditors and defense counsel and their clients that could result in litigation. As possible adversaries, auditors stand in potential conflict with the interests of insureds in competent representation by defense counsel who exercise their independent professional judgment. The court looked to Rule 1.6 of the Rules of Professional Conduct, which extends to all communications between insureds and defense counsel, making it broader in both scope and protection than the attorney-client privilege and the work product doctrine. Although disclosures of billing information to insurers are permissible because insurers are impliedly authorized to carry out representation, disclosure to third-party auditors is not impliedly authorized. The court also rejected the insurers' argument that insureds' consent by contract to disclosure of billing statements comports with Rule 1.6. An insured executing a liability policy with an insurer cannot know at that time what kind of claim will be brought against that insured, what the issues will be, what kind of services will be undertaken by defense counsel, or the legal consequences that might result from the disclosure of billing information to a third-party auditor. Under Rule 1.6, for an insured to make a fully informed consent to disclosure of detailed billing statements, the consent must be contemporaneous with the facts and circumstances of which the insured should be aware. Thus, disclosure by defense counsel of detailed descriptions of professional services to third-party auditors without first obtaining the informed consent of the insured violates confidentiality under the Rules of Professional Conduct. In re Rules of Professional Conduct & Insurer Imposed Billing Rules & Procedures, 2000 MT 110, 299 M 321, 2 P3d 806, 57 St. Rep. 433 (2000), distinguishing U.S. v. Schwimmer, 892 F2d 237 (2nd Cir. 1989).

Disqualification of Attorney's Firm Upon Disqualification of Attorney: Once an attorney is found to be disqualified, such as for previous representation of an adverse party, the attorney's firm is also disqualified. In re Guardianship of Mowrer, 1999 MT 73, 294 M 35, 979 P2d 156, 56 St. Rep. 300 (1999), following Trone v. Smith, 621 F2d 994 (9th Cir. 1980).

No Duty of Attorney to Nonclient in Child Custody Case: An attorney must be able to vigorously advocate a client's interests in litigation without being compromised by obligations to nonclients. If an attorney were considered to owe the same duty of care to both a parent and child in an adversarial custody case, neither parent nor child would be served effectively. Because the interests of a parent and those of a child may not be identical, the attorney's duty runs solely to the client except if the conduct rises to the level of deceit or collusion or is intentionally reckless. Rhode v. Adams, 1998 MT 73, 288 M 278, 957 P2d 1124, 55 St. Rep. 303 (1998). See also Redies v. Attorneys Liability Protection Soc'y, 2007 MT 9, 335 M 233, 150 P3d 930 (2007).

Attorney Fees Awardable — Contractual Obligation — Nominal Damages: The District Court erred by not awarding attorney fees to the prevailing plaintiff, even though plaintiff recovered only nominal damages, when the record on appeal does not support the court's decision. Maloney v. Heer, 257 M 500, 850 P2d 957, 50 St. Rep. 382 (1993).

Representation of Client Adverse to Former Client After Professional Relationship Terminated: In determining whether a claim for attorney malpractice existed based on an attorney's representation of an adverse client against a former client, the Supreme Court cited Butler Bros. Dev. Co. v. Butler, 111 M 329, 108 P2d 1041 (1941), in holding that while the general rule prohibits an attorney from representing both adverse parties, it does not bar an attorney, when the relationship to the former party has been terminated, from representing a client adverse to the former client if the matter in controversy is different or even though the controversy arises out of facts with which the attorney might have been familiar. Before the former client can complain, he must show that the disclosures made in the former employment were used prejudicially against him. Oar Lock Land & Cattle Co. v. Crowley, 253 M 336, 833 P2d 146, 49 St. Rep. 456 (1992), followed in In re Guardianship of Mowrer, 1999 MT 73, 294 M 35, 979 P2d 156, 56 St. Rep. 300 (1999).

Failure to Establish Attorney-Client Relationship: The plaintiff brought an action for attorney malpractice on his own behalf. The Supreme Court found that the plaintiff was a shareholder of the corporation that the defendant had allegedly misrepresented. The court ruled that no attorney-client relationship existed between shareholders of a corporation and an attorney representing the corporation. Stott v. Fox, 246 M 301, 805 P2d 1305, 47 St. Rep. 2040 (1990).

No Recovery for Attorney Malpractice Without Proving Damages: The Supreme Court found that the plaintiff was not entitled to damages from the defendant for malpractice because the plaintiff had no valid cause of action upon which he could have recovered in the suit the plaintiff had hired the defendant to handle. Kinniburgh v. Garrity, 244 M 350, 798 P2d 102, 47 St. Rep. 1655 (1990), followed in Kane v. Miller, 258 M 182, 852 P2d 130, 50 St. Rep. 488 (1993).

No Recovery for Failure to Timely File Appeal Without Proof of Damage to Client: The Supreme Court determined that the plaintiff had no valid cause of action upon which he could recover in the suit the plaintiff had hired the defendant to handle. Therefore, the court ruled that the defendant's failure to timely file an appeal did not damage the plaintiff. Kinniburgh v. Garrity, 244 M 350, 798 P2d 102, 47 St. Rep. 1655 (1990).

Attorney as Expert Witness — Not to Advise Jury as to Law of Case: Insurance company argued that the District Court's instructions implying that company's position was frivolous as a matter of law were reinforced by detailed attorney opinion testimony on the law applicable to insurance coverage, in violation of 25-7-102 and Rule 704, M.R.Ev. (Title 26, ch. 10). The Supreme Court, citing Energy Oils, Inc. v. Mont. Power Co., 626 F2d 731 (9th Cir. 1980), adopted the finding that admission of opinion testimony as to the legal effect of a contract is erroneous, but in view of the District Court holding that there was insurance coverage as a matter of law, the Supreme Court concluded that counsel's testimony regarding the law of the case did not constitute reversible error under the unique facts of this case. The court found no abuse of discretion in allowing attorneys who appear as expert witnesses to state their opinion on an insurer's duty to evaluate the facts, on what constitutes a reasonable evaluation of the facts, or on how an insurer should have approached the negotiations with the plaintiff; however, as a general rule an attorney cannot advise the jury as to the law of the case. Safeco Ins. Co. v. Ellinghouse, 223 M 239, 725 P2d 217, 43 St. Rep. 1689 (1986).

Neglect of Attorney Attributable to Client: When defendant's attorney received notices and talked on the phone on behalf of his clients but failed to do anything in response to numerous requests by opposing counsel and continued to postpone preparation and filing of a pleading, the attorney's procrastination was a type of neglect which was properly attributable to a client and did not constitute abandonment, which would excuse neglect. The Supreme Court found no abuse of discretion in District Court's conclusion that the attorney's conduct was not excusable neglect. Paxson v. Rice, 217 M 521, 706 P2d 123, 42 St. Rep. 1355 (1985).

No Conflict of Interest: There was no conflict of interest for an attorney appointed to represent the child in a proceeding for modification of custody when the attorney occupied an office that had formerly been shared by the attorney representing the father and the judge presiding over the case (before he became a judge). In re Marriage of Stout, 216 M 342, 701 P2d 729, 42 St. Rep. 856 (1985).

Attorney's Obligation to Deal in Good Faith: Because of the inequality that exists between attorney and client in bargaining over a fee, attorney has an obligation to deal fairly and in good faith when negotiating, charging, and collecting a fee. In a fee dispute over handling of dissolution, client pleaded sufficient facts to raise question whether there was a breach of the obligation owed to deal fairly and in good faith. District Court erred in granting summary judgment for attorney. Supreme Court reversed and remanded for trial, giving client leave to amend counterclaim to specifically describe a breach of the implied covenant. Morse v. Espeland, 215 M 148, 696 P2d 428, 42 St. Rep. 251 (1985).

GENERAL

Loss of Video Footage — Improper Finding That Statements in Brief Opposing Sanctions for Spoliation of Evidence Did Not Constitute Judicial Admissions: The plaintiff requested that a store manager retain footage of her fall at the store the previous day. The plaintiff filed a negligence claim against the defendant related to the fall and, upon learning that the video footage had been erased, filed a motion for discovery sanctions. In its brief opposing sanctions, the defendant agreed with some of the plaintiff's statements regarding the content of the footage. During trial, however, the defendant made arguments about the video footage that contradicted those made in its earlier brief. The plaintiff appealed the District Court's decision, arguing that the statements in the defendant's brief constituted judicial admissions and that the District Court abused its discretion when it did not treat those statements as judicial admissions at trial. The Supreme Court ruled that the statements in the brief were judicial admissions and remanded the case for a new trial. Bilesky v. Shopko Stores Operating Co., LLC, 2014 MT 300, 377 Mont. 58, 338 P.3d 76.

Scriveners' Error — Statement in Brief Not Considered Judicial Admission — No Abuse of Discretion: The defendant sought dismissal of a negligence claim on the grounds that the plaintiff made an admission in a trial brief indicating that the defendant's actions were "reasonable and necessary". The day after the defendant sought dismissal, the plaintiffs filed a notice of errata to correct the alleged "scriveners' error", and the District Court denied the defendant's motion to dismiss the claim. On appeal, the Supreme Court distinguished Kohne v. Yost, 250 Mont. 109, 818 P.2d 360 (1991), and held that the District Court did not abuse its discretion in determining that the statement did not constitute a judicial admission. Weaver v. St., 2013 MT 247, 371 Mont. 476, 310 P.3d 495. However, see Bilesky v. Shopko Stores Operating Co., LLC, 2014 MT 300, 377 Mont. 58, 338 P.3d 76, in which the Supreme Court ruled that statements made in pretrial briefing constituted judicial admissions, warranting a new trial.

Dual Representation of Two Adverse Clients Violative of Rules of Professional Conduct — Censure and Costs Appropriate: Johnson's firm agreed to represent a woman in a wrongful death action and, a few months later, determined that a second client was a potentially responsible party and filed a complaint against the second client while still representing that client on other matters. The Commission on Practice concluded that Johnson violated the Rules of Professional Conduct by undertaking dual representation of two directly adverse clients and recommended Johnson's public censure and required Johnson to pay a pro rata share of costs. Johnson appealed, asserting: (1) a reasonable belief that dual representation would not adversely affect the relationship with the second client; (2) no intentional or negligent violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct; (3) an absence of selfish or dishonest motive; (4) that both clients actively sought representation from Johnson's firm; (5) the desire to serve the needs of both clients; (6) a reputation for good character and high competence as an attorney, including practicing law for over 30 years without any prior Commission disciplinary record; and (7) a delay in bringing and processing disciplinary proceedings. The Supreme Court affirmed. It was untenable for Johnson to contend that no conflict of interest existed in asserting on the woman's behalf that the second client negligently caused the death of the woman's husband. Johnson also failed to obtain the informed consent of the second client regarding representation of the woman. The court also noted that nothing in the Rules of Professional Conduct implies that a lawyer has to knowingly violate the rules to be subject to discipline. After considering the mitigating factors, the court agreed that censure and payment of costs were appropriate. In re Johnson, 2004 MT 6, 319 M

Implied Attorney-Client Relationship — Motion for Disqualification of Attorney — Client's Burden of Showing Reasonable Belief That Attorney-Client Relationship Exists: Defendant telephoned attorney Penwell's office and spoke to the legal secretary regarding possible representation in this action, but never spoke personally to Penwell. Defendant was informed that Penwell was accepting no new cases and was referred to another attorney. Penwell ultimately appeared as counsel for plaintiff, and defendant moved to disqualify Penwell, asserting that confidential information was disclosed during the telephone conversation with the secretary and that the information was imputed to Penwell, creating an attorney-client relationship. At the hearing on the motion, defendant did not disclose what type of information was allegedly disclosed, relying on the conclusory statement that what was disclosed was confidential. The District Court denied the motion, holding that defendant had failed to meet the burden of conclusively establishing the existence of an attorney-client relationship. Defendant appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Although an alleged client should not be required to reveal actual confidences at a disqualification hearing, the alleged client must at least inform the court of the nature of the information disclosed so that the court can make a reasoned judgment. Under the circumstances, defendant could not have reasonably believed that an attorney-client relationship was formed with Penwell, based upon two telephone conversations with the secretary, when defendant never spoke or met with Penwell, and was advised that Penwell would not take the case. Pro-Hand Serv. Trust v. Monthei, 2002 MT 134, 310 M 165, 49 P3d 56 (2002). See also Krutzfeldt Ranch, LLC v. Pinnacle Bank, 2012 MT 15, 363 Mont. 366, 272 P.3d 635.

Disqualification of Attorney's Firm Upon Disqualification of Attorney: Once an attorney is found to be disqualified, such as for previous representation of an adverse party, the attorney's firm is also disqualified. In re Guardianship of Mowrer, 1999 MT 73, 294 M 35, 979 P2d 156, 56 St. Rep. 300 (1999), following Trone v. Smith, 621 F2d 994 (9th Cir. 1980).

Authority of Attorney to Represent Client in Second Count of Two-Count Information When Severance of Counts Denied: Stanko was charged with two counts of reckless driving and represented himself on one of the two counts and was represented by counsel on the other. Early in the proceedings, Stanko moved for severance of the two counts for purposes of trial, but the request was denied. Later, the state requested a continuance of the charge for which Stanko was represented by counsel because of the illness of a witness, and Stanko's counsel consented. Stanko argued on appeal that his attorney had no authority to consent to continuance of the charge on which Stanko was representing himself. The Supreme Court held that Stanko's argument was "without merit" and explained that because severance had already been requested and denied, if trial on one of the counts was continued, the trial on the other count would also be continued. More important, the Supreme Court noted, Stanko failed to allege that he was prejudiced in any way by the continuance of the trial on the count for which he represented himself and it was disingenuous for Stanko to argue that the trial on that count should have been held as originally scheduled when Stanko submitted several motions 2 days before the trial date and the state would have had to request a continuance to respond to those motions even if the witness had not become ill. St. v. Stanko, 1998 MT 323, 292 M 214, 974 P2d 1139, 55 St. Rep. 1313 (1998).

Death of Defendant in Criminal Case Abates Case Entirely — Prior Cases Clarified: Holland was convicted in District Court of criminal syndicalism by accountability and other offenses and appealed his conviction. Holland died after the case had been briefed to the Supreme Court but before it was decided, so the state moved to dismiss. Holland's counsel opposed the motion to dismiss, arguing that it was in the best interests of society and the judicial system to allow the appeal to be decided on its merits. The Supreme Court noted that its earlier opinions in the cases of St. v. Lawrence, 122 M 277, 201 P2d 756 (1949), St. v. Pichette, 125 M 327, 237 P2d 1076 (1951), St. v. Hale, 128 M 116, 270 P2d 993 (1954), St. v. Koble, 129 M 605, 285 P2d 837 (1955), St. v. Clark-Kotarski, 156 M 527, 486 P2d 876 (1971), and St. v. Cripps, 177 M 410, 582 P2d 312 (1978), all held that the death of a defendant abates an appeal. The Supreme Court pointed out that subsection (2) of this section requires that a civil case go forward notwithstanding the death of a party but that in criminal cases, no case or controversy remains when a defendant dies and that if a deceased defendant's sentence were affirmed on appeal, it would be impossible to execute the sentence. The Supreme Court also noted, citing State ex rel. Fletcher v. District Court, 260 M 410, 859 P2d 992 (1993), that it does not render advisory opinions and that the Montana Rules of Appellate Procedure provide for substitution of a personal representative in the case of the death of a party in a civil action, but there is no such provision for criminal cases. The Supreme Court held that upon the death of the defendant, the prosecution of a criminal case, including fines, abates in its entirety. The Supreme Court's prior opinions were clarified to the extent that opinions in those cases were not consistent with its present opinion. St. v. Holland, 1998 MT 67, 288 M 164, 955 P2d 1360, 55 St. Rep. 282 (1998).

Client Bound by Attorney's Waiver of Right to Speedy Trial — Purpose of Statute: After defendant's attorney orally waived defendant's rights to a speedy trial in Justice's Court, defendant argued in his trial de novo appeal to District Court that he, the defendant, was not bound by his attorney's waiver. Defendant asserted that 37-61-401 makes the waiver binding only if it was entered with the defendant's knowledge or upon the record in open court. Citing Bush v. Baker, 46 M 535, 129 P 550 (1913), the Supreme Court ruled that this section has been applied only as to agreements between attorneys and that the purpose of that section is to relieve the presiding judge of the burden of determining disputes between attorneys concerning their unexecuted agreements. The Supreme Court stated that it would not apply this section literally as to agreements between an attorney and the court; to do so would lead to absurd consequences and greatly retard the business of the courts. The Supreme Court held that the defendant was thus bound by his counsel's waiver. St. v. Nelson, 251 M 139, 822 P2d 1086, 48 St. Rep. 1129 (1991).

Statements of Counsel as Binding on Client — New Trial Warranted: In closing arguments during a negligence trial that resulted in a jury finding of no negligence on behalf of defendant, defense counsel made unequivocal statements which, when taken in full context with the rest of his closing argument, constituted judicial admissions on the issue of negligence of his client that had the effect of a confessory pleading. Noting that the admissions of counsel are binding on the client, the Supreme Court granted a new trial, notwithstanding counsel's assertion that the statements were merely suggestions on the theory of the case. Kohne v. Yost, 250 M 109, 818 P2d 360, 48 St. Rep. 886 (1991), distinguished in Weaver v. St., 2013 MT 247, 371 Mont. 476, 310 P.3d 495. See also Bilesky v. Shopko Stores Operating Co., LLC, 2014 MT 300, 377 Mont. 58, 338 P.3d 76, in which the Supreme Court ruled that statements made during pretrial briefing constituted judicial admissions, warranting a new trial.

Purpose of Statute: The purpose of subsection (1)(a) of this section is to enable an attorney to act on behalf of his client and make the attorney's action part of the record, not to bind clients irrevocably to any action the attorney enters upon the record. Schillinger v. Brewer, 215 M 333, 697 P2d 919, 42 St. Rep. 408 (1985).

Privilege Unavailable to Parties to Lawsuit Claiming Under a Deceased Client: The plaintiffs brought an action against their stepmother to collect the proceeds of their deceased father's life insurance policy, which had been paid to the defendant in accordance with the terms of the policy but contrary to the provisions of a divorce decree. The District Court did not err in relying upon attorney Sternhagen's deposition and file in the prior divorce proceedings between the deceased and his first wife in order to determine the true intentions of the deceased. Where both parties to a lawsuit claim under a deceased client, neither can assert the attorney-client privilege against the other. Herrig v. Herrig, 199 M 174, 648 P2d 758, 39 St. Rep. 1274 (1982).

Exclusive Representation by Attorney: A party having an attorney of record in an action must be heard in court through such attorney, and the court may not recognize anyone in the conduct or disposition of the case except the attorney of record therein, and even death of the party does not revoke the authority of his attorney of record. Endresse v. Van Vleet, 118 M 533, 169 P2d 719 (1946).

Authority of Attorney to Accept Settlement in Other Than Money: The agent has no implied authority to accept payment in anything but money; hence an attorney who is but the agent of his client, though authorized under this section to accept money in discharge of the client's claim, cannot by his retention of a draft payable to the client and to which a release was attached to be signed by him personally bind him to an agreement of settlement. Barbarich v. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pac. Ry., 92 M 1, 9 P2d 797 (1932).

Notice to Attorney as Notice to Client: Notice to the attorney of defendant in a divorce action of the setting of the cause for trial was notice to her, and therefore a new trial asked for on the ground that she herself did not have notice was properly refused. Davenport v. Davenport, 69 M 405, 222 P 422 (1924).

Authority of Attorney to Settle Case Not Implied — Void Judgment: An attorney, as such, has no authority to compromise a controversy of his client, no matter what may be the difficulties involved or however advantageous the result may be to the client. A general retainer in a case does not imply such authority, and if a compromise of the controversy be made, it must be made under special authority delegated for that purpose. Otherwise and in the absence of a ratification by the client, the compromise agreement as well as any judgment entered in pursuance of it is void at the option of the client. Harris v. Root, 28 M 159, 72 P 429 (1903).

STIPULATIONS AND AGREED STATEMENTS

Fraud Substantiated in Attorney's Handling of Probate Case — Violation of Attorney's Duty of Truthfulness — Public Censure Warranted: Attorney Potts represented parties in a will contest. Two of the parties knew that some joint tenancy accounts were not included in the value of the estate and, in an attempt to secure the funds in the accounts, directed Potts to remain silent as to whether the settlement agreement prepared by Potts included the accounts. Potts failed to notify the court and counsel for the estate that one of his clients intended to obtain the jointly held property regardless of the outcome of any settlement. The Supreme Court subsequently determined in In re Estate of Stukey, 2004, MT 279, 323 M 241, 100 P3d 114 (2004), that the parties intended that the total estate value, including the joint tenancy accounts, be included in the settlement. A professional misconduct complaint was later filed against Potts, alleging that Potts engaged in or assisted in client fraud by failing to disclose material information to opposing counsel and that Potts breached the duty of candor to the tribunal by failing to disclose material information to the court. The Commission on Practice found that Potts knew that his clients were using Potts' services to perpetuate fraud in violation of Rules 1.2(d) and 3.3(a)(2) of the Montana Rules of Professional Conduct (MRPC), that Potts failed to fulfill his ethical obligation to inform the clients that he would not participate in the fraudulent conduct, a violation of Rule 1.2(d), MRPC, and that Potts violated the duty of candor to the tribunal in violation of Rule 3.3(a)(2), MRPC. The Commission recommended that Potts be publicly censured and suspended from the practice of law for 30 days. Potts appealed, raising issues of client confidentiality, asserting that his clients did not engage in fraud because the accounts passed to his client as a matter of law and thus could not have been included as part of the settlement basis, contending that he had no duty to correct opposing counsel's erroneous understanding of the settlement, and arguing that the Commission's proposed sanctions were inappropriate. The Supreme Court held that, by definition, Potts' clients were engaged in fraudulent conduct, that Potts assisted in the conduct by not disclosing the conduct to the court and to opposing counsel in violation of the duty of truthfulness and by drafting a stipulation stating that all disputes had been settled when he knew that the parties relied on a misrepresentation in drafting a settlement, and that Potts could have avoided the situation by withdrawing from representation. Potts' conduct resulted in considerable injury to the parties, requiring one District Court proceeding and two appeals to determine the meaning and scope of the stipulation. The Commission's findings were affirmed. However, the court reversed the suspension of Potts' practice in light of mitigating factors of Potts' history of compliance with the rules of professional conduct and his good character and reputation to this point and held that public censure sufficed to apprise Potts of the gravity of the misconduct. In re Potts, 2007 MT 81, 336 M 517, 158 P3d 418 (2007).

Attorney's Agreement to Settle Disputed Claim Binding Client Despite Attorney's Receipt of Funds or Filing With District Court — Estate of Goick Overruled: Following protracted litigation, the parties' attorneys agreed by telephone to settle a disputed claim, specifying a dollar amount and the preparation of a general release. Defendant's counsel prepared and faxed a release to plaintiff's counsel, who in turn replied by letter that the settlement terms were accepted. Defendant's counsel then prepared and signed a stipulation to dismiss the action and ordered a settlement check. About 2 weeks later, plaintiff's counsel advised that plaintiff refused to settle. Defendant's counsel moved to compel settlement, and the District Court granted the motion on the basis that plaintiff had agreed to the terms of the settlement. Plaintiff appealed, arguing that the settlement statement was only an attempt by counsel to reach an agreement that would then be forwarded to plaintiff for final agreement. However, plaintiff presented no evidence that counsel was not authorized to enter a settlement. Plaintiff also relied on subsection (1) of this section and on In re Estate of Goick, 275 M 13, 909 P2d 1165 (1996), for the proposition that he was not bound by the settlement because the agreement was not filed with the Clerk of Court or entered in the court's minutes. The Supreme Court affirmed. The literal interpretation of subsection (1)(a) of this section in Goick was inconsistent with prior case law and would preclude an attorney from binding a client to a settlement agreement, although subsection (1)(b) of this section would allow an attorney to discharge a claim or acknowledge satisfaction of judgment once the attorney received money. Precluding an attorney from binding a client to a settlement unless the attorney received funds does not make sense and is an absurd result. The Supreme Court therefore overruled that portion of Goick stating that a client is not bound to a settlement agreement unless the agreement is filed with the District Court or entered in the court's minutes.

Lockhead v. Weinstein, 2003 MT 360, 319 M 62, 81 P3d 1284 (2003), following Hetherington v. Ford Motor Co., 257 M 395, 849 P2d 1039 (1993), which was distinguished in Murphy v. The Home Depot, 2012 MT 23, 364 Mont. 27, 270 P.3d 72.

Oral Estate Settlement Agreement Not Binding: An estate settlement agreement reached by the parties' attorneys over the telephone was not binding on the parties because the agreement was not in writing and was not filed with the Clerk of Court or entered upon the minutes of the court. In re Estate of Goick, 275 M 13, 909 P2d 1165, 53 St. Rep. 12 (1996), overruled, to the extent that a client is not bound to a settlement agreement unless the agreement is filed with the District Court or entered in the court's minutes, in Lockhead v. Weinstein, 2003 MT 360, 319 M 62, 81 P3d 1284 (2003).

Attorney's Stipulation as Waiver of Client's Right to Discovery or Jury Trial: Defendants argued that they should not be bound by their attorney's stipulation that a show cause hearing be a trial on the merits. The Supreme Court held that a client is bound by stipulations of his attorney if the agreement is entered upon the minutes of the court, regardless of whether or not the client had an opportunity to discuss the matter with his attorney beforehand. The stipulation voluntarily waived any right to discovery or to a jury trial or any other rights defendants claim to have lost. Daniels v. Dean, 253 M 465, 833 P2d 1078, 49 St. Rep. 535 (1992).

Ratification Through Acquiescence in Settlement Agreement: Appellant's knowledge of the terms of a settlement agreement and his acquiescence in the agreement for a period of nearly 2 years constitute a ratification of the settlement and dismissal, under the rulings of McGinley v. Md. Cas. of Baltimore, 85 M 1, 277 P 414 (1929), and Harris v. Root, 28 M 159, 72 P 429 (1903). Webb v. First Nat'l Bank of Hinsdale, 219 M 160, 711 P2d 1352, 42 St. Rep. 1919 (1985).

Judgment — Setoff Based on Stipulation: Plaintiff received a judgment against defendant. Defendant appealed, and the appeal was dismissed with prejudice when defendant advised the court that defendant did not wish to proceed with it. Defendant then filed a motion for a set off of an amount that plaintiff and defendant were both liable to pay to a third party. Defendant's attorney and plaintiff's attorney had entered into a stipulation that plaintiff was primarily liable and defendant secondarily liable for that amount and that if defendant paid it, the payment would be set off against any judgment granted plaintiff against defendant. The lower court properly set off that amount as partial satisfaction of the judgment. Although the motion was not made within the time required by the rules, it was properly considered because the Clerk of Court did not give defendant notice of entry of the judgment against defendant; therefore, the time for filing the motion had not commenced to run, since the motion was to be made within a certain time from the notice of entry of judgment. AAR Constr., Inc. v. Fergus Elec. Co-op., Inc., 215 M 102, 695 P2d 819, 42 St. Rep. 214 (1985).

Attorney-Client Relationship: A client is bound by stipulations made by counsel entered in open court. Counts v. Chapman, 180 M 102, 589 P2d 151, 36 St. Rep. 89 (1979).

Authority of Attorney to Make Agreed Statement of Facts: Under this section an attorney has implied authority to bind his client by entering into an agreed statement of facts upon which the case is to be tried; but independent of such statute, the presumption is, in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that the attorney was acting within the scope of his authority in entering into the stipulation. Neglect of attorney to make proper inquiry into the facts before entering into the statement is the neglect of his client. Rieckhoff v. Woodhull, 106 M 22, 75 P2d 56 (1937).

Oral Stipulation for Time of Answer as Basis for Setting Aside Default: Little reliance is placed by courts upon oral agreements between counsel as to an extension of time within which an answer to a complaint might be filed as ground for setting aside a default. Stipulations of that nature should be in writing and filed or made in open court and entered in the minutes. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Freeman, 80 M 266, 260 P 124 (1927).

Authority of Attorney to Set Case for Trial — Common Law: Under the rule that if an attorney acts within the scope of his employment, express or implied, the client is bound, it is within the implied power of an attorney regularly employed in a criminal case to consent to the setting or continuance of the cause for trial. The provision of this section that an attorney has authority to bind his client "by his agreement filed with the clerk, or entered upon the minutes of the court, and not otherwise" neither enlarges nor abridges the authority of the attorney as it existed under the common-law rule, but only prescribes a rule for its exercise. St. v. Turlok, 76 M 549, 248 P 169 (1926).

Stipulation to Set Case for Trial: An attorney has authority to enter a stipulation for the setting of a cause for trial, and his client is bound thereby. Davenport v. Davenport, 69 M 405, 222 P 422 (1924).

Oral Stipulations Not Prevented: This section was not designed to prevent the enforcement by the courts of executed oral agreements or stipulations admitted by the party or his attorney against whom they are alleged, although they were neither reduced to writing nor made in open court. Bush v. Baker, 46 M 535, 129 P 550 (1913); Beach v. Spokane Ranch & Water Co., 21 M 184, 53 P 493 (1898).

Rule of Court Inapplicable — Oral Stipulation Enforceable: A rule of the District Court that agreements between attorneys relating to causes pending will be disregarded by the court unless made in open court and entered in the minutes or reduced to writing, subscribed by the party or his attorney against whom they are urged, has no application to an executed oral agreement or stipulation admittedly entered into by an attorney. Such agreement binds the attorney, though he is inclined to repudiate it, where the client did not interfere or dissent. Bush v. Baker, 46 M 535, 129 P 550 (1913).

Evidence of Stipulation Required: An order of the District Court cannot be based upon a stipulation between the attorneys in the case where the stipulation is denied by one of the attorneys and it was neither made in writing nor made in open court and entered in the minutes. Beach v. Spokane Ranch & Water Co., 21 M 184, 53 P 493 (1898).

Case Notes

Minor Attaining Majority — Termination of Ward's Authority to Employ Counsel: Where a suit in behalf of a minor by his guardian had been properly instituted but the guardian's authority automatically terminated by the ward's attaining majority, the court, upon being advised, having inherent power to investigate an attorney's authority, should have stayed further proceedings until counsel for plaintiff was shown to have been reemployed by plaintiff and committed error in proceeding to adjudicate his rights, being without jurisdiction of the cause. Mitchell v. McDonald, 114 M 292, 136 P2d 536 (1943).

Motion to Show Authority: The court may, on motion of either party made in good faith and upon a showing supported by affidavit or otherwise, require the attorney of the adverse party to produce and prove the authority under which he appears and, if it be shown that the attorney has no such authority, dismiss the action. In re Astibia's Estate, 100 M 224, 46 P2d 712 (1935); Missoula Belt Line Ry. v. Smith, 58 M 432, 193 P 529 (1920).

Affidavit Not Required: A motion for an order requiring an attorney to show by what authority he appears in a cause, authorized by this section, need not be supported by oath or affidavit; if made in good faith and supported by a showing of reasonable cause otherwise than by affidavit, the motion will be sufficient. Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Penwell, 99 M 255, 42 P2d 457 (1935).

Dismissal of Appeal Taken Without Authority: Where it is shown that an attorney has no authority to represent the party for whom he assumes to act in taking an appeal, he will not be permitted to act further and the appeal will be dismissed. Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Penwell, 99 M 255, 42 P2d 457 (1935).

Presumption and Burden of Proof: The presumption that a regularly admitted attorney appearing for a party in a cause is authorized to so appear is not conclusive. The opposite party having reasonable cause to doubt the attorney's authority may apply to the court requiring him to show his authority. The burden of proving lack thereof by positive evidence rests upon the attacking party, whereupon, such burden being sustained, the burden shifts to the attorney to show his authority. Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Penwell, 99 M 255, 42 P2d 457 (1935).

Trustee as Attorney — Specific Authority for Appeal Required: Showing made by an attorney on an order requiring him to show by what authority he, as one of five statutory trustees of a dissolved corporation, was prosecuting an appeal to the Supreme Court from an order appointing a receiver for the corporation without the consent of his four cotrustees, to the effect that he had for many years represented the trust in legal matters with their consent and that he had so represented them in the action resulting in the appeal, was insufficient in the absence of proof that they had authorized him to take the appeal. Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Penwell, 99 M 255, 42 P2d 457 (1935).

Letter as Evidence to Support Order Requiring Authority to Be Shown: Where an attorney who was one of five statutory trustees of a dissolved corporation assumed to prosecute an appeal to the Supreme Court from an order appointing a receiver for the corporation made with the consent of the other four trustees, a motion of the bank at the instance of which the appointment was made and which was the party respondent on appeal, asking that the attorney prosecuting the appeal be required to show by whose authority he was acting, supported by a letter from each of the cotrustees to the effect that they had never authorized the appeal, presented a sufficient showing to justify the issuance of the order prayed for. Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Penwell, 99 M 255, 42 P2d 457 (1935).

Motion to Be Made in Trial Court: Where a defendant does not challenge in the trial court the authority of an attorney of his adversary to appear for him, in accordance with the provisions of this section, his right to question it later is waived. In re Miller's Estate, 71 M 330, 229 P 851 (1924), distinguished in Union Bank & Trust Co. v. Penwell, 99 M 255, 42 P2d 457 (1935).

Criminal Plea — Conditions Violated: Where defendant had entered a plea of guilty to the charge of illegal transportation of intoxicating liquor and later authorized his attorney to withdraw that plea and enter one of guilty on condition that the District Judge would agree to the imposition of a certain fine with the jail sentence suspended and the attorney entered an unconditional plea of guilty, he exceeded his authority and the court, under this section, erred in refusing to set aside the judgment pronounced on the latter plea. St. v. Dow, 71 M 291, 229 P 402 (1924).

Early Motion for Authority Required to Be Made: The motion requiring the attorney for the adverse party to produce his authority must be made at the earliest practicable time, otherwise the right may be considered to have been waived. Missoula Belt Line Ry. Co. v. Smith, 58 M 432, 193 P 529 (1920).

Case Notes

No Deprivation of Right to Counsel — Failure to Cooperate With Multiple Public Defenders — Order Granting Motion to Withdraw Not Required: After firing multiple public defenders, the defendant represented herself at trial and was convicted in Municipal Court of a handful of misdemeanors. On first appeal, the District Court determined that the Municipal Court made the appropriate balancing decision between the defendant's right to counsel and her refusal to work with everyone appointed to represent her. On final appeal, the Supreme Court held that it was within the Municipal Court's discretion to accept the defendant's decision to represent herself, and to the extent that the defendant did not expressly and unequivocally waive her right to counsel because her decision was inconsistent over time, she effectively did so by failing to cooperate with a series of court-appointed attorneys. Any procedural errors that may have occurred based on the Municipal Court's failure to act on an attorney's pending motion to withdraw did not deprive the defendant of her rights, as she informed the court that she desired to represent herself. Additionally, the Municipal Court took into consideration that the defendant had represented herself in a criminal proceeding in the past and that she was aware of the charges and possible penalties. Missoula v. Fogarty, 2013 MT 254, 371 Mont. 513, 309 P.3d 10.

Appointment of GAL and Conservator — Inability of Parents to Choose Counsel for Child: The custodial parents of a minor child appealed the District Court's order denying their motion to disqualify counsel for their child in a personal injury matter, arguing that they had the right to choose counsel over the opposition of the guardian ad litem (GAL) and conservator, that 37-61-403 and 72-5-427 were unconstitutional, and that 37-61-403 conflicts with the Montana Rules of Professional Conduct. The Supreme Court affirmed, concluding that once the parents consented to the appointment of a GAL and conservator, they divested themselves of the right to choose who would represent their child's personal injury claims. Assuming that the parents were clients under 37-61-403, their failure to comply with the statute by not securing consent of the attorney of record or applying to the District Court to change the attorney of record did not render the statute unconstitutional. Because the parents voluntarily consented to the appointment of the GAL and conservator and, thus, divested themselves of control over the child's legal action, their unhappiness with the decisions of the GAL and conservator did not render 72-5-427 unconstitutional. Rule 1.16, Montana Rules of Professional Conduct, and 37-61-403 work in conjunction: Rule 1.16 provides that an attorney shall withdraw from representation if discharged by a client and 37-61-403 provides the method for how discharge can be accomplished. Change of Attorney After Death of Client: Attorney was authorized to represent deceased client for whom there was filed a praecipe signed by counsel indicating withdrawal of previous counsel and requesting entry of name of new attorney for deceased even though signed and filed by counsel after death of client. State ex rel. Ross v. District Court, 150 M 233, 433 P2d 778 (1967).

Notice of Change of Attorney Required: In the absence of any relation of the attorney to the subject of the action, other than arising from his employment, the client may change his attorney at any stage of the action by complying with the statute, but such change must be entered upon the minutes of the court or be upon order of the court after notice. Thereafter written notice must be given to the adverse party of the change and substitution of a new attorney or of the appearance of the party in person. Endresse v. Van Vleet, 118 M 533, 169 P2d 719 (1946), followed in Saltzman v. Dept. of Transportation, 259 M 386, 856 P2d 965, 50 St. Rep. 845 (1993).

Guardian Entitled to Choose Attorney: The guardian of an incompetent was absolutely entitled to have a different attorney substituted to represent him in place of the firm that had represented the incompetent prior to the appointment of the guardian, notwithstanding the fees due such firm had not been paid. State ex rel. Davis v. District Court, 30 M 8, 75 P 516 (1904).

Case Notes

Failure to Provide Notice to Codefendant — Reversible Error: The defendant was held vicariously liable for injuries her son caused during a tractor accident. Prior to a bench trial, the defendant's counsel withdrew as her attorney and noted that she was incompetent and required a conservator. The defendant argued on appeal that the plaintiffs failed to meet the notice requirements when her counsel withdrew his representation. The Supreme Court agreed, holding that the plaintiffs' failure to provide notice to the defendant under 37-61-405 constituted reversible error. Stewart v. Rice, 2013 MT 55, 369 Mont. 203, 296 P.3d 1174, following Quantum Elec., Inc. v. Schaeffer, 2003 MT 29, 314 Mont. 193, 64 P.3d 1026.

No Error in Disallowing Continuance Following Withdrawal of Counsel on Day of Trial: A dissolution trial was delayed multiple times over nearly 2 ½ years following the husband's petition for dissolution, including three continuance requests by the husband. Only 2 weeks before trial, the husband dismissed his attorney, and his counsel withdrew on the scheduled trial date. Nevertheless, the trial court declined a motion by the husband for another continuance and instead proceeded to go through the basic requirements for dissolution and to get uncontested facts on the record, even though the husband declined to participate. The court then gave the husband the rest of the day to find an attorney, but he was not successful. The next day, the court again declined the husband's request for a continuance and proceeded to take testimony, although the husband was generally uncooperative when questioned by the wife's counsel. Following testimony, the court gave the husband 30 days in which to have a new attorney file an appearance and make any appropriate posttrial motions, but cautioned the husband that if he did not get counsel within a reasonable time, the court would make a decision based on the evidence before it. The husband eventually acquired new counsel, who filed a notice of appearance about 50 days after trial, but the husband filed no additional motions and provided the court with no additional evidence, and his new counsel had no further contact with the court or the wife's counsel. More than 3 months after trial, the court entered its decision and dissolution decree, and the husband appealed on grounds that the court erred by denying a continuance after his counsel withdrew on the day of trial. The Supreme Court affirmed. The husband's counsel did not withdraw without the client's consent, but rather was fired. Allowing a party to fire counsel and be granted a continuance on the day of trial would effectively place control of proceedings in the hands of the party rather than with the court and would result in an impermissible interruption in the functioning of the judicial system. By shortening the first day of trial so that the husband could seek new counsel and by granting 30 days after trial in which to obtain counsel and to notify the court of further motions or evidence, the trial court compensated for the counsel's withdrawal on the day of trial and provided adequate notice to the husband; thus, the trial court did not err in disallowing a further continuance. In re Marriage of Hardin, 2008 MT 154, 343 M 254, 184 P3d 1012 (2008), distinguishing Quantum Elec., Inc. v. Schaeffer, 2003 MT 29, 314 M 193, 64 P3d 1026 (2003), and followed in In re Guardianship of A.M.M., 2015 MT 250, 380 Mont. 451, 356 P.3d 474.

Withdrawal of Counsel — No Requirement That Party Provide Written Notice of Hearing Until Notice of Withdrawal of Counsel Filed: Defendant moved for sanctions and dismissal based on discovery abuses. Notice was sent to plaintiffs' counsel regarding a hearing on the motion, but plaintiffs' counsel had decided to withdraw. Although counsel mentioned the hearing to plaintiffs, plaintiffs failed to appear at the hearing, so defendant's motion was granted. No notice was filed with the court formalizing withdrawal of counsel until after the hearing. Plaintiffs' new counsel moved to set aside the judgment on grounds of mistake, surprise, and excusable neglect, asserting that defendant was required to notify plaintiffs in writing before the hearing, but the motion was denied, and plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. Defendant was not required to provide written notice to plaintiffs until their former counsel filed a notice of withdrawal, and the rules of professional conduct prohibited defendant from contacting plaintiffs in person. Until the notice of withdrawal was filed, defendant was entitled to presume that plaintiffs' former counsel continued to provide representation and that plaintiffs had been properly notified of the hearing by counsel. Under these circumstances, denial of the motion to set aside the judgment was not an abuse of discretion. Flesch v. McDonald's Restaurant, 2005 MT 235, 328 M 407, 121 P3d 527 (2005).

Required Notice of Withdrawal of Counsel: When counsel for a party withdraws, in order to properly protect the interests of the unrepresented party, the opposing party, by written notice, must require the unrepresented party to appoint another attorney or appear in person, as provided in this section. The written notice must include the date of the next action required in the case and notice that if the unrepresented party fails to appoint an attorney or appear in person within 20 days from the date of notice, the action or other proceeding will proceed and may result in a judgment or other order being entered against the unrepresented party. Once proper notice is given, any continued refusal by the unrepresented party to participate in the proceedings may justly result in default judgment or other final judgment against that party's interests. Quantum Elec., Inc. v. Schaeffer, 2003 MT 29, 314 M 193, 64 P3d 1026 (2003), following McPartlin v. Fransen, 178 M 178, 582 P2d 1255 (1978), and Stanley v. Holms, 281 M 329, 934 P2d 196 (1997), and overruling Sikorski & Sons, Inc. v. Sikorski, 162 M 442, 512 P2d 1147 (1973), and Audit Serv., Inc. v. Kraus Constr., Inc., 189 M 94, 615 P2d 183 (1980), to the extent that Sikorski and Audit Serv. waived a failure of opposing counsel to comply with this section.

Notice Required When Counsel Withdraws — Discovery Deadline Tolled: Only 3 days before the deadline for answers to discovery requests, Holms's counsel moved to withdraw, citing irreconcilable personal and professional differences with Holms regarding handling of the case and a breakdown in attorney-client communication. Four days after the discovery deadline, Stanleys moved for summary judgment based to a great extent on matters considered admitted by Holms's failure to respond to requests for admissions pursuant to former Rule 36(a), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded). Twelve days after the motion for summary judgment, the court heard and granted counsel's motion to withdraw. On the same day, Stanleys served Holms with confirmation of the court's oral instruction to Holms regarding Rule 10, M.U.D.C.R. (Title 25, ch. 19), and a notice of the hearing on the motion for summary judgment. Seven days before the hearing, Holms' new counsel agreed to undertake representation and the following day moved to amend the pleadings, to file amended responses to Stanleys' first discovery requests, and to continue Stanleys' motion for summary judgment. On the date set for hearing on the summary judgment, the court heard oral argument and granted Stanleys' motion about 3 months later. In its order, the court concluded that the 30-day deadline in former Rule 36(a) was not tolled because Rule 10, M.U.D.C.R., did not apply. However, pursuant to Rule 10, M.U.D.C.R., and this section, the opposing party with notice of the withdrawal of counsel has a duty to provide adequate notice to the unrepresented party when that party's attorney ceases to act as such, not just when the attorney dies or is removed, suspended, or actually withdraws, before taking advantage of a default on the part of the other side. The purpose of this notice requirement is to prevent a represented party from taking unfair advantage of the situation of the opposing party who has actually or effectively lost representation and to ensure that the unrepresented party receives a fair trial. The case was remanded for consideration of the motion to amend the pleadings and reconsideration of the summary judgment motion in light of the amended pleadings, the discovery responses, and the state of the record at the time that the motion for summary judgment is heard. Stanley v. Holms, 281 M 329, 934 P2d 196, 54 St. Rep. 195 (1997), following McPartlin v. Fransen, 178 M 178, 582 P2d 1255 (1978). On remand, the District Court did not abuse its discretion in conducting the summary judgment hearing and ruling on Stanley's motion for summary judgment without allowing Holms the opportunity to conduct further discovery. Stanley v. Holms, 1999 MT 41, 293 M 343, 975 P2d 1242, 56 St. Rep. 178 (1999), following Howell v. Glacier Gen. Assurance Co., 240 M 383, 785 P2d 1018, 46 St. Rep. 2216 (1989).

Case Stayed When Notice Not Served: A party was notified of the trial but did not attend, and his counsel had been given leave to withdraw. The record did not show that the party was served with the notice required by this section; therefore, the case against him was stayed, and judgment could not be granted until proper notice was served. McWilliams v. Clem, 228 M 297, 743 P2d 577, 44 St. Rep. 1536 (1987).

Attorney Withdrawal With No Notice to Client — Default Set Aside: The lower court granted defendants' attorney's motion to withdraw and ordered him to notify defendants. Defendants claimed on appeal that they received no notice. The record showed no evidence of notice by the attorney and no evidence of the notice that this section required plaintiff to give. A default was issued against defendants at a time when they had no attorney and were not represented at the hearing. Defendants properly raised on appeal the lack of the lower court's power to proceed to default. The case was remanded with directions to set the default aside and grant a rehearing. Mont. Bank of Roundup, N.A. v. Benson, 220 M 410, 717 P2d 6, 43 St. Rep. 485 (1986), followed in In re Marriage of Whiting, 259 M 180, 854 P2d 343, 50 St. Rep. 747 (1993).

Notice to Appoint Counsel — Default Dissolution Set Aside: After the wife's second attorney withdrew, the court set the next hearing date for September 11. Pursuant to this section, the husband's counsel gave notice to her to appoint other counsel or appear in person on August 6, a date of no significance. When the wife did not appear on that date, a default judgment was granted. On appeal, the Supreme Court set aside the default based on the entirety of the circumstances. In part, it stated that the husband's notice to the wife should have stated that the wife would be expected to appear on the September date, with or without counsel. In re Marriage of Neneman, 217 M 155, 703 P2d 164, 42 St. Rep. 1095 (1985).

Required Notice When Counsel Withdraws: An adverse party with notice of the withdrawal of the opposing party's counsel has a duty to take reasonable steps to inform the opposing party of an appointed trial date and that he should either obtain new counsel or proceed to trial without counsel. If the represented party can show he made a good-faith effort to notify the unrepresented party and advise him that he should substitute counsel or appear in person and the notice also sets forth the date of the next hearing or action in the matter pending, then the represented party will have satisfied the notice requirements of this section. McPartlin v. Fransen, 178 M 178, 582 P2d 1255, 35 St. Rep. 1191 (1978), followed in Stanley v. Holms, 281 M 329, 934 P2d 196, 54 St. Rep. 195 (1997), and In re Marriage of Wallace, 284 M 360, 944 P2d 227, 54 St. Rep. 920 (1997).

Withdrawal of Attorney — Notice Between Parties Not Required: Adverse party was not required to advise the opposite party to appoint another lawyer or appear for himself where the opposite party's lawyer, with the consent of that party, withdrew from the case. Sikorski & Sons, Inc. v. Sikorski, 162 M 442, 512 P2d 1147 (1973).

Application for Extension of Filing Time Not Prohibited: There was no merit to an appellant's argument in opposition to a motion to strike a bill of exceptions that because an extension of time could not exceed 90 days without the consent of the adverse party pursuant to section 25-1-301 and because he could not get an extension until a new attorney for the adverse party was appointed pursuant to this section, he was prevented from making a timely filing of his bill. Even though appellee's attorney may have died, this section is not designated to enable a prospective appellant to disregard the time limitation on filing a bill by delaying notice to the adverse party to appoint a new attorney. Berg v. Fraser, 136 M 525, 349 P2d 317 (1960).

Demand for Replacement of Attorney Required: When one attorney dies, appointment of a successor must be demanded. Hand v. Hand, 131 M 571, 312 P2d 990 (1957).

No Evidence to Support Malicious Prosecution or Abuse of Process Claim — District Court Dismissal of Attorney Deceit Claim Improper: In a suit for malicious prosecution, abuse of process, and attorney deceit, the District Court did not err by granting judgment in favor of the defendant on the malicious prosecution claim or by awarding summary judgment to the defendant on the abuse of process claim when the plaintiff failed to prove the elements necessary to establish the claims. The plaintiff failed to prove malicious prosecution when, for purposes of establishing probable cause, all of the parties reasonably believed the facts gave rise to a valid claim. The plaintiff also failed to prove abuse of process despite his allegations that the ulterior purpose of the suit was to coerce him into paying damages. Payment of damages is a legitimate purpose for a civil action, and no facts existed to demonstrate that the defendant acted with an improper ulterior purpose. However, the District Court erred by granting summary judgment to the defendant on the attorney deceit claim when a trier of fact could find that the defendant acted deceitfully with the intent to deceive opposing counsel. Spoja v. White, 2014 MT 9, 373 Mont. 269, 317 P.3d 153, following Plouffe v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2002 MT 64, 309 Mont. 184, 45 P.3d 10, Hughes v. Lynch, 2007 MT 177, 338 Mont. 214, 164 P.3d 913, and Judd v. Burlington N. & Santa Fe Ry. Co., 2008 MT 181, 343 Mont. 416, 186 P.3d 214.

Failure to Show That but for Negligent Legal Advice, Deportation Could Have Been Successfully Defended — Professional Negligence Claim Properly Dismissed: Fang, a Chinese citizen and lawful permanent United States resident employed by Montana State University-Bozeman, was involved in a domestic dispute with his wife that resulted in charges of assault. Fang consulted Bock, who worked at the university legal services offices, regarding the possibility of deportation. Bock in turn consulted Rice, an attorney who had made a presentation on immigration law at a seminar that Bock had attended, and asked if a misdemeanor domestic abuse charge was grounds for deportation. Rice informed Bock that the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) would not initiate deportation proceedings until the commission of two misdemeanors. Bock relayed that information to Fang, who relied at least in part on the information and pleaded guilty to family member assault. However, in 1996, Congress enacted a new immigration statute (see 8 U.S.C. 1227(a)(2)(E)(i)) that provides that domestic violence convictions are deportable offenses. Several weeks after pleading guilty, Fang received a notice to appear and face deportation. After hiring new counsel, Fang moved to withdraw the guilty plea. The District Court granted the motion on grounds that the failure of Bock to inform Fang of the possibility of removal to China constituted ineffective assistance of counsel, and the INS agreed to suspend further proceedings until the resolution of charges against Fang. Based on the advice of his new counsel, Fang reached a plea agreement with the Gallatin County Attorney to plead guilty to an amended charge of assault. Following conviction, the INS again moved to deport Fang, and based on the fact that assault also constitutes a crime of violence against a protected person pursuant to federal immigration law, Fang was ordered to be deported. Fang then filed a complaint against Bock, seeking damages for professional negligence and negligent supervision and treble damages under this section. The District Court applied Lorash v. Epstein, 236 M 21, 767 P2d 1335 (1989), and determined that Fang could not satisfy the last element of the test for a prima facie case of professional negligence, which requires a showing that but for such negligence, Fang would have successfully defended against the offense. The court then summarily dismissed the case. Fang appealed, contending that because of Bock's advice, he was exposed to the possibility of removal from this country and had to spend substantial amounts of money to avoid that exposure. Pursuant to Lorash, the Supreme Court had to determine whether Fang would have been exposed to the possibility of removal from this country with or without Bock's advice, in light of the offenses to which Fang pleaded guilty, the statutory basis for deportation, and the immigration judge's explanation for the deportation order. Under either charge, Fang was guilty of an offense of violence against a protected person—his wife. The title of the offense was irrelevant because for purposes of immigration law, misdemeanor assault is considered just as much a crime of violence against a spouse as family member assault. Further, Fang's argument that a different result was compelled by the fact that the assault conviction was subsequently expunged based on a deferred prosecution also failed because under federal case law, no effect is to be given to a state action that purports to remove a guilty plea or conviction by operation of a state rehabilitative statute. Thus, Fang's situation was a result of the conduct that he admitted and was the same following correct legal advice as it was following Bock's incorrect advice. Although Bock misinformed Fang, that advice did not lead to Fang's predicament, nor would the money that he spent to have the first conviction set aside have changed the result. Fang could not prove that but for negligent legal advice he could have avoided deportation, and Bock was entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fang v. Bock, 2001 MT 116, 305 M 322, 28 P3d 456 (2001).

Statute of Limitations Applicable to Penalty for Deceit: Because this section, which provides a penalty for deceit or collusion by an attorney, is clearly a penalty statute, the 2-year statute of limitations in 27-2-211 applies rather than the 3-year general tort statute of limitations. Barrett v. Holland & Hart, 256 M 101, 845 P2d 714, 49 St. Rep. 1156 (1992), and 50 St. Rep. 63 (1993).

Dual Civil and Criminal Sanctions: This section has a dual purpose. One purpose is to compensate the innocent party who incurred additional time and expense as a result of the deceit of the culpable attorney. The other is to punish by criminal action any attorney who deceives the court or the other party. If criminal penalties are sought under this section, the accused lawyer must be indicted and prosecuted by the state. He is entitled to all of the rights guaranteed under the Constitution of the United States and the Montana Constitution. On the other hand, if only monetary sanctions are sought under this section, the determination can be made in a civil proceeding. LaFountaine v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 215 M 402, 698 P2d 410, 42 St. Rep. 496 (1985).

Misrepresentation and Improper Process by Attorney — Sanctions: Since under 33-1-602 defendant, a foreign insurer, could only be served by service upon the Commissioner of Insurance, personal jurisdiction over insurer was not obtained when it was served at its Billings claim office. Thus, when plaintiffs' attorney appealed quashing of the service, the appeal was dismissed. Plaintiffs' attorney represented to the District Court's personnel that he had won the appeal and was entitled to a default judgment, and the personnel entered one against insurer for $150,000 punitive damages and $385 costs. The default judgment was void for want of jurisdiction, and the District Court correctly vacated it. As insurer was not properly served, the District Court properly ruled plaintiffs could not take depositions. The attorney was properly adjudged liable to insurer for $4,031.50 under 37-61-406, stating that an attorney guilty of deceit or collusion with intent to deceive the court or a party forfeits to the party injured by his deceit or collusion treble damages. LaFountaine v. St. Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 215 M 402, 698 P2d 410, 42 St. Rep. 496 (1985).

Fraud by Party's Own Attorney — Not Within Section: Plaintiff alleged that his attorney had committed fraud in splitting a settlement and asked for treble damages. Defendant contended that treble damages did not apply to the facts. The court held that this section applies to deceit practiced upon the court or the adverse party during the litigation process. The act of deceit relating to this case constituted the incident upon which the cause of action was filed. For this reason, this section was not statutory grounds for assessing treble damages. Eaton v. Morse, 212 M 233, 687 P2d 1004, 41 St. Rep. 1708 (1984).

Abuse of Deposition Process — Basis for Tort of Abuse of Process: The plaintiff and his wife were divorced in 1976. The plaintiff sought to have the property agreement set aside as unconscionable and failed. In 1979, he filed a fraud action against his ex-wife and her attorney in conjunction with the dissolution. The ex-wife petitioned the court to hold plaintiff in contempt for failure to comply with the dissolution decree. Plaintiff, residing in Idaho, was served, failed to appear, and was held in contempt. The judge issued a bench warrant for his arrest. Defendants, counsel for the ex-wife in the fraud case, set a time to take plaintiff's deposition in Bozeman. Subsequent to noticing the deposition, defendants notified the District Court Judge that plaintiff would be in Bozeman that day. After taking plaintiff's deposition, defendants notified the judge, who had plaintiff arrested. Plaintiff filed suit against defendants for the tort of malicious abuse of process, and defendants moved for summary judgment. The federal court held that abuse of the power granted under former Rule 30, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), relating to depositions can serve as the basis for the tort of abuse of process. Factual issues existed, so that the summary judgment motion was denied. Hopper v. Drysdale, 524 F. Supp. 1039, 38 St. Rep. 1970 (D.C. Mont. 1981).

Trustee Law Firm as Proper Party to Suit: Plaintiff law firm, acting as trustee for medical providers, sought to recover payment for medical care provided to the Harrisons' children. Following a 1-day nonjury trial, the District Court ordered the Harrisons to pay the medical bills and the costs of the action. On appeal, the Harrisons contended that the law firm was not a proper party because it had acquired an interest in claims for the purpose of bringing suit under certain contingencies, in violation of this section. The Supreme Court found that the law firm was a proper party and held that the Harrisons' contention was without merit. There was no violation of the trust agreement alleged, nor were the Harrisons' substantive rights prejudiced. Further, the trust agreement removed much of the risk of conflict of interest because it required the trust beneficiaries' consent to suit or compromise of claims, in conformity with State Bar Ethics Opinion 910529. Attorney's Purchase of Interest in Client's Land With No Intent to Bring Action Not Champerty: Attorney Stone purchased an interest in land owned by his client, Green, knowing that Green and a cotenant, Gremaux, had been unable to agree to terms for the sale or lease of Green's interest. Gremaux contended that Stone's action constituted champerty. Distinguishing Lussy v. Bennett, 214 M 301, 692 P2d 1232 (1984), the Supreme Court held that Stone's action did not involve champerty because Stone purchased the interest without any intent of bringing an action against Gremaux for Stone's personal economic benefit. In re Green v. Gremaux, 285 M 31, 945 P2d 903, 54 St. Rep. 1029 (1997).

Party Proceeding Pro Se — Frivolous and Champertous Claim: By his own statement, Lussy acquired title to one of two parcels in order to bring an action to remove a "trespassing house" and intended to divide the proceeds among the remaining members of his family. Under 37-61-408, an attorney is prohibited from acquiring a claim or demand for purpose of bringing action. Under 37-61-411, the same rule applies when a party prosecutes in person instead of acting through an attorney. Public Policy: This section and section 93-2801, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed), providing that every action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, by clear implication intend to discourage litigation and keep it within certain bounds in the interest of a sound public

No Showing That Representation by Former Deputy County Attorney Influenced by Actual Conflict of Interest: In postconviction relief proceedings, Thurston claimed that he received ineffective assistance of counsel when he was represented at trial by a former Deputy County Attorney who had allegedly exchanged information about the investigation of Thurston's case while employed by the County Attorney's office. Thurston's claim was denied, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Under St. v. Deschon, 2002 MT 16, 308 M 175, 40 P3d 391 (2002), a defendant claiming ineffective assistance of counsel because of a conflict of interest must show that counsel actively represented conflicting interests and that an actual conflict of interest adversely affected counsel's performance. Although bar association standards and this section supported an argument that counsel should not have represented Thurston after supposedly gaining knowledge of the case while employed by the County Attorney's office, it was not a basis for reversal unless Thurston could establish that an actual conflict existed. Even though the conflict of interest was disclosed to Thurston, he did not request other counsel, nor did Thurston demonstrate how the conflict might have affected counsel's performance or resulted in prejudice. Therefore, the postconviction claim was properly denied. Thurston v. St., 2004 MT 142, 321 M 411, 91 P3d 1259 (2004).

No Violation When Separate Charges Involved: Appointment as defense counsel of attorney who had successfully prosecuted defendant on another charge over 7 years earlier was not a violation of defendant's constitutional rights; prosecution of an individual by a former County Attorney did not forever prohibit that attorney from defending that individual on a separate and distinct criminal charge. Petition of Pepperling, 162 M 524, 508 P2d 569 (1973), followed in St. v. Martz, 233 M 136, 760 P2d 65, 45 St. Rep. 1370 (1988).

Waiver: Defendant who had choice of defense counsel and chose attorney who had prosecuted him in earlier case waived any right to demand new trial based on such representation. St. v. Gallagher, 162 M 155, 509 P2d 852 (1973).

Previous Prosecution by Attorney — New Trial Refused: Under a repealed section prohibiting attorneys from defending prosecutions carried on formerly by themselves, convicted petitioner was not entitled to new trial merely on ground his voluntarily hired counsel had prosecuted him 4 years before, where petitioner at all times knew that his counsel was such former prosecutor and where the trial at hand had no relation to any official duty performed by his counsel as prosecutor. Application to State Prison: This section is sufficiently broad to include the Warden of the state prison and inmates thereof. State ex rel. Middleton v. District Court, 85 M 215, 278 P 122 (1929).

Nature of Attorney's Business Determinative: The right granted by this section to an attorney to consult with a prisoner depends upon legitimate business to be transacted, not upon a mere desire to visit the prisoner, and the reasonableness of the arrangement made for the interview in each case depends largely upon the nature and extent of the business to be transacted. State ex rel. Middleton v. District Court, 85 M 215, 278 P 122 (1929).

Particular Arrangements for Privacy Held Sufficient: Pursuant to the provisions of this section, the District Court in a proceeding in mandamus ordered the Warden of the state prison to permit an attorney to consult with a prisoner in absolute privacy. The Warden ordered that consultation be permitted through a small window fitted in the wall with a ½-inch wire mesh on each side of the wall, no one being within earshot but a guard standing outside a glass door where he could see the attorney but could not hear what was being said. The arrangement made by the Warden under the circumstances of the case sufficiently complied with the order of the court, and a judgment of contempt was not supported by the evidence. State ex rel. Writ of Mandate Appropriate to Secure Right of Lawyer: An attorney for a prisoner confined in the state penitentiary against whom an untried criminal charge was pending in the District Court had the right under this section to a Writ of Mandate for a reasonable opportunity to consult with his client in absolute privacy, and the contention that an action of debt to recover the penalty of $100 from an officer violating the provision of the section affords the exclusive remedy open to the prisoner has no merit. ATTORNEY FEES AND LIENS — GENERALLY

Summary Judgment for Bank That Disbursed Funds to Constituencies Absent Showing of Conversion, Despite Presence of Attorney's Lien on Funds: Plaintiff law firm represented a woman in divorce proceedings and filed a lien against the woman for attorney fees that she allegedly owed the firm. A divorce decree was issued that awarded the woman $400,000 from a bank trust account, but no fees were awarded to the firm, which subsequently filed a collection action against the woman, the account trustees, and the bank, asserting a breach of duty, conversion, malice, and actual fraud and seeking punitive damages. However, at no time did the firm obtain a judgment on the lien or a prejudgment attachment of the trust account. The District Court granted summary judgment for the account trustees and the bank, and the firm appealed regarding the conversion claim. The Supreme Court affirmed because the firm failed to establish conversion of its lien. Without a judgment fixing the debt or a writ executing a judgment upon the trust fund account, the firm could not establish its ownership of the funds or a right to possession of them, and the mere assertion of a lien did not suffice to defeat the bank's or the trustee's fiduciary duties, so summary judgment was proper. St. Peter & Warren, P.C. v. Purdom, 2006 MT 172, 333 M 9, 140 P3d 478 (2006), following King v. Zimmerman, 266 M 54, 878 P2d 895 (1994).

Common Fund Not Created by Stavenjord I — No Recovery of Attorney Fees From Nonparticipating Claimants: On remand to the Workers' Compensation Court of Stavenjord v. Mont. St. Fund, 2003 MT 67, 314 M 466, 67 P3d 229 (2003) (Stavenjord I), the State Fund paid Stavenjord's additional benefits, and Stavenjord then sought recovery of common fund attorney fees for Stavenjord-type benefits secured by nonparticipating claimants. The Workers' Compensation Court concluded that Stavenjord I created a common fund and that Stavenjord's counsel was entitled to collect common fund fees from nonparticipating claimants who benefited from Stavenjord I. On appeal, the Supreme Court disagreed. Applying the elements of a common fund set out in Mtn. W. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hall, 2001 MT 314, 308 M 29, 38 P3d 825 (2001), the court determined that Stavenjord I did not create an identifiable monetary fund or benefit, so the first element in creation of a common fund was not satisfied and Stavenjord's counsel was not entitled to collect common fund fees from nonparticipating claimants. The case was remanded to the Workers' Compensation Court for a determination of an appropriate procedure by which potential Stavenjord beneficiaries would be identified and notified of their interests related to increased Stavenjord-type benefits. Stavenjord v. Mont. St. Fund, 2006 MT 257, 334 M 117, 146 P3d 724 (2006).

Method for Resolving Fee Disputes in Contingency Fee Cases When Attorney Dissociates From Firm and Continues to Represent Clients: Attorney Halverson worked on plaintiff's case for 6 months before resigning from the firm. Plaintiff decided to remain with Halverson and discharged the firm. Halverson accepted the representation and reimbursed the firm upon transfer of the case. The firm then filed a lien on any potential attorney fees recovered in plaintiff's case. Plaintiff was ultimately awarded nearly $4 million in damages and moved to determine the amount that the firm was entitled to pursuant to the lien. Based on Halverson's affidavit of hours spent on the case while Halverson was at the firm, the District Court calculated quantum meruit by multiplying the number of hours Halverson worked on the case while at the firm by Halverson's proposed hourly rate and awarded the firm $3,750. The firm appealed on grounds that quantum meruit was an inequitable way to apportion fees under these circumstances. The Supreme Court adopted the methodology in Phil Watson, P.C. v. Peterson, 650 NW 2d 562 (Iowa 2002), to resolve fee disputes in contingency fee cases when an attorney dissociates from a firm and continues to represent clients originally represented by the firm. The court agreed that quantum meruit provided the proper measure of fees to the firm awarded after Halverson left the firm and represented the original firm's entitlement. A court shall award to the original firm a fee based on a percentage of total time that the firm spent on the case while the departing attorney worked at the firm compared to the time that the departing attorney worked on the case after leaving the firm. However, the court disagreed on the method of calculation based only on Halverson's affidavit. The court remanded for an evidentiary hearing to allow Halverson and the firm to present evidence regarding the amount of time that Halverson spent on the case while employed by the firm compared to the amount of time spent on the case after Halverson left the firm and directed the District Court to then recalculate the firm's award based on that percentage. Pumphrey v. Empire Lath & Plaster, 2006 MT 255, 334 M 102, 144 P3d 813 (2006).

Common Fund Doctrine Equitable Exception to American Rule Regarding Award of Attorney Fees Applicable to Medical Services Lien — Elements of Doctrine: Kilmer suffered severe injuries as a passenger in a vehicle driven by Hall. Kilmer received medical attention from a North Dakota hospital, which subsequently perfected a lien for the value of its services in the amount of $309,000. Hall had no insurance, but the co-owner of the vehicle had a $500,000 policy with Mountain West Farm Bureau (Mountain West). The policy had a step-down provision limiting Mountain West's liability to $25,000 for passengers other than the insured or a relative of the insured, so Mountain West initially found that Kilmer was entitled to only $25,000. However, after negotiating with Kilmer's attorney, Mountain West agreed to proffer the policy limit of $500,000, plus $30,000 in no-fault coverage. Mountain West then filed a complaint for interpleader, the hospital cross-claimed against Kilmer for satisfaction of its lien, and Kilmer cross-claimed against the hospital for a reduction in the hospital's recovery for a pro rata portion of Kilmer's attorney fees incurred in negotiating the settlement with Mountain West. The District Court applied Sisters of Charity of Providence of Mont. v. Nichols, 157 M 106, 483 P2d 279 (1971), and held that the hospital was not liable for a pro rata portion of Kilmer's attorney fees. Kilmer appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. Under the 1999 version of 71-3-1114 applicable to this case, the hospital had a valid lien for its medical services; however, the statute was silent on the issue of attorney fee apportionment (see, however, 2001 amendments addressing a hospital's pro rata liability for an injured person's attorney fees). Generally, Montana follows the American rule that a party in a civil action is not entitled to attorney fees absent a specific contractual or statutory grant of those fees. There are exceptions to the American rule, one of which is the common fund doctrine authorizing the spread of fees among the individuals who benefit from the litigation that created the common fund. The three elements necessary to establish a common fund, as set out in Means v. Mont. Power Co., 191 M 395, 625 P2d 32 (1981), and Murer v. St. Comp. Mut. Ins. Fund, 283 M 210, 942 P2d 69 (1997), are: (1) one party, known as the active beneficiary, must create, reserve, or increase a common fund; (2) the active beneficiary must incur legal fees in establishing the common fund; and (3) the common fund must benefit ascertainable, nonparticipating beneficiaries. To the extent that there are inequities in the contributions of participating counsel, the court may then intervene to allocate fees accordingly. Because the common fund doctrine was not raised in Sisters of Charity of Providence of Mont. v. Nichols, the Supreme Court held that that case did not preclude application of the doctrine in the present case. Thus, the District Court erred as a matter of law in relying on Sisters of Charity of Providence of Mont. v. Nichols to grant the hospital's partial summary judgment. Although the Supreme Court declined to rule on the applicability of the common fund doctrine here because the parties did not present arguments in District Court as to whether Kilmer could satisfy the elements of the doctrine, the case was remanded to allow Kilmer to present arguments on the applicability of the common fund doctrine. Mtn. W. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hall, 2001 MT 314, 308 M 29, 38 P3d 825 (2001).

Payment for Attorney Who Voluntarily Withdraws From Contingent Fee Case Before Occurrence of Contingency Based on Good Cause for Withdrawal — Modern Majority Rule: Sullivan retained plaintiff Bell & Marra, pllc, to represent him in an employment termination case, entering a contingent fee agreement for payment. Plaintiff represented Sullivan through two trials and settlement negotiations, after which it sent Sullivan a letter stating that it could not continue under the written 40% contingent arrangement and demanding that, in order to continue representation, Sullivan deposit $2,000 to cover costs of appeal transcripts and agree to pay plaintiff a percentage of all settlement proceeds, judgment damages, and other consideration recovered from the employer in the amount of 50% for appeal and subsequent trial for discrimination or wrongful discharge and an additional 5% for each appeal thereafter. Sullivan declined the ultimatum and hired new counsel. Upon settlement of Sullivan's employment claim, plaintiff filed: (1) a lien foreclosure action for payment of fees involving the employment claim, including advanced costs plus 40% of the recovery or the quantum meruit value of the legal services performed computed on an hourly basis; (2) a contract action related to fees incurred during representation of Sullivan's dissolution proceedings; and (3) a claim against Sullivan's employer requesting that settlement proceeds be held or paid to plaintiff according to the lien against Sullivan. Sullivan asserted affirmative defenses, including fraud, unavailability of quantum meruit damages because of plaintiff's repudiation of the fee agreement, and breach of fiduciary duty, as well as counterclaims for breach of contract, conversion, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and breach of fiduciary duty. The District Court concluded that whether plaintiff withdrew or was fired was irrelevant and that the parties simply terminated the attorney-client relationship. The court then denied Sullivan's motions and counterclaims and granted summary judgment to plaintiff on all issues, awarding plaintiff attorney fees for the employment-related litigation at the contract rate of 40% minus the amount in the fee arrangement with Sullivan's subsequent attorney; fees and costs incurred during Sullivan's dissolution action; outstanding costs for the employment litigation; prejudgment interest on the damage awards; and plaintiff's attorney fees and costs incurred in pursuing the foreclosure action. Sullivan appealed the summary judgment. In a case of first impression, the Supreme Court adopted the modern majority rule, which holds that an attorney who voluntarily withdraws from a contingency fee case without good cause forfeits recovery of compensation for services performed, but if withdrawal was for good cause or was justified, the attorney may recover based on quantum meruit. Whether good cause exists depends on the facts and circumstances of each case. Good cause exists when a client has engaged in culpable conduct, when continued representation would violate an attorney's ethical obligations, or when an attorney lacks the resources to pursue litigation. However, a client's refusal to accept a settlement offer does not constitute good cause, nor is it justifiable for an attorney to withdraw if the attorney does not believe that the negotiated contract is sufficiently compensatory. In the present case, plaintiff withdrew because continued representation had become a financial burden, which is a good cause for withdrawal under the Montana Rules of Professional Conduct, but not necessarily one entitling an attorney to compensation. Faced with being forced to enter into a new and unacceptable fee agreement when the time for pursuing an appeal was running, Sullivan's decision to reject plaintiff's ultimatum resulted in plaintiff's voluntary withdrawal. In light of the modern majority rule, plaintiff did not have good cause to withdraw that would justify compensation, so the District Court's summary judgment was reversed. Bell & Marra, pllc v. Sullivan, 2000 MT 206, 300 M 530, 6 P3d 965, 57 St. Rep. 810 (2000), following Ausler v. Ramsey, 868 P2d 877 (Wash. Ct. App. 1994). See also Augustson v. Linea Aerea Nacional-Chile S.A., 76 F3d 658 (5th Cir. 1996).

Attorney Fee Lien Applicable to Medical Benefits Received in Workers' Compensation Settlement: Lockhart moved for an order directing the insurer to pay attorney fees out of the medical benefits owing to Lockhart under his successful workers' compensation claim. The Workers' Compensation Court denied the attorney fees on grounds that medical benefits are not benefits, but rather an imposition of liability imposed on the insurer, and that because an award of medical benefits does not entitle a claimant to receipt of money, there is no property against which an attorney fee lien can attach. The court held that when a claim has been denied and later found compensable by the court without a separate award of attorney fees, a contingent attorney fee may be computed based on medical benefits, but the amount may not be deducted from the compensation payable to the medical providers. The Supreme Court disagreed. Medical benefits are not the property of the medical providers simply because the medical providers are the actual recipients of the money, nor are medical benefits simply an obligation of the insurer. Instead, medical benefits are the property of the individual claimant, and, as such, the claimant should be allowed to pay attorney fees out of medical benefits. In the context of workers' compensation cases, attorney fee liens attach as a matter of law to all compensation, including medical benefits, upon the filing of an attorney retainer agreement with the Department of Labor and Industry. To require a claimant to pay a disproportionate amount of attorney fees from the claimant's personal resources would be unfair and contrary to the fundamental purpose of workers' compensation laws. Lockhart v. N.H. Ins. Co., 1999 MT 205, 295 M 467, 984 P2d 744, 56 St. Rep. 800 (1999), following Carlson v. Cain, 216 M 129, 700 P2d 607, 42 St. Rep. 695 (1985), and followed in Dildine v. Liberty NW. Ins. Corp., 2009 MT 87, 350 M 1, 204 P3d 729 (2009).

Notice and Hearing Required: Plaintiff changed attorneys during a proceeding. The order substituting counsel provided for attorney fees to the original counsel. It was error for the District Court to award fees without notice to the plaintiff and without providing an opportunity for a hearing. Bink v. First Bank West, Great Falls, Inc., 246 M 414, 804 P2d 384, 48 St. Rep. 17 (1991).

No Verdict or Judgment in Favor of Client: District Court did not err in denying attorney's claimed lien against his client's cattle that District Court allowed to be sold at Sheriff's sale to satisfy judgment in favor of the other party. When there was no verdict or judgment in favor of the attorney's client, the claimed lien was properly denied. Hill v. Turley, 218 M 511, 710 P2d 50, 42 St. Rep. 1783 (1985).

Lien Protection Extended to Workers' Compensation Attorneys Who File Retainer Agreements: This section provides that an attorney's lien attaches to a client's cause of action or counterclaim from "commencement of an action or the service of an answer". Applying this statutory scheme to the present case, a judgment lien would not attach against the claimant's workers' compensation award because the claimant's attorney negotiated a settlement with the fund prior to the commencement of an action. However, the Supreme Court, "by judicial fiat", extends this same protection by providing that an attorney who has filed his retainer agreement with the Workers' Compensation Division has a lien upon the award. The lien attaches upon filing of the contingency fee agreement with the Division. The issue of whether the attorney's name shall be listed as a payee on the state warrant is an administrative detail to be determined by the Workers' Compensation Division. Kelleher Law Office v. St. Comp. Ins. Fund, 213 M 412, 691 P2d 823, 41 St. Rep. 2203 (1984), followed in Lockhart v. N.H. Ins. Co., 1999 MT 205, 295 M 467, 984 P2d 744, 56 St. Rep. 800 (1999), holding that workers' compensation benefits may be subject to a lien for payment of attorney fees.

Incidental Benefit to Third Parties: Fact that settlement of personal injury claim by attorneys for their client incidentally benefited hospital by creating fund from which its bill for treatment of client could be paid did not create an implied contract by hospital to pay attorneys for their services. Neither was hospital obligated to share settlement proceeds on a subrogation theory. Sisters of Charity of Providence of Mont. v. Nichols, 157 M 106, 483 P2d 279 (1971).

Waiver of Lien: Failure of attorney to deduct expenses incurred in obtaining award in case and his expressed intention that he would collect expenses from future settlements constituted waiver of his lien for expenses. Gross v. Holzworth, 151 M 179, 440 P2d 765 (1968).

No Implied Amendment by Workmen's Compensation Laws: The fact that section 92-204, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed), provides that where an injured employee prosecutes an action against a tortfeasor through whose action he was injured he shall bear all expense incident thereto does not mean that the Legislature thereby intended to or did modify or amend this section, giving attorneys a first lien on the proceeds of a settlement of a cause of action in the hands of whomsoever such proceeds may come, which lien cannot be affected by any settlement between the parties before or after judgment. Hardware Mut. Cas. Co. v. Butler, 116 M 73, 148 P2d 563 (1944).

Eminent Domain Proceedings — Withdrawal of Attorney Before Judgment: This statute is broad enough to include all civil actions, and an attorney's charging lien may be enforced upon application to court in the suit in which the services were rendered. Where counsel withdrew from condemnation suit by the United States at landowner's request, after rendering considerable services, under agreement to be paid specified fee out of proceeds of settlement, they were entitled to lien on the proceeds for such fee on ground that they contributed to the judgment or settlement made, since the lien may arise for services in procuring a judgment or award. U.S. v. Hudson, 39 F. Supp. 797 (D.C. Mont. 1941).

Attorney Not Party to Action: The assertion by counsel for plaintiff of a lien upon the cause of action, under this section, does not make the attorney a real party in interest so that defendant could demand that the complaint be amended by adding the attorney as a party plaintiff. Phelps v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., 108 M 78, 88 P2d 58 (1939).

Execution Against Cause of Action — Restraint of Execution Sale: After reversal of Phelps' judgment against it with remand of the cause for a new trial, the railroad company obtained judgment for its costs on appeal and caused execution to be issued and levied upon Phelps' cause of action. Plaintiff, Phelps' attorney, claiming a lien on such cause of action for services rendered, brought suit to enjoin execution sale thereof. District Court did not abuse its discretion in restraining sale and maintaining the status quo pending retrial. Baker v. Tullock, 106 M 375, 77 P2d 1035 (1938).

Remedial Statute — Purpose: This section is a remedial statute that should be construed in advancement of the remedy and so as to secure and protect, and not to defeat, the rights and objects intended by its enactment. Baker v. Tullock, 106 M 375, 77 P2d 1035 (1938).

Doctrine of Champerty and Maintenance Abolished: The effect of this section and of 25-10-301 is to abolish the common-law doctrine of champerty and maintenance in this state, except insofar as it is retained in modified form in 37-61-408 and 37-61-409, and neither of those sections mentions a contract contingent upon the success of the litigant. In re Maury, 97 M 316, 34 P2d 380 (1934); Haley v. Hollenback, 53 M 494, 165 P 459 (1917).

Probate Proceedings — Fee Dependent Upon Existence of Contract: Generally speaking, the right of an attorney to collect payment for his services depends upon the fact of his employment. Where there was no contract of employment of an attorney in behalf of an estate, who on the contrary was employed by one of several devisees to defend a contest of the will under which he claimed, the devisee, and not the estate, was liable for the attorney's fee. In re Baxter's Estate, 94 M 257, 22 P2d 182 (1933), explained in In re Mickich's Estate, 114 M 258, 136 P2d 223 (1943).

Promissory Note Exclusive of Attorney's Fees — No Discharge: While the client controls the course of litigation, including compromises and settlements, if a settlement is made by the client, it is subject to the attorney's claim for fees, and the parties making the settlement are bound to take notice of such claim. While the obligation to pay attorney's fees in case enforced collection of a promissory note becomes necessary is imposed upon the maker in favor of the holder of the note and not in favor of the attorney, payment of the principal sum exclusive of the attorney's fee during the pendency of an action to enforce payment does not discharge the note in full. Nat'l Park Bank of New York v. Am. Brewing Co., 79 M 542, 257 P 436 (1927).

Contract to Retain Attorney — Allegations in Complaint: Under this section and 25-10-301, an attorney may contract with his client freely as to his compensation before the fiduciary relation commences; but with respect to such a contract made after the relation began, he has the burden of showing that the contract was fair and reasonable and entered into freely by the client and that the latter fully knew and understood its provisions. In the absence of such allegations the complaint is insufficient. Coleman v. Sisson, 71 M 435, 230 P 582 (1924).

Contingent Fee Agreement Not Prohibited: In this state attorneys are free, except insofar as they are prohibited by statute, to enter into such contracts with their clients for compensation as they choose. A contract for a contingent compensation is not prohibited and is valid, though such a contract may require the services of the attorney in finding the necessary witnesses. Haley v. Hollenback, 53 M 494, 165 P 459 (1917).

Assertion of Lien Prior to Judgment: An attorney may, independently of his client, assert his lien prior to judgment or settlement, since the statute declares that the lien attaches in favor of counsel for plaintiff from the commencement of the action. Walsh v. Hoskins, 53 M 198, 162 P 960 (1917), followed in Bekkedahl v. McKittrick, 2002 MT 250, 312 M 156, 58 P3d 175 (2002).

Intention of Client Immaterial: Since an attorney's lien cannot be affected by any settlement between the parties before or after judgment, a finding in an action by an attorney on such a lien, that defendants had no intention to defeat the lien by making final payment under a contract of sale in a bank other than the one fixed therein, was immaterial, as was also an allegation in the complaint that the defendants had such intention. Walsh v. Hoskins, 53 M 198, 162 P 960 (1917).

Amount of Fee — Method of Determination: It is not essential to the existence of the lien that the amount of the attorney fee should be definitely fixed. In an action brought for the enforcement of the lien, the amount due must be alleged in the complaint, either by stating a fixed sum or by averring the reasonable value of the services rendered. Coombe v. Knox, 28 M 202, 72 P 641 (1903).

Security in Client's Possession Subject to Lien: The lien granted by this section operates as an equitable assignment of so much of the judgment as will satisfy the lien and, for the purpose of securing payment, subrogates the attorney to the right of his client to that extent. Any security, therefore, which the client has for the payment of his judgment may be availed of for the benefit of the attorney. Coombe v. Knox, 28 M 202, 72 P 641 (1903).

PRIORITY OF LIENS

Attorney Lien Priority Over Chiropractor Lien: Under 71-3-113, other things being equal, different liens on the same property have priority according to the time of their creation. Relying on 71-3-113, the District Court concluded that, having been filed first, a chiropractor's lien had priority over an attorney's lien. However, 71-3-1114 specifically provides that an attorney's lien has priority over a chiropractor's lien, regardless of the time of the liens' creation, so the District Court's declaration of lien priority was reversible error. Wyant v. Kenda, 2004 MT 348, 324 M 342, 102 P3d 1260 (2004).

Attorneys' Fees Payable — Remainder of Proceeds Subject to Subordinate Lien: Where settlement in personal injury case was paid in three drafts, lien of attorneys representing injured party attached to all three drafts. Since amount of drafts was sufficient to satisfy attorneys' fees in full, previously subordinate hospital lien became the senior outstanding lien against the balance of the settlement proceeds, notwithstanding that attorneys did not actually collect their fees. Attorneys and injured party could not require payment of a pro rata share of attorneys' fees from that portion of settlement proceeds otherwise payable to hospital under its lien rights. Sisters of Charity of Providence of Mont. v. Nichols, 157 M 106, 483 P2d 279 (1971).

Unemployment Compensation Cases: This section being in conflict with 39-51-3104 (now repealed) and 39-51-3105, relating to unemployment compensation claims, the latter sections, being more specific, should control over this section, which is more general, especially where, in light of the services rendered, the attorney's fees could be considered "necessaries" under 39-51-3105. McAlear v. Unemployment Comp. Comm'n, 145 M 458, 405 P2d 219 (1965), followed, with regard to attorney services provided to a wife to obtain orders of protection from an abusive spouse defined as a necessary article, thereby obligating the spouse to pay attorney fees so incurred, in Missoula YWCA v. Bard, 1999 MT 177, 295 M 260, 983 P2d 933, 56 St. Rep. 692 (1999).

Attorney's Fees Subordinate to Costs: An attorney's lien for unpaid compensation is not superior to the adverse party's claim for costs accruing as a part of the litigation on the cause of action. Galbreath v. Armstrong, 121 M 387, 193 P2d 630 (1948).

Attorney's Fees Subordinate to Offset Judgment: While an attorney's lien is subordinate to the rights of the adverse party to offset judgments in the same actions or in actions based on the same actions or in actions based on the same transactions, it is nevertheless superior to any right to offset judgments obtained in wholly independent actions. Galbreath v. Armstrong, 121 M 387, 193 P2d 630 (1948).

EXTENT OF LIEN

Judgment on Second Trial — Deduction of Expenses for First Trial: Where, in second trial of conversion action, plaintiff obtained judgment against defendant, the attorney's lien on the judgment covered only the amount which would be realized on the judgment after costs accruing to defendant on appeal from first trial were deducted. Galbreath v. Armstrong, 121 M 387, 193 P2d 630 (1948).

Lien on Both Cause of Action and Proceeds: The lien awarded by this section to an attorney for services performed does not merely attach to his client's cause of action but as well to the proceeds of such cause of action, i.e., the judgment, successfully enforced, unaffected by any settlement between the parties. Baker v. Tullock, 106 M 375, 77 P2d 1035 (1938).

Purchased Real Estate as "Proceeds" of Judgment: Under the common law, an attorney's lien on a judgment secured for his client is ended when, by the taking over of property or otherwise, the judgment is satisfied. But under this section the lien extends to "the proceeds" of the judgment in the hands of whomsoever they may come. The mere fact that the judgment debtor's property was bought under execution by plaintiff and thus became the proceeds of the judgment obtained by him for his client and took the place thereof did not constitute a waiver of the lien. English v. Jenks, 54 M 295, 169 P 727 (1917).

FORECLOSURE OF LIEN

Foreclosure Complaint — Mortgage Tender Unnecessary Allegation: The complaint in a suit to foreclose an attorneys' lien on property upon which a prior mortgage was outstanding need not allege that tender of payment of the mortgage lien had been made to the mortgagee, since such tender is not a condition precedent to the bringing of the suit. Gilchrist v. Hore, 34 M 443, 87 P 443 (1906).

Action Against Client: An attorney seeking to enforce his lien may bring an independent action against his client or the adverse party, or both. Coombe v. Knox, 28 M 202, 72 P 641 (1903).

Analogy to Mechanics' Lien or Mortgage: An action for the foreclosure of an attorneys' lien is in every sense analogous to the foreclosure of a mechanics' lien (now referred to as a construction lien) or mortgage. Coombe v. Knox, 28 M 202, 72 P 641 (1903).

Proper Parties to Action: An action brought to foreclose an attorneys' lien is an equitable proceeding, and every person interested in the subject matter of the controversy is a proper party thereto. Coombe v. Knox, 28 M 202, 72 P 641 (1903).

NOTICE OF LIEN

Commencement of Action as Notice: Under this section there is no need to file a notice of lien, the commencement of an action or the service of an answer containing a counterclaim being sufficient notice of the lien of the attorney. Galbreath v. Armstrong, 121 M 387, 193 P2d 630 (1948).

Attorney Not Required to Give Notice: This section is itself notice to the world of the lien, and hence the attorney is not required to give notice. Walsh v. Hoskins, 53 M 198, 162 P 960 (1917).

Control of Litigation — Notice of Lien: Though, as between attorney and client, the latter controls the course of litigation, including its settlement, the parties making the settlement, as well as their assignees, are chargeable with notice of the former's statutory lien. Walsh v. Hoskins, 53 M 198, 162 P 960 (1917).

37-61-421. Attorney's or litigant's liability for excess costs.

Case Notes

Sanctions Against Lawyer and Client — Procedural Concerns Not Substantial: The plaintiff sued the defendants over their attempt to collect a dental bill. The District Court ultimately granted summary judgment against the plaintiff and sanctioned her and her counsel for discovery abuses, vexatious litigation, misrepresentations, and failure to attend a pretrial conference. On appeal of the sanctions, the plaintiff's counsel argued that the District Court did not follow sanction motion procedures outlined in Rule 11, M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20). While the Supreme Court reversed some of the sanctions applying to vexatious litigation, it affirmed other sanctions, holding that the District Court was justified in awarding some of the sanctions under Rule 61, M.R.Civ.P., as the procedural error did not affect any party's substantial rights. Serrania v. LPH, Inc., 2015 MT 113, 379 Mont. 17, 347 P.3d 1237.

Vexatious Litigant — Costs on Appeal Awarded to Former Wife: The former husband owed his former wife more than $100,000 pursuant to a court-ordered distribution of the parties' marital estate. During an earlier appeal to the Supreme Court, the court had warned the husband that it would not tolerate any further efforts on his part to delay her receipt of the marital estate as set forth in the order. After the husband again appealed the distribution, the wife asked the Supreme Court to sanction him as a vexatious litigant, which it did, ordering him to pay her attorney fees for the appeal as to be determined by the District Court and prohibiting him from filing future appeals or civil actions against the wife without advance court approval. In re Marriage of Guill, 2014 MT 316, 377 Mont. 216, 339 P.3d 81.

Award of Attorney Fees Based on Spouse's Conduct in Dissolution Case Proper: In a dissolution proceeding, the District Court appropriately awarded attorney fees to the wife under 40-4-110 and this section when the husband frustrated the proceedings by failing to adhere to stipulations and respond to requests for discovery. In re Marriage of Lewton, 2012 MT 114, 365 Mont. 152, 281 P.3d 181.

Frivolous Lawsuit Filed by Developer Over Board of Adjustment Decision to Revoke Building Permit — Attorney Fees to Neighbors Challenging Issuance of Work Permit Granted — Zoning Regulations Not Unconstitutionally Vague: The plaintiff applied for a building permit, which was denied because the proposed structure was too large. Five months later, he applied for a different permit, which was issued. His neighbors appealed the permit after they learned the construction was not intended as an accessory to an existing unit as required. The city, through the Board of Adjustment, issued a stop-work order, and the building permit was revoked. The plaintiff then filed suit against the city and the two neighbors who appealed the permit. The District Court dismissed the suit against the neighbors and granted their motion for $25,000 in attorney fees because it found the plaintiff's case against them to be utterly frivolous. The District Court also rejected the plaintiff's argument that the zoning rules were unconstitutionally vague, concluding that a person of ordinary understanding could comprehend the rules. On appeal, the Supreme Court agreed with the District Court's analysis and affirmed. DeVoe v. Missoula, 2012 MT 72, 364 Mont. 375, 274 P.3d 752.

Fees and Costs Denied Absent Showing of Unreasonable Conduct by Counsel: Plaintiff asserted that defense counsel engaged in numerous acts of unreasonable conduct, including submission of false affidavits. Although the affidavits were not introduced at trial, plaintiff contended that counsel's actions needlessly multiplied court proceedings, justifying an award of costs and fees to plaintiff. The District Court denied the award, and on appeal the Supreme Court found no abuse of District Court discretion. The District Court determined that the proceedings were well within the bounds of normal and usual adversarial proceedings. Absent a showing by plaintiff that the alleged unreasonable conduct multiplied proceedings in a vexatious or unreasonable manner or that the affidavits were presented in bad faith or for purposes of delay, denial of fees and costs was affirmed. Larchick v. Diocese of Gt. Falls-Billings, 2009 MT 175, 350 M 538, 208 P3d 836 (2009).

Dual Representation of Two Adverse Clients Violative of Rules of Professional Conduct — Censure and Costs Appropriate: Johnson's firm agreed to represent a woman in a wrongful death action and, a few months later, determined that a second client was a potentially responsible party and filed a complaint against the second client while still representing that client on other matters. The Commission on Practice concluded that Johnson violated the Rules of Professional Conduct by undertaking dual representation of two directly adverse clients and recommended Johnson's public censure and required Johnson to pay a pro rata share of costs. Johnson appealed, asserting: (1) a reasonable belief that dual representation would not adversely affect the relationship with the second client; (2) no intentional or negligent violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct; (3) an absence of selfish or dishonest motive; (4) that both clients actively sought representation from Johnson's firm; (5) the desire to serve the needs of both clients; (6) a reputation for good character and high competence as an attorney, including practicing law for over 30 years without any prior Commission disciplinary record; and (7) a delay in bringing and processing disciplinary proceedings. The Supreme Court affirmed. It was untenable for Johnson to contend that no conflict of interest existed in asserting on the woman's behalf that the second client negligently caused the death of the woman's husband. Johnson also failed to obtain the informed consent of the second client regarding representation of the woman. The court also noted that nothing in the Rules of Professional Conduct implies that a lawyer has to knowingly violate the rules to be subject to discipline. After considering the mitigating factors, the court agreed that censure and payment of costs were appropriate. In re Johnson, 2004 MT 6, 319 M 188, 84 P3d 637 (2004), followed in In re Wenz, 2004 MT 7, 319 M 200, 87 P3d 376 (2004), and In re Marra, 2004 MT 8, 319 M 213, 87 P3d 384 (2004).

Sanctions Appropriate for Appeal Without Merit or Legal Support: Following affirmation of all underlying legal issues in this case in Lewistown Propane Co. v. Moncur, 2002 MT 349, 313 M 368, 61 P3d 780 (2002), defendants filed another appeal seeking a determination of whether the District Court improperly denied their motion seeking relief from judgment. Following examination of the record, the Supreme Court concluded that defendants' brief was less an appeal to revise a judgment based on a supportable legal analysis and precedent than it was a vexatious personal attack on the presiding District Court Judge, which unreasonably lengthened the proceedings, resulted in unnecessary costs to the parties, and unnecessarily consumed court time. Therefore, sanctions were warranted and were ordered to be paid by defendants' attorney pursuant to former Rule 32, M.R.App.P. (now superseded), and this section. Lewistown Propane Co. v. Moncur, 2003 MT 368, 319 M 105, 82 P3d 896 (2003).

Sanctions Appropriate in Easement Case When Aerial Photographs Established Long-Time Presence of Road: Aerial photographs clearly showed that a road existed in exactly the same location since 1979, yet defendant proceeded with an easement case, contending that the road did not exist in 1985. The District Court did not abuse its discretion when it assessed fees and costs against defendant because the contention was not well grounded in fact and defendant's arguments unreasonably and vexatiously multiplied the proceedings. Ponderosa Pines Ranch, Inc. v. Hevner, 2002 MT 184, 311 M 82, 53 P3d 381 (2002).

Award of Attorney Fees Based on Party's Deception, Contradiction, and Fraud and Party's Attorney's Needless Protraction of Litigation: The appellant in a probate and guardianship case was found to have employed deception, contradiction, and fraud, resulting in the expenditure of considerable time, effort, and expense in the attempt to arrive at a reasonable understanding of the condition of the guardianship estate and the ownership of estate property. The appellant's attorney was found to have taken every opportunity to obstruct and avoid a resolution of the issues by filing questionable motions for dismissal and sanctions, taking positions that were not supported by law or facts, and failing to mediate in good faith, thereby protracting the litigation at considerable expense to the respondents. The District Court ordered appellant to pay 80% of the respondents' attorney fees and costs and ordered appellant's attorney to pay the remaining 20%. There was substantial evidence in the record to support the award, which the Supreme Court affirmed. The court declined to address the reasonableness of the award because appellant did not object to the bill of expenses when given the opportunity to challenge the amount, instead challenging the reasonableness of the award for the first time on appeal. In re Estate of McDermott, 2002 MT 164, 310 M 435, 51 P3d 486 (2002).

Attorney Fees Not Awarded Absent Evidence of Multiplication of Proceedings: Kloss sought attorney fees in relation to a claim regarding the arbitration clause in a securities brokerage contract. The District Court examined the entire file, including prior transcripts and court orders, and concluded that further evidence of the fee issue was unnecessary and that attorney fees were not owing. Kloss appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The District Court correctly concluded that defendant did not unreasonably or vexatiously multiply the proceedings, which is a necessary element of an award of attorney fees under this section. Kloss v. Edward D. Jones & Co., 2002 MT 129, 310 M 123, 54 P3d 1 (2002).

Unreasonable and Vexatious Multiplication of Court Proceedings — Sanctions Proper: First Interstate Bank was Bayers' court-appointed conservator. McGimpsey claimed to be Bayers' private attorney and began expressing an interest in matters involving Bayers' estate, at which point the conservator became concerned about the extent of McGimpsey's involvement in Bayers' affairs and requested in writing copies of any legal documents that McGimpsey had that may have been executed by Bayers. McGimpsey ignored the request. The conservator moved in District Court to compel production of the requested information and included a request for attorney fees necessitated by the motion. McGimpsey responded with a letter threatening the conservator's counsel with sanctions and listing complaints and criticisms of the conservator's handling of Bayers' estate. McGimpsey then moved to strike scandalous, immaterial, and irrelevant content in the conservator's motion and brief, but the motion was denied. The court instead granted the conservator's motion to compel and for attorney fees. McGimpsey filed another motion to alter or amend the order granting attorney fees. That motion was also denied, and the court ordered a hearing on the amount of sanctions to be awarded unless the parties agreed to the amount of attorney fees being assessed. The conservator agreed to the court's suggestion, but McGimpsey did not, so a hearing on the amount of fees was scheduled. McGimpsey filed another motion to vacate the hearing and to establish a discovery schedule regarding attorney fees. That motion was denied at the beginning of the hearing, and the conservator's counsel testified as to reasonable attorney fees incurred because of McGimpsey's conduct. The court issued an order requiring McGimpsey to pay Bayers' estate $1,500 in attorney fees pursuant to this section, but McGimpsey filed another motion to alter or amend the order. That motion was also denied, and McGimpsey appealed to the Supreme Court, arguing that in a civil action such as this, all discovery and discovery disputes, including sanctions, should be governed by the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure and not by this section. Former Rules 34 and 37, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), anticipate the existence of a dispute between opposing parties, but the underlying conservatorship proceeding in this case was not an adversarial proceeding. Formal discovery proceedings were not required for the conservator to obtain documents considered relevant to Bayers' estate. McGimpsey could have provided a straightforward answer as to whether he had any of the requested documents, but instead he chose to force a needless multiplication of proceedings and the pointless involvement of the District Court in the dispute. The court's conclusion that McGimpsey unreasonably and vexatiously prolonged the litigation was not in error. Because McGimpsey continued to force the matter to the Supreme Court, he was also held responsible under 37-61-421 for the conservator's expenses and attorney fees incurred in the appeal. In re Estate of Bayers, 2001 MT 49, 304 M 296, 21 P3d 3 (2001).

Counsel's Statements Not Considered Blatant Disregard of Motion In Limine — No Sanctions Assessed: Prior to trial, the District Court granted Renville's motion in limine to exclude from evidence hearsay statements in Renville's medical records made by Renville's mother, as well as statements from the records regarding welfare. However, during opening statements and during closing arguments, defense counsel referenced both. Renville requested a new trial and sanctions for counsel's disregard of the pretrial order and comments, but the motion was denied. On appeal, the Supreme Court declined to impose sanctions, finding that although counsel's statements appeared to violate the order in limine, they did not demonstrate a blatant disregard of the order and that, in light of other evidence, they did not unreasonably and vexatiously multiply the proceedings. Renville v. Taylor, 2000 MT 217, 301 M 99, 7 P3d 400, 57 St. Rep. 864 (2000).

Failure of Litigant to Provide Discovery and to Appear at Trial: Because husband failed to appear on the first hearing date and because he failed to provide the court and his wife with requested discovery material, the court properly ordered him to pay his wife's attorney fees and costs for the trial. His conduct was unreasonable and vexatious and multiplied the litigation by necessitating a second hearing. In re Marriage of Rager, 263 M 361, 868 P2d 625, 51 St. Rep. 91 (1994).

Attempt to Amend Complaint to Reach Insurance Coverage — Sanctions Unwarranted: The District Court assessed costs and attorney fees against defendant's attorneys who had filed an amended complaint in an attempt to present a new theory of negligence that would be covered by insurance. Even though the amended complaint did not present new issues or circumvent the insurance policy exclusions, it was not unreasonable or vexatious to attempt to amend the complaint in a way that would reach insurance coverage. Therefore, in this case, the imposition of sanctions constituted reversible error. Sheffield Ins. Co. v. Lighthouse Properties, Inc., 252 M 321, 828 P2d 1369, 49 St. Rep. 274 (1992).

Contingent Attorney Fees Recoverable: Defendant contended that an award of attorney fees was improper under this section because plaintiffs were represented on a contingent fee basis. The Supreme Court disagreed, finding that the liability for attorney fees did not arise from a fee contract between plaintiffs and their attorneys but from the liability based on the unnecessary multiplication of proceedings imposed by this section. Tigart v. Thompson, 244 M 156, 796 P2d 582, 47 St. Rep. 1532 (1990), followed in Rocky Mtn. Enterprises, Inc. v. Pierce Flooring, 286 M 282, 951 P2d 1326, 54 St. Rep. 1410 (1997).

Insurance Company as "Party" — Liability for Costs: Defendant contended that an award of attorney fees and costs under this section was improper because an insurance company was not a party within the meaning of this section and therefore could not be held responsible for attorney fees and costs. The Supreme Court affirmed the award, stating that if an insurance company may be held liable for the action of its attorney, as in Safeco Ins. Co. v. Ellinghouse, 223 M 239, 725 P2d 217 (1986), it is axiomatic that the insurer may be held responsible for costs, expenses, and attorney fees when the insurer unreasonably and vexatiously multiplies the proceedings in any case. Tigart v. Thompson, 244 M 156, 796 P2d 582, 47 St. Rep. 1532 (1990).

Withholding of Major Evidence and Violation of Principle of Pretrial Discovery — Costs Properly Awarded: Defendant contended that an award of attorney fees and costs under this section was improper because no sanctions were imposed by the trial court. The Supreme Court affirmed the award, noting that defendant's withholding of a major item of evidence prevented plaintiffs from receiving a fair trial and created unfair surprise and that the insurance company's tactic of concealing defendant's statements was at odds with the letter and spirit of pretrial discovery. The withholding was held to be unreasonable and vexatious, and the award of fees and costs was within the trial court's discretion. Tigart v. Thompson, 244 M 156, 796 P2d 582, 47 St. Rep. 1532 (1990).

Issue of Fees and Costs Not in Form of Final Order — Duty of Parties to Move for Dismissal: The District Court awarded certain fees and costs to plaintiffs pursuant to this section. However, the issue was not in the form of a final order, and thus the appeal was premature. There must be a final judgment from which an appeal may be taken before the Supreme Court is vested with jurisdiction. It is the duty of the attorneys involved in an appeal to bring the issue to the attention of the court. Tigart v. Thompson, 237 M 468, 774 P2d 401, 46 St. Rep. 974 (1989).

Sanctions Against Attorney Appropriate: Where an attorney was responsible for a retrial, attempted to cause a second mistrial, and blatantly disregarded court rulings throughout trial, sanctions were appropriate under this section. Kuhnke v. Fisher, 227 M 62, 740 P2d 625, 44 St. Rep. 895 (1987).

Chapter Case Notes

No Negligence by Architect if Professional Information Not Communicated in Absence of Contract: A tennis club filed a negligence and breach of contract action against a contractor who constructed a tennis facility for the club. The contractor in turn filed a third-party negligence action against the architect who had provided preliminary design parameters and building specifications for the facility. The District Court summarily dismissed the third-party claim, and the contractor appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Applying Jim's Excavating Serv., Inc. v. HKM Associates, 265 M 494, 878 P2d 248 (1994), and Restatement (Second) of Torts 552 (1976), the court held that the architect owed no duty of care to the contractor because the contractor had no contract for the architect's services and failed to prove that the architect communicated professional information with the intention that the information be relied upon by the contractor. Absent a duty of care, there was no breach, so the third-party action failed as a matter of law, and summary judgment was proper. Glacier Tennis Club at the Summit, LLC v. Treweek Constr. Co., Inc., 2004 MT 70, 320 M 351, 87 P3d 431 (2004).

Architects' Handbook as Standard of Duty — Violation Not Negligence Per Se: Standards set out in the Architects' Handbook of Professional Practice were considered as evidence of a duty on the part of architects; however, violation of the standards did not constitute negligence per se. Taylor, Thon, Thompson & Peterson v. Cannaday, 230 M 151, 749 P2d 63, 45 St. Rep. 102 (1988).

Retention of Building Materials by Architects Not Violative of Professional Conduct or Consumer Protection Act: Architects who retained property and building materials from a building site after defendant failed to make contractual payments did not violate standards of professional conduct or commit unfair practices under the Montana Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act of 1973. Taylor, Thon, Thompson & Peterson v. Cannaday, 230 M 151, 749 P2d 63, 45

Architect Liable for Inadequate Specifications: There was sufficient evidence presented to the District Court to support its findings that the architect's water system specifications for a new school building were inadequate. A contractor is not responsible for errors or defects in the plans and is not liable, absent negligence on his part, when the owner's plans and specifications prove defective. Ace Plumbing & Heating, Inc. v. School District, 204 M 81, 662 P2d 1327, 40 St. Rep. 678 (1983). St. Rep. 102 (1988).

Attorney General's Opinions

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 490, L. 1983, which enacted this section, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it grants the Board of Architects the authority to adopt rules implementing Title 37, Chapter 65.

Currently, the chapter of state statutes governing the licensing of architects contains no general grant of rulemaking authority such as those available to most other state agencies and licensing boards. The Board of Architects must therefore rely on the grants of rulemaking authority applicable to all boards contained in 37-1-131 which allows only the adoption of rules "governing licensing, certification, registration, and conduct of" architects, upon 37-1-136 allowing the board to adopt rules relating to disciplinary action, and upon 2-4-201 requiring every agency to adopt procedural rules. Thus, the board has no authority to adopt rules unauthorized by those sections of law. HB 490 grants the board general rulemaking authority to adopt any rule "necessary" to implement all previously existing statutes contained in Title 37, Chapter 65. Any such rules must be adopted under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act."

Attorney General's Opinions

Self-Government Powers — Professional Licensing — Conflict With State Statutes: The city of Helena, operating under a home rule charter, passed an ordinance requiring a license fee of all city businesses. State statutes that prohibit municipalities from imposing license fees on certain professions did not apply because the statutes were not made specifically applicable to self-government units. Home rule governments have all powers not specifically denied by the Montana Constitution, law, or charter. 39 A.G. Op. 60 (1982).

The experience requirements of 37-67-306 may be met with experience gained after initial licensure that indicates to the board that the applicant is competent to practice engineering"; inserted last sentence concerning initial licensure in another state; and made minor changes in style. Part of Section Not Codified: Section 66-2357(i)(a)(v), R.C.M. 1947, a temporary provision providing for licensure of persons with 8 or more years experience in engineering work, has not been codified in the MCA. However, the provision has not been repealed and is still valid law. Citation may be made to sec. 5, Ch. 366, L. 1975.

1979 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 390 (Ch. 546, L. 1979) provided in part: "Section 3 defines and, together with other sections, provides for regulation of a new classification of license, the residential electrician's license. Rules relating to the residential license should cover all areas now covered by board rules for journeyman and master electricians. The rules should set forth the basic content and the procedures and passing examination for the residential license. The examination should be tailored to meet the requirements for work as a residential electrician.

When appropriate and in conformance with law, the board may amend existing rules to make them applicable to the residential license."

Section 3 appears to refer to 37-68-102, as amended by Ch. 546. Section 37-68-201 was not amended by Ch. 546.

Title 24, chapter 141, subchapter 5, ARM Licensing.

Part Case Notes

Failure to Conform With Literal Language of Administrative Rule Not Illegal and Therefore Not Justification for Breach of Contract: Lewis subcontracted to do the electrical work on five units being built by Huyser. In the first four units, some of the rough-in wiring was covered, but the electrical inspector did not require that all the wiring be visible even though the literal language of the administrative rule indicated that it should be. On the fifth unit, shelving had been installed before the inspection. Lewis insisted that it all be taken down, claiming that he could lose his license if it was not. Huyser had some of the shelving removed, exposing some of the rough-in wiring. Lewis refused to complete the work, and Huyser hired another electrician to complete the job. Lewis sued for payment, and Huyser counterclaimed. The lower court found for Huyser on the basis that the inspector had informed Lewis that he would not lose his license and that the inspector would accept part of the rough-in wiring being exposed. The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the administrative rule should be reasonably interpreted to allow for waiver by the inspector of the requirement that all rough-in wiring be exposed. The Supreme Court further held that violation of the rule was not a statutory ground for losing an electrical license. The rule having been waived, the contract was not contrary to the policy of express law so that Lewis had a good faith duty to perform the remainder of the contract. Lewis v. Huyser, 264 M 141, 870 P2d 95, 51 St. Rep. 192 (1994).

WHEREAS, licensing boards collect and accumulate sufficient funds from the fees charged to licensees to meet the cost of compliance and enforcement personnel, but these same boards often lack the authority to expend the funds that they collect; and

WHEREAS, the delayed processing and the accumulating complaint backlog have a deleterious effect on the productivity and reputation of the licensees; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that certain licensing boards need to be granted temporary spending authority to address the delayed processing and accumulated complaint backlog; and

The state regulatory system was a valid exercise of police power over a lawful business. Billings Assoc. Plumbing, Heating & Cooling Contractors v. Attorney General's Opinions

Interpretation of Plumber Licensing Statutes by Board of Plumbers — Licensing Authority Restricted by Statute — Intention of Legislature — Penalty Statute Inapplicable: The Board of Plumbers has the legal authority to interpret this chapter, and the interpretation by the Board must be given deference unless it is incorrect. In interpreting the plumbing licensing statutes, the intent of the Legislature must be determined, and if that intent can be understood from a plain reading of the statutes, there is no need to look further. The statutes as well as the statutory history clearly indicated that a plumber's license is required only for a person who is: (1) working in the field of plumbing in an incorporated city or town; (2) working in the field of plumbing in an area served by a public water supply or sewer system; or (3) working in the field of plumbing and connects or disconnects plumbing to or from a public water supply or sewer system, unless an exemption is granted. There is no penalty applicable to an unlicensed person for whom a license is not required by statute. 47 A.G. Op. 21 (1998).

License Requirements for Factory Workers Installing Plumbing in Modular Homes: The licensing requirement for plumbing is codified in 37-69-301. The definition of "field of plumbing" in 37-69-101 covers the work done at the factory. If the modular home in question is to be finally located "in any incorporated city, town, or in any other area served by a public water supply or a public sewer system in this state", another licensing requirement factor is met. The third factor leading to the requirement of a plumbing license is work as either a master plumber or as a journeyman plumber, as defined in 37-69-101, which is interpreted as doing the tasks one would be authorized to perform if he were licensed. Therefore, Montana factory workers who install, at the factory, plumbing in modular homes which are to be located "in any incorporated city, town, or in any other area served by a public water supply or a public sewer system in this state" must be licensed as plumbers under Title 37, ch. 69. 38 A.G. Interpretation of Plumber Licensing Statutes by Board of Plumbers — Licensing Authority Restricted by Statute — Intention of Legislature — Penalty Statute Inapplicable: The Board of Plumbers has the legal authority to interpret this chapter, and the interpretation by the Board must be given deference unless it is incorrect. In interpreting the plumbing licensing statutes, the intent of the Legislature must be determined, and if that intent can be understood from a plain reading of the statutes, there is no need to look further. The statutes as well as the statutory history clearly indicated that a plumber's license is required only for a person who is: (1) working in the field of plumbing in an incorporated city or town; (2) working in the field of plumbing in an area served by a public water supply or sewer system; or (3) working in the field of plumbing and connects or disconnects plumbing to or from a public water supply or sewer system, unless an exemption is granted. There is no penalty applicable to an unlicensed person for whom a license is not required by statute. 47 A.G. Op. 21 (1998).

Public Utility Contractor Not to Install Certain Service Lines in Billings Unless Licensed by State as Plumber — City Required to Check License Qualifications:

In clarifying 44 A.G. Op. 12, the Attorney General noted that work done on a public water supply or public sewer system that does not include work falling within the statutory distances for plumbing or drainage systems does not require a state-issued plumber's license. Therefore, the city of Billings may not allow public utility contractors to install water service lines that extend from the public water main to a point within the walls of the private property or within 20 feet from any foundation wall of the premises, whichever distance is shorter as measured from the foundation wall, or wastewater service lines that extend from the public sewer main to a point within 2 feet from any foundation wall of the premises, unless the contractor also has a plumber's license issued by the state. 44 A.G. Op. 39 (1992).

The city of Billings may not allow public utility contractors to install water and wastewater service lines that extend from the public water or sewer main to a point within the walls of the private property or within 20 feet from any foundation wall of the private residence unless the contractor also has a plumber's license issued by the state. The city is required to determine whether a person applying for a plumbing permit pursuant to the Uniform Plumbing Code is licensed by the state as a plumber if the type of work described in the permit requires licensure as a requisite to performance. 44 A.G. Op. 12 (1991).

License Requirements for Factory Workers Installing Plumbing in Modular Homes: The licensing requirement for plumbing is codified in 37-69-301. The definition of "field of plumbing" in 37-69-101 covers the work done at the factory. If the modular home in question is to be finally located "in any incorporated city, town, or in any other area served by a public water supply or a public sewer system in this state", another licensing requirement factor is met. The third factor leading to the requirement of a plumbing license is work as either a master plumber or as a journeyman plumber, as defined in 37-69-101, which is interpreted as doing the tasks one would be authorized to perform if he were licensed. Therefore, Montana factory workers who install, at the factory, plumbing in modular homes which are to be located "in any incorporated city, town, or in any other area served by a public water supply or a public sewer system in this state" must be licensed as plumbers under Title 37, ch. 69. 38 A.G. Op. 60 (1980). See also 47 A.G. Op. 21 (1998).

Such change was made in this section.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 402, L. 1985, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it requires the adoption of rules by the workers' compensation division of the department of labor and industry.

The legislature intends that the division adopt only those rules required by sections 9 [37-72-201] and 10 [37-72-202] of this bill.

The rules adopted by the division to implement section 3 [37-72-302] should require the submission of all training information on an affidavit on which the applicant must either list the name, place, and dates of attendance of a training school approved by the division and published in its list of approved schools or give sufficient information to allow the division to judge the content and quality of the program.

Because of the highly dangerous nature of the business regulated by this legislation, the legislature intends that all persons, except those already holding licenses and qualifying under the provisions of section 13 [not codified], must comply with section 2(2)(a) through (2)(d) [37-72-301(2)(a) through (2)(d)], whether applying for an initial license by examination, reexamination under section 4(3) [37-72-303(3), now repealed], or licensure by other jurisdictions under section 6 [37-72-305]. Fees for reexamination within 2 years of the initial examination should be less than fees for the initial examination because no training and experience information need be reviewed and verified.

In developing rules on the use of explosives under sections 9 [37-72-201] and 10 [37-72-202], it is intended that the division pay particular attention to the publication entitled "Suggested Code of Regulations", published by the institute of makers of explosives (IME), in addition to any industry recommendations or publications by other states, and that the division accept in satisfaction of the provisions of section 3 [37-72-302] successful completion of training programs conducted by IME and explosives manufacturers such as Du Pont and Atlas and other companies that have developed comprehensive training programs for the handling and use of explosives.

Rules adopted under section 10(5) [37-72-202(5)] are intended to be only such procedural rules as the division needs to receive applications, act on variance requests, conduct revocation hearings, and so forth."
